Planing Mills

There are many planing mills which turn out good work—in their line—but as a rule they know nothing of greenhouse construction. * * We make it a special study—in fact we have manufactured nothing but greenhouse material for years and feel that we know something about it. Many of the large growers claim that we know all about it. * * * * * If you have never used our material let us tell you about it—write today. Try it on your next house.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN CHANGE AND PROGRESS

Change simply means changing—it may be for the better or for worse, but progress means the abandoning of something good for something better.

Every year your competition is keener, every year you must turn out more and better plants or else reduce the cost of those you do grow. The man who persists in erecting greenhouses that are not right up to the top notch in improvements—just because they are a bit cheaper at the start—finds himself struggling to keep apace with the fellow who has the lighter house—the one freer from repairs.

Every grower of course knows that the more light the more money made—that repair costs eat deep into the profits—and still right on the face of it all, some will buy “back number” materials and deceive themselves by thinking a little “extra hustling” will make up for the start the other fellow with the other house has over him,

BOSTON BRANCH: 819 TREMONT BUILDING

Why don't such men carry their argument just a bit farther and see that the same extra hustling the first year would pay for the slight additional cost of an up-to-date plant factory.

THE GLADIOLUS.

Culture and Care of Cut Spikes.

The request for brief cultural instructions being frequently made, I present the following suggestions and experiences for selection and application to diverse local conditions:

The gladiolus is not exacting in its demands upon the soil. I have grown it on the block of land yearly for over fifteen years, the only fertilizer used being well-rotted stable manure and hard wood ashes applied before ploughing in the autumn. No fertilizers are needed on strong new soils as a rule.

Profuse watering at intervals is desirable where local peculiarities of soil and limited rainfall prevail during the season of active plant growth and blooming. A brief period of ripening before the latter season is beneficial, if not too severe, as this hardens the plant tissues and assures flowers and spikes of increased durability and quality. Excessively succulent growth is not beneficial to plant, flower or corm.

For best results, plant in full exposure to the sun, in locations having a free circulation of air; avoid crowding by other plants or overshadowing by trees, buildings or hedges. Plant from two to four inches deep, according to the size of the corms,—matured corms never less than four inches,—two to four inches apart in double rows, which may be made as close as twelve inches in beds or borders. The greatest satisfaction is secured by growing several thousand for daily cutting as the first flowers open.

Dig the corms before the ground freezes, cut off the stalk close to the corm and store in a cool, dry place, in baskets or shallow boxes. The old corm may be removed a few weeks later when convenient. It is not necessary to wait until the plant dies down before harvesting the corms, as a few weeks after blooming is sufficient to mature both for this purpose.

As our whole interest centers in the beautiful flowers of the gladiolus,—which for beauty and diversity in the whole range of color have no equals in horticulture, and their durability when cut for table and other decorative purposes is unexcelled in their season:—Here, it is well to be fully informed as to the treatment that will insure the best results.

Cut the spike when the first flower opens and place in water without overcrowding. Remove the terminal buds soon, as this checks stalk development and throws the strength into the larger and earlier maturing flowers. The end of the stock should be shortened and the water renewed daily with frequent cleansing of the vases. In shortening the stalk cut diagonally, to insure free absorption of water by the spike, without the contamination and obstruction, caused by sediment, if cut at a right angle.

The fact that blooming the spikes in the shade of room or piazza modifies the field colors, from bright shades and tints to delicate flushes and shadings, and also reduces the latter types to the faintest tinge of color or white, is well known to experienced growers.

The advent of my new hybrids producing the most intense and deep shades of violet, purple, crimson and scarlet, hitherto unknown, as well as new yellows and other bright colors, makes it desirable that these brilliant combinations be preserved when the spikes are cut for decorative purposes.

.....THE..... EASTER TRADE

Reports as to Easter trade speak of a considerable increase in the volume of business done in all parts of the country. There is, however, a divergence in the matter of the way stock cleaned out. Practically everywhere the supplies of stock available were greater than was ever known before. The result was that prices could not be advanced so much as at some previous Easters and in several instances there are reports of larger supplies than could be moved without recourse to cheap sales. This applies to both cut flowers and blooming plants and it is probable that, while the total of sales increased, there was everywhere much more stock to contribute to this result and the average price of stock in all departments was rather less than usual, and in some localities considerably less than had been expected.

In the cut flower department roses were in most places in shortest supply and brought more nearly normal Easter values. Bulbous stock, if cut, was not readily salable in the face of adequate supplies of other flowers. In many markets carnations were very abundant and sold below usual Easter values, white going especially slow. The output of Rhinebeck violets was greater than ever and more widely scattered, but the growers took in little, if any, more money than a year ago.

A notable feature was the increase in plant stocks. Weather conditions operated to reduce supplies in certain lines, notably azaleas, but on the other hand there was a great increase in the quantities of rambler roses, spiræas, etc., prepared for the occasion. Everybody had Crimson Ramblers this year, and not all were sold. Easter lilies were in many cases unlovely specimens. The good stock sold out clean, but the weak, short, misshapen plants were left.

Taken altogether, it may be said that Easter marked another advance of trade records. It is but natural that it should be so. The business is broadening every day and we should expect steadily to increase our sales and our profits; indeed, we must do so if the great increase in glass is to be justified.

To ensure this most desirable result, place the vases of these highly colored types in the early morning sun for an hour or two daily, preferably after renovation and renewal of the water. This practice will also enable the retention and normal presentation of the original delicate tints and shadings referred to in the preceding paragraph, if so desired.

As it takes about three days after cutting to bring the spikes into strong blooming condition, this should be allowed for in advance of the date of intended use. The spikes can be shipped a thousand miles by standing them on end in suitable baskets or boxes. On arrival, cut off the end of the stalk, and remove the terminal buds before placing in water; they will then revive quickly and with proper care give pleasure for a week or more.

One of the causes of the popularity of the gladiolus as a decorative flower, is the fact that it has no perfume, as there are few flowers used for this purpose that are not distasteful to some one,—particularly in closed rooms,—either from personal preference or painful association.

Where the pollen proves irritating to the tissues of the respiratory organs, as in the case of hay-fever subjects, the anthers may be easily pinched out during the daily renovation, when the faded florets are also removed. This removal of the anthers is desirable in the highly colored types referred to, where the shed pollen dulls the brilliancy of the petals on which it may fall. H. H. GROFF.

THE APOTHEOSIS OF EASTER.

Easter is the Great Day in the floral calendar. It has been such for many years, and it is annually occupying more and more of the attention of the trade for many weeks. Coming at the opening of spring, when everyone welcomes flowers in whatever form, it is but natural that the wide-awake florist should make the fullest possible use of the opportunities which the Easter festival presents. But it should be borne in mind that the one week of Easter business is not capable of supporting an establishment for half a year.

There is a disposition on the part of some producers to expect the Christmas and Easter holidays to yield a harvest which will render inconsequential the returns at other times. With the great increase in glass which has recently taken place, especially in the middle west, the markets are so readily supplied that even the greatly increased demand at Easter is cared for without difficulty. Any effort at accumulating stock only results in glutting the market and breaking prices. Any attempt to advance values beyond those in keeping with the quality and freshness of the stock immediately turns trade into other channels. The man who places Easter on a pedestal and looks to nothing else finds himself minus his profit. Steady crops for everyday markets are far more profitable than great supplies of over-ripe flowers accumulated for Easter at the expense of weeks both preceding and following.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Shift the Spring Stock.

It was most pleasant to walk into the greenhouses on Monday morning at 9 a. m. and notice that what last week was a brilliant bench of bloom is changed to a bare bench, ready for other crops—and right welcome are these bare benches.

The zonal geraniums you shifted into 4-inch pots three or four weeks ago will be much in need of spacing. When doing this is the time to scatter some spent hops, decayed leaves or some such material between the pots. We will hardly call it plunging, but if it is only two inches deep it will save much evaporation and drying out. Its advantages are many and as for expense of time and labor you will more than save that by the less frequent watering the plants will need. They will not burn with the hot sun of May and will need no shading. The plants will be of much better quality and better fitted to go outdoors in the sun and wind.

Seedling annuals, particularly asters, will need to be transplanted from the seed pans or flats into other flats, one inch apart, and when doing this do not forget to insert the little plants down to the seed leaf in the new soil. Be sure to firm the soil around their roots, not so much at the surface, but deep down where the roots are.

The cannas which you started in flats are now five or six inches high. They must be lifted and potted at once. A 4-inch pot is large enough to make a good bedding plant. Be sure to give them a light, bright bench. A canna grown in a warm, shaded house is in poor order to plant in a flower garden.

The big Caladium esculentum was also started in flats three weeks ago and is already wanting a 5-inch pot. Put these also in the fullest light. If grown soft they are blown to pieces by the first big wind and look like the battle-scarred flags seen in a parade of the G. A. R.

The tuberous begonias intended for bedding will now want potting into 4-inch pots and the sooner you get them into a mild hotbed the better.

If you are in the bedding plant business there will be no end of things which want their last shift and the next two weeks will be a busy time.

Starting Poinsettias.

You can take from beneath the bench your old plants of poinsettia that have been resting there since New Year's perfectly dry. Shake off all the old soil, shorten back the stem only when or where it is still green or decayed and repot in a size smaller. Start growing in a temperature of 60 degrees, with frequent syringings. They will soon start and break into new growth, which will give you plenty of material for cuttings. Although this is the right time to start, yet there is plenty of time for cuttings, for the very early struck cuttings become quite tall and often much pot-bound and then lose their foliage. Those propagated in July make fine plants, either for pots or planting out for cutting, and as late as August and even September will do well for pans. We found at last Christmas that the single plant in a 5-inch or 6-inch pot is no longer the thing. Nearly everyone wanted a pan with five to eight plants. I don't blame them.

Care of Left-over Plants.

There is very little left-over stock that is worth bothering about. Azaleas are an exception. Pick off all flowers, especially old seed pods, and put them in a temperature of 55 degrees to 60 degrees and there they will make a good growth until it is time to plunge them outdoors in early June.

Any hard-wooded plants, like the bottlebrush or Acacia armata, can be cut back to within a few eyes of last year's growth and given heat and moisture and they will make growth for next year's blooming. Cytisus is not worth carrying over. They become white elephants on your hands.

Unless you are in a neighborhood where rhododendrons do well, do not bother with them one minute unless you have a neighbor against whom you want to have a joke; then present them to him. But best of all, we hope you have little or nothing left over.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE CALLA LILY.

And Other Stories.

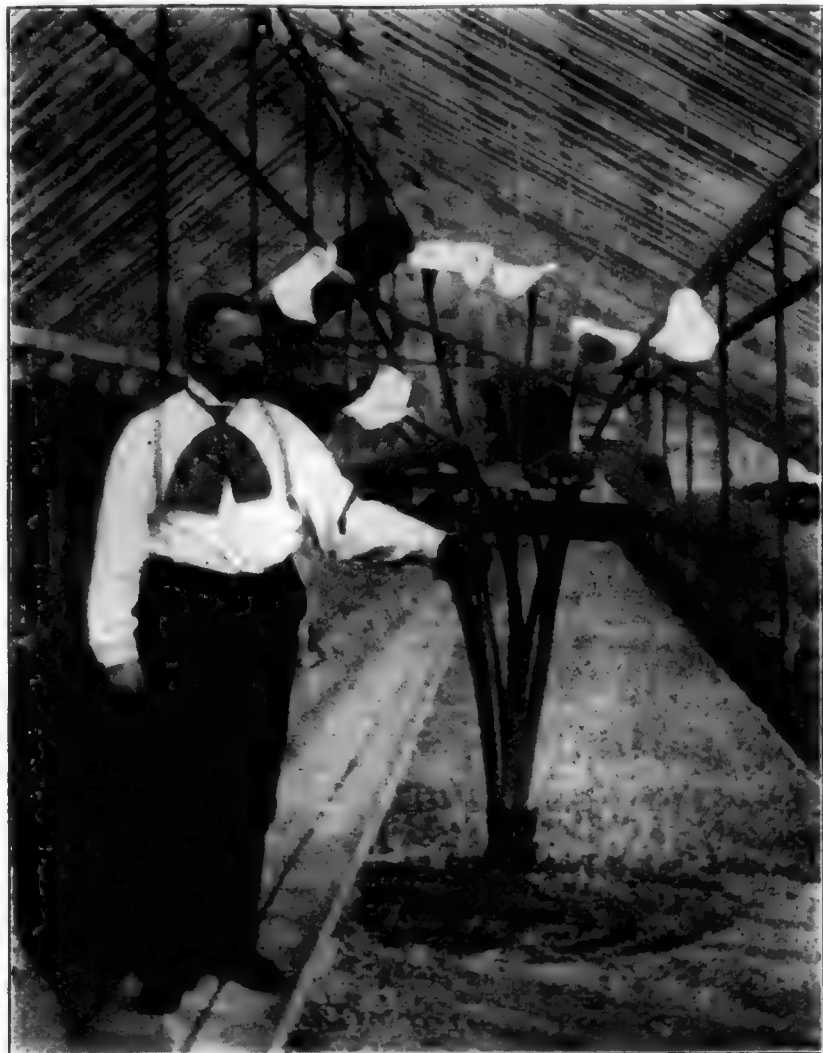

The calla lily is not the popular plant it was twenty-five years ago, when it was in great demand, not only for funeral designs, but used in bunches, and in those days the question was often asked, "How are your callas," not "How are your lilies," as it is today, meaning L. longiflorum.

Callas are grown singly in pots or planted out on a bench. Of late a disease has appeared which has destroyed many roots. Here is a bed of callas which has evidently escaped all disease, grown by Wm. Ehmann, of Corfu, N. Y., the little rural village of Genesee county which has gradually grown to be quite a carnation center, where the writer has spent many innocent and virtuous days, consequently happy ones.

Something has occurred of late in the town of Pembroke that has brought out some ruminating thoughts. It has taken a vote whether the town should or should not have licensed hotels. While the village of Corfu said "Let's have two or three hotels," the town, which comprises several villages, said no license. A strange coincidence is that Corfu, which has six or seven florists, voted for license. The villages that have no florists voted "no." This is merely a coincidence, from which nothing is to be inferred.

A Hoosier Florist's Easter Greeting.

William Ehmann, Corfu, N. Y., and a Calla.

Up to six years ago there was no undertaker, and little call for his services, had one been numbered among our business men at Corfu. Then suddenly an undertaker put out his shingle and made the usual handsome window display, and lo! the inhabitants began at once to die off, so that the undertaker might live. The oldest inhabitants passed away in bunches of four or five weekly. As there are not more than 500 souls in the corporation, including five ministers of different denominations, and three doctors, the cause of the great mortality must not all be blamed on the poor undertaker. The trustees of the village at the next meeting will consider the desirability of getting rid of two doctors and at least three ministers, in the belief that by so doing the village can be restored to its former and normal healthy condition. If this is found efficacious the licenses will be restored.

The writer told a story at the Indianapolis banquet of the Carnation Society which I think pleased some of my auditors. It was founded on fact and occurred in this little village.

A man lived here fifteen years ago who was a very successful farmer and, besides, was the pillar of the Methodist church. His name was Nicholas Dorshi. So well was he known, and so universally respected, that when poor old Brother Nick lay at death's door they thought it was proper to write upon the church door bulletins of his last hours. So on that sad night, George Adams, head deacon, wrote: "10 p. m. Brother Dorshi very low." Another hour went by and again he wrote, "11 p. m. Consultation of doctors; no hope for Brother Dorshi." Another anxious hour went and then the fateful words appeared, "12 p. m. Brother Dorshi dead and gone to heaven."

Tom Doyle was then the witty and able town clerk and, having business that way and in company with Joseph

Canfield, added another and later bulletin which read. "1 a. m. Great excitement in heaven. Brother Dorshi not arrived."

But I have strayed away from the callas. Brother Ehmann says they occupy a house 100 feet long and eight feet wide. It is the middle bed, with six inches of good rich soil on the solid ground. They were planted July 1, 1905; perfectly dry roots which had been grown and flowered the previous winter. As they were planted some fifteen inches apart, 3,000 Halliday chrysanthemums were grown between the callas, 2,500 being sold as first-class and 500 as seconds. Up to April 6 Mr. Ehmann has averaged six flowers to every calla plant and expects to average nine flowers before they are dried off.

The illustrations will show you the size and number of flowers and Mr. Ehmann himself. Mr. Ehmann does not aim to grow any crop to superlative perfection, but grows dollars and cents to every square foot.

This establishment was built by the Webb Brothers, then sold to George Troup, the superintendent in our beautiful Forest Lawn cemetery in Buffalo, and purchased the last winter by Mr. Ehmann, who ran it a year for Mr. Troup.

There are great hopes for the village yet, as they have basket ball teams of both sexes. Ed Giddings is manager, Terry Kinsella official umpire, William Thayer chaplain and Mr. and Mrs. D. Scott and Myron Johnson chief rooters.

W. S.

KILLED BY PRIMULA OBCONICA.

Some of our greenhouse plants are known to have poisonous properties, perhaps the most widely grown variety being the popular Primula obconica. While the majority of gardeners can handle the plant with impunity, there are many to whom it is poisonous. We have not previously, however, heard of any death being caused by it, but in a March issue of the London Lancet, the leading English medical journal, Dr. W. H. Brown, of Leeds, states that a woman 29 years of age was recovering from an attack of influenza when she scratched her nose in smelling this plant. The nose swelled, became a deep plum color and inflammation with suppuration spread to the eyelids, the forehead and scalp. Nothing stayed the progress of the disease and the patient died.

It is unfortunate that this most desirable and useful decorative plant has the faculty of poisoning anyone. No doubt some timid persons may be led to discard the plant from reading the foregoing. This, however, seems to be a very extreme and exceptional case. Remedies to alleviate any irritation have been given in these columns on several occasions. Witch hazel and vinegar are both good. The plant appears to poison more when the hands are wet.

The writer told a story at the Indianapolis banquet of the Carnation Society which I think pleased some of my auditors. It was founded on fact and occurred in this little village.

A man lived here fifteen years ago who was a very successful farmer and, besides, was the pillar of the Methodist church. His name was Nicholas Dorshi, so well was he known, and so universally respected, that when poor old Brother Nick lay at death's door they thought it was proper to write upon the church door bulletins of his last hours. Soon that sad night, George Adams, our deacon, wrote: "10 p. m. Brother Dorshi very low." Another hour went by and again he wrote, "11 p. m. Consultation of doctors; no hope for Brother Dorshi." Another anxious hour went by then the fateful words appeared, "12 p. m. Brother Dorshi dead and gone to heaven."

Tom Doyle was then the witty and the town clerk and, having business that way and in company with Joseph

Canfield, added another and later bulletin which read: "1 a. m. Great excitement in heaven. Brother Dorshi not arrived."

But I have strayed away from the callas. Brother Ehmann says they occupy a house 100 feet long and eight feet wide. It is the middle bed, with six inches of good rich soil on the solid ground. They were planted July 1, 1905; perfectly dry roots which had been grown and flowered the previous winter. As they were planted some fifteen inches apart, 3,000 Halliday chrysanthemums were grown between the callas, 2,500 being sold as first-class and 500 as seconds. Up to April 6 Mr. Ehmann has averaged six flowers to every calla plant and expects to average nine flowers before they are dried off.

The illustrations will show you the size and number of flowers and Mr. Ehmann himself. Mr. Ehmann does not aim to grow any crop to superlative perfection, but grows dollars and cents to every square foot.

This establishment was built by the Webb Brothers, then sold to George Troup, the superintendent in our beautiful Forest Lawn cemetery in Buffalo and purchased the last winter by Mr. Ehmann, who ran it a year for Mr. Troup.

There are great hopes for the village yet, as they have basket ball teams of both sexes. Ed Giddings is manager, Terry Kinsella official umpire, William Thayer chaplain and Mr. and Mrs. D. Scott and Myron Johnson chief rooters. W. S.

KILLED BY PRIMULA OBCONICA.

Some of our greenhouse plants are known to have poisonous properties, perhaps the most widely grown variety being the popular Primula obconica. While the majority of gardeners can handle the plant with impunity, there are many to whom it is poisonous. We have not previously, however, heard of any death being caused by it, but in a March issue of the London Lancet, the leading English medical journal, Dr. W. H. Brown, of Leeds, states that a woman 29 years of age was recovering from an attack of influenza when she scratched her nose in smelling this plant. The nose swelled, became a deep plum color and inflammation with suppuration spread to the eyelids, the forehead and scalp. Nothing stayed the progress of the disease and the patient died.

It is unfortunate that this most desirable and useful decorative plant has the faculty of poisoning anyone. No doubt some timid persons may be led to discard the plant from reading the foregoing. This, however, seems to be a very extreme and exceptional case. Remedies to alleviate any irritation have been given in these columns on several occasions. Witch hazel and vinegar are both good. The plant appears to poison more when the hands are wet.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

It is often necessary or convenient to display two different kinds of stock in a window at one time. If by any means the coloring and habits of growth can be blended and placed in their proper relation, all well and good; if not, call off the proposed combination.

Once in a while one is caught with too many violets. Rather than set them in vases in rows in the window, stem into groups as for basket work. Make a bed of sphagnum three or four inches deep in the window. Cover with some kind of soft green and sprinkle. Dot the stemmed violets over the space in triangular shape, occupying the front section of the window. A mirror or mirrors for a deception will greatly aid in a low window arrangement like this. Back of the violet triangle, but close against it, group Boston ferns or one kind of blooming plants, which should be quite tall in comparison to the violets.

In one case Hermosa rose plants afforded a pleasing background for the violets, as well as displayed the plants themselves. There was close harmony in color between the soft pink of the Hermosa roses and the blue of the violets, and a decided difference in growing habits of the violets and rose plants, which was properly indicated by the violets being grouped low at the foot of the tall roses. The sharp lines of the triangles formed by each group of plants were broken sufficiently by the overhanging branches of the roses, which here and there fell close over the violets, while some other plants, like Dutch hyacinths or Easter lilies, would have stood like soldiers in the ranks and the triangular effect would have appeared too mathematical.

A few people still cling to the idea that in decorating, the fireplace should be attacked and jammed full of palms which have done nothing deserving of such treatment. Don't waste any good material on a grate unless it is unsightly, in which case a little wild smilax or some cured birch sprays will make a better screen than a dozen palms crowded together. A fireplace doesn't show any trimming after a company of people are gathered in the room.

It is surprising to what extent carelessness or selfishness will allow a person who calls himself a decorator to deface woodwork, walls and floors. The after effect is not only to the discredit of the guilty person, but to the whole craft as well. Plants, plant stands and vases are often hauled over polished floors and against woodwork without a thought of the damage being done. Tacks or nails should never be put in the face of woodwork, except by direct orders from the owner. If one cannot suspend the decorative material from the top or sides of woodwork, where it is permissible to put nails and tacks, he has yet to enter the primary class of decorating. It makes one sorry to see beautiful walls and finishings so recklessly defaced.

A funeral spray one can enjoy in the making is a large one of Murillo tulips well open, with Spiraea Gladstone and plenty of Asparagus Sprengeri. The tie, if any is used, may be a loose, fluffy bow of plain light green chiffon.

Another creation in pink is the union of Golden Gate and Chatenay roses, the latter full blown, with Asparagus plumosus and tie of embroidered pink chiffon.

Anything which one thoroughly enjoys when making is almost sure to have the necessary touch of life to please the customer.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a prize-winning design made by Charles M. Hall, of Ennis, Tex. It was one of the notable features of the exhibitions in the southwest last fall. The body of the design was made with white carnations. It was secured to a plaque on an easel, the upper part of which was covered with asparagus and chrysanthemums. Mr. Hall not only secured a prize on it, but he created public comment to a very considerable value by virtue of so large a piece, of so unusual a character and so well executed.

AZALEA FIREFLY.

The illustration opposite is from a group of Azalea Firefly, photographed at E. McMulkin's, Boston, just after Christmas. These are the leavings of the stock and not offered as good examples of the plant which has attained so great a measure of popularity in the Boston stores the past season or two, but rather to show the habit of growth and character of the material with which such satisfactory results are obtained by the skillful plant decorators.

Plants seen are principally grown in 6-inch pots, although occasional pyramidal-trained ones of larger size are noted. The flowers are smaller than in the regular A. Indica section, rosy in color, a very desirable shade for the holidays. The plant in habit closely resembles the well known A. amœna, which latter is hardy in Massachusetts even after very severe winters. It evidently has a considerable proportion of amœna blood in it. It can be forced into bloom for Christmas as readily as any other azalea.

CONCRETE FOR CHIMNEY.

Is it practicable to build a chimney of concrete and what size would the flue need to be for a place of about 20,000 feet of glass? W. E. F. W.

To put up scaffolding and a frame to build the chimney of concrete, as you would, a wall would be very expensive and then, again, if built of concrete blocks, which are now extensively manufactured, it would not be as serviceable as brick, for concrete does not stand fire as well as brick.

You do not say whether it is for a steam boiler or for several water heaters you want to use the chimney. If for steam, I can tell you something definite. Your 20,000 feet will need two thirty-five horse-power boilers, or one of sixty to seventy horse-power to do the work comfortably. Such an outfit will need a chimney fifty feet high and two feet in diameter; that is, a two-foot opening.

We often see immense stacks built in factories where a large amount of power is used and occasionally see greenhouse steam plants with tall, massive smokestacks. Depend on it, the higher the stacks the more economical the fuel bill. If you are using a return flue tubular boiler, the fire will burn and make steam with a smaller and shorter smokestack than is often seen, and that may appear to some as all you want. Not so. With slow draught the flues of your boiler will soon clog up with soot and after firing strongly five or six hours they will fill up, the draught is almost stopped and you are wasting fuel. With a strong draught, such as an ample chimney affords, the soot is carried through the flues. The strong draught prevents the soot from resting in the flues. The draught rushes through them and keeps your flues clean. This is why engineers design lofty chimneys. There is nothing that beats a brick stack, although, of course, a heavy iron chimney is much less at first cost, but its life is short. The only means of prolonging the life of the stack is frequent expensive paintings.

BOILER AND PIPING.

What gives the best heat for growing carnations, lettuce and a general line of other plants, such as geraniums, heliotropes, etc.? I have a greenhouse 20x64. The walls are brick and five and one-half feet high, with two feet of glass the full length on the south side. It is ten feet to the ridge. At the center of the north wall of this greenhouse is a brick house 16x22 feet, with a basement of the same size. The basement floor is five feet below the floor of the greenhouse. Would it be deep enough to accommodate a boiler? West of the brick house and adjoining it and the greenhouse I have now, I want to build another greenhouse and bring it out even with the present greenhouse. That will be 22x23. Please tell me how to heat them? It sometimes is as cold as 20 degrees below zero. I know of two second-hand boilers I can buy. One is for hot-water and the other steam. Which would you advise me to buy? Which requires the least pipe, fuel and attention? Is a house with two-thirds of the roof to the south good to grow lettuce and vegetable plants in? H. L. H.

For a plant no larger than the house 20x64 and the contemplated house 22x23 feet a hot-water system will prove most satisfactory, and even if there were another house 20x64 parallel with the present one of that size, I think water would still be most desirable. The cost of installing the piping for water will exceed that of steam by a few dollars, but the cost of maintenance will be less, as the water will require less attention.

The basement of the brick house is deep enough to accommodate any one of the modern hot-water heaters of proper capacity to supply heat for these greenhouses. Do not get a second-hand boiler unless you know it to be a good one. A three-quarter span house with the long side to the south would be satisfactory for lettuce, carnations or roses if properly piped. It is not the kind of heat so much as the proper temperature which makes for success in greenhouse work. I cannot estimate the cost of the pipe or the work for you, but can say that to pipe the house 20x64 it will require about 800 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe for 60 degrees temperature; in the house 22x23 feet 320 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe will be required. To heat two houses 20x64 and one 22x23 feet, about 2,000 feet of 2-inch pipe will be required. A hot-water boiler large enough to do this work should have a rated capacity of

The basement of the brick house is deep enough to accommodate any one of the modern hot-water heaters of proper capacity to supply heat for these greenhouses. To heat two houses 20x64 and one 22x23 feet, about 2,000 feet of 2-inch pipe will be required. A hot-water boiler large enough to do this work should have a rated capacity of about 1,800 to 2,000 square feet of radiation. With these figures and dealers' prices on pipe and fittings you can estimate the cost of material. L. C. C.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a greenhouse 20x40 and eleven feet high; sides four feet, with about two feet of glass. I have a coil boiler for 910 feet of radiation. Can I heat another house the same as the above, or add forty feet to the old house? Which would be the better to get the best results from the boiler? I have a 3-inch flow pipe under the ridge and return under the benches in 1½-inch pipes, four under the north bench, and under each of the three other benches I have two pipes, making ten pipes in all. I intend to put in more pipes this spring. Let me know how many I can feed with a 3-inch flow. To build forty feet to the old house I must first lay the ground; that is why I would like to know if there is any difference in heating one house 20x80 or two houses 20x40. S. S.

If your boiler has a rated capacity of 910 square feet of radiation it is large enough to heat the two houses 20x40, or the one house 20x80. My preference would be in favor of the one house 20x80, although I am of the opinion that the two houses 20x40 could be heated more easily than the single long house.

carry the full capacity of the boiler. If 1½-inch pipe is used and the house is made 20x80, the 3-inch flow should supply fifteen returns the length of the house. This is all based on water at 180 degrees. L. C. C.

PIPING TWO HOUSES.

We have one house 18x75 feet, nine and one-half feet to the ridge, four and one-half feet to the plates. The west wall is brick, the east wall double boarded, with tar paper between. There is a shed on the north end. The two side benches are two feet wide and the two center benches four and one-half feet wide. Adjoining the above house on the south is one 19x60 feet, ten and one-half feet to the ridge, five and one-half feet to the plates; the west wall brick, the east wall containing eighteen inches of glass, double boarded and papered. The benches are the same as in the other house. With a 2-inch flow under each bench, how many 2-inch returns will it require for 55 degrees of heat when 20 below zero outside? J. A. C.

The house 18x75, with water at 180 degrees, will require about 550 square feet of radiation, or 880 lineal feet in 2-inch pipe; i. e., three 2-inch pipes under each of the four benches, one flow and two returns. The house 19x60 feet

CHRYSANTHEMUM LANONA.

Of the numerous excellent varieties certificated last fall by the Chrysanthemum Society of America few scored as well as Lanona, a seedling of Iolantha crossed Sarah Bernhardt, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich. It made ninety-four points on the commercial scale and ninety-five points on the exhibition scale.

Lanona is an immense Japanese bloom, flowering at a time when large blooms are scarce. It is exceedingly artistic in build, as shown in illustration, being irregularly incurved, but not so closely as to detract from its graceful outline. In color it is pure white, with center petals slightly tinted rose, enhancing its beauty. An important feature is its dwarf, sturdy growth, rarely exceeding three feet in height and ample foliage to cover the stiff stems. With ordinary culture the blooms will attain a diameter of eight inches. It will be especially valuable for early exhibitions, being in perfection October 20 to 25.

BRIDAL WREATHS.

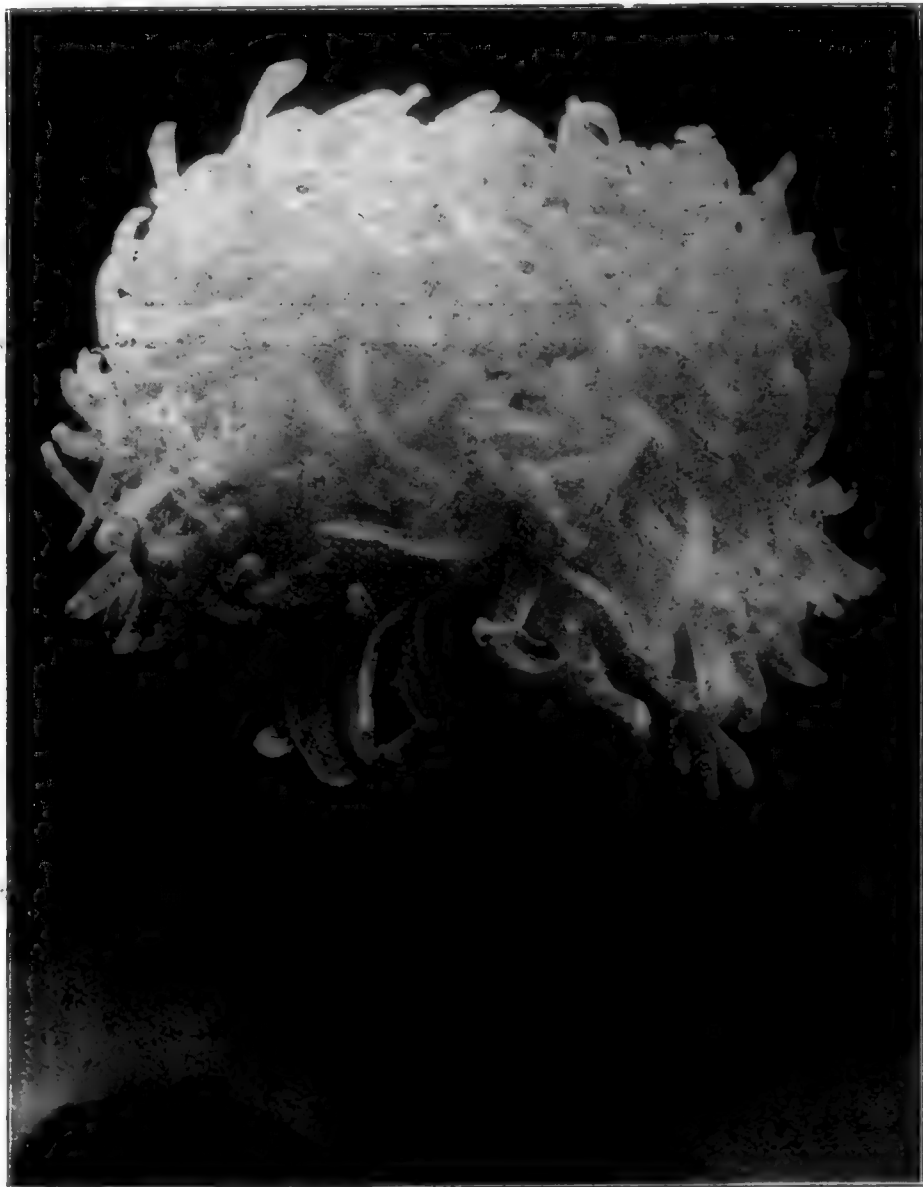

The bridal wreath I refer to is Francoa ramosa, a very pretty and dainty greenhouse subject. The popular name has been given to the plant owing to the pretty custom of tying the long, graceful spikes of flowers to an arched wire or willow wand, when they truly represent what their popular name proclaims them to be. In the greenhouse the flower spikes are generally allowed to assume their naturally upright position, and a more effective plant than the francoa grown in this manner is difficult to find.

Propagation is generally effected by dividing old plants or potting off-sets, which form freely around old specimens. To those who have no old plants, a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine says he would like to recommend seed sowing as a means of obtaining vigorous youngsters and ultimately sturdy old specimens capable of yielding immense numbers of spikes of bloom.

The seed is not dear, and should be ordered with that of the general run of flower garden subjects. The same season of sowing may also be followed, viz., about the end of February or the middle of March. A heated greenhouse and a pan of good, sweet, open soil are necessary, sowing the seeds thinly and covering them with a pane of glass until germination takes place. If sown thinly the seedlings may remain in the pan until they are an inch across, when they should be placed singly in small pots. Summer treatment consists of shifting on until 4½-inch pots are reached, and at this stage the plants will be best in a cold frame, with slight shade from the brightest sunshine.

If room in the greenhouse is precious, as it well may be where chrysanthemums are growing in quantity, the young francoas will be quite safe in a cold frame until the beginning of December, provided they are kept fairly dry at the roots and overhead, and a mat is laid over the frame in severe weather. As soon as room can be found for them in the greenhouse they should be brought in, and will then require more water, but this should not be given in excess.

No further potting need be done, and no feeding should be necessary until the flower spikes start to push between the leaves. This will probably be about the end of March, twelve months from sowing, and the plants should be in full

Chrysanthemum Lanona.

From the standpoint of convenience, however, the long house is most desirable. The location of the boiler should be at the end which will give greatest protection from storms and wind; i. e., the most exposed end of the greenhouses, if the slope of the land will permit.

The 3-inch flow is large enough to will require 520 square feet of radiation, which is equal to 835 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. This amount is sufficient to place a flow and two returns under each bench save one, which would have a flow and three returns. The most exposed side of the house should be the one to receive this extra line of pipe. C.

beauty by the beginning of June, from when they will flower all the summer.

The winter treatment may be similar to that advised for seedlings, but old, pot-bound plants will stand a surprising amount of rough usage. A few outside leaves may brown and die, but new ones will form on introduction to heat, and no harm will accrue from the loss of the old ones. Repotting is not required more often than once in two years, but pot-bound plants should be liberally fed.

GREENHOUSE GRAPES.

What is the cause of young roots breaking out along the vines, even to the top, and on the spurs? When is the best time to feed grape vines? The heat was turned on the first of February. What is best to feed them with? Mine are old vines and are set about four feet apart. A. T. B.

The breaking out of aerial roots along the grape vines is caused by the atmosphere of the house being too moist and too close. The reduction of the moisture and the giving of more air will stop the growth of the roots. I don't believe that the roots in themselves do any material damage to the vines but when the condition of the atmosphere of the house is such as to cause the growth of aerial roots it is not congenial to the best interests of the vines, as it is sure to cause both thinness of foliage and weakness of growth.

The time of feeding will depend largely on the condition of your vines. Old vines as a rule should have an application of some fertilizer just previous to starting. For this purpose we use bone meal one year and unleached wood ashes the next, giving a liberal application and forking well into the border. A good, liberal feeding with liquid manure is given just after the grapes are thinned. Liquid procured from either cow manure or sheep manure is good for this purpose, or the two might be combined to good advantage.

We have seen grape vines fed even up to the time that coloring had begun, but this we consider poor policy, as if fed too late more or less trouble will result from what is known as "shanking." This is the withering up of the fruit stalk, which checks the maturing of the fruit and renders the attached berries sour and useless. Late feeding also results in producing poor colored fruit. You will no doubt have noticed that as the fruit approaches the coloring stage, the growth of the vines is practically at a standstill and hence unable to utilize food. The manure, if applied then, must stay in the soil where it must cause more or less sourness, the injury to the roots resulting from this being no doubt the cause of shanking and the prevention of perfect color.

With the Advertising Man

Have you ever used the telephone as a means of securing new business, as well as keeping in close touch with your old customers?

For years we have made a practice of calling up on Friday of each week, as well as a few days before holidays, a selected list of customers and prospective customers. Arrangements can be made with the telephone company to have the operator call the numbers for you by furnishing a duplicate list, which will save considerable time.

Last year we sold by this method about $340 worth of plants, flowers, etc., and had all our stuff ready to deliver the first thing Saturday morning, so that when rush orders came we could give them proper attention.

You may think this has nothing to do with advertising, but it has, for advertising sells goods and this is one of the quickest and most profitable ways of advertising we know of. BILLY VAN.

The Easter Market.

The slump in prices from 6 p. m. Saturday to 6 p. m. Monday was fully fifty per cent. Beauties fell gradually on Saturday night from their top of $50 per hundred to $25 to $35 on Monday. Brides and Maids, which occasionally touched $15 and were strong at $12 for Easter, for the best sold at $8 Monday and violets traveled rapidly when the rain came from 75 cents to 35 cents and the left-overs ran up into the hundreds of thousands. One expert declared half a million violets remained unsold Monday night, and so in the wholesale market what promised on Saturday when darkness fell to be the greatest cleaning up in the street's history, became a loss and a disappointment that both wholesalers and growers will bear impatiently. Dozens of telephone orders received during the day were cancelled. The storm grew worse as the night passed and Easter morning opened with a heavy downpour. Retailers lost all their usual Sunday trade and so shared to some extent in the general disappointment. Fortunately for them all their plants had been sold before dark on Saturday and so as a plant Easter this will go down in history as another record-breaker.

The sales of plants of all kinds were enormous. Never was there such variety and never were they more perfect. Alone or in combination, large or small, the demand was unprecedented. Everything went. Nearly all the bon-ton retailers were about out of plants on Friday night. The plantsmen are perhaps the happiest of all who participate in the great industry that makes Easter so memorable. Not a plant worthy of the name remained unsold a week ago. The rest of the year for them is "velvet," autos, trips to Europe and independence. New greenhouses and twice as much for 1907, and a certainty of demand, that is what it means for the men who grow azaleas, hydrangeas, acacias, ramblers of every kind and color, and lilies, too, for every good lily sold at 12 cents and many were worth 15 cents at 6 p. m. on Saturday. Tulips, hyacinths and daffodils, violets in pots and hardy roses all found their places in the homes of the New Yorkers. The outdoor early markets at Union Square and elsewhere found thousands of early buyers and prices were even better there than in the stores.

There are left not enough plants to make the retail windows look respectable, but the loss to retailers is a serious one in cut flowers, not because of advance purchases, for these were most cautiously made, but because of what might and would have been had Easter opened with sunshine and the great parade of the 400,000 been possible as usual. Jupiter Pluvius never did himself greater discredit and never fell a more costly rain. Well, it is over, and we must make the best of it.

The growers were good this year, and did not do much pickling. They deserve more encouragement. The spirit of fair play is dominant, but there seems little excuse for the "cutting of slips" by retailers after sales are made and prices agreed upon.

I hear of a church decoration tomorrow that uses 5,000 lilies. They were bought on Sunday and 8 cents each was the price. A big fall within twenty-four hours or less! Something like the way it goes down in Wall street, they tell me.

Various Notes.

All the retailers had beautiful windows. A walk from Twenty-third street up Broadway to Forty-second, on the Avenue and the other streets frequented by the good stores, was a revelation, and over in Brooklyn there was no end to the supply and the beauty of it all. Where everything came from, and how all could be so disseminated, is a yearly miracle, growing more and more entrancing as population, demand and wealth increase and demonstrating as never before the fact that this big city is the greatest flower lover and buyer in all the world.

Sheridan's Beauties were as fine as the finest as usual. They maintain their reputation, which has become national.

Traendly & Schenck served their usual elaborate luncheon early Sunday morning to friends and employees. Their shipping trade was large, their red roses popular as ever.

Ford Bros. handled half a million violets. They sold all their blooming plants, and so did every wholesaler who handled them. Even the daisies and genistas found purchasers. James Hart was regretting that he had not laid in more heavily, as he could have sold three times the quantity handled. There were no exceptions, all the plants were gone.

Over 1,000 boxes of violets came down from the Hudson river section Saturday afternoon and evening. Over a million flowers came in during the day. If the weather continues cool the purple shower will not fail before the first of May. The quality still is excellent.

John B. Nugent is a father-in-law, his daughter, Elizabeth F. Nugent, who is his bookkeeper and a general favorite, having married April 1 Roy D. Bailey, of South Dakota. The young folks will mutually look after the books until June, when they leave for their honeymoon trip to the big ranch of the bridegroom's father in the "wild and woolly west."

There were not many novelties this year. Fleischman had some unique importations in dwarf ostriches and cockatoos within whose stomachs, with an opening in the back, was room for a bunch of violets or valley. Some very pretty glass baskets at Small's and some dark wicker hampers at Thorley's were new. But the majority of the bon-ton retailers contented themselves with artistic combinations of plants or beautiful creations in ribbon decoration, with tubs and pails in white and gold. All the stores were splendidly banked and the plants seductively grouped as early as Wednesday in many places, and Thursday's display has never been equaled in the world.

Donohoe's Pompeian boxes of plants sold rapidly and all his basket combinations were handsome.

Bowe, Van Praag and Warrendorff were cramped for room as usual. So, in fact, were all the Broadway florists, where room means rental and a store that rents for less than $5,000 a year is the exception.

The annual spring show at the Central park conservatories opened on Easter Sunday. Mr. Olsson has made his superintendency at the park gardens a success.

Alex. J. Guttman sails on Thursday of this week for Europe, his object being three weeks of rest and recuperation. He has had a strenuous season.

George Saltford seems to be building to stay on Twenty-ninth street, which with C. Millang, Starke, Cotsonas, Geller and Gunther, is a busy thoroughfare, and now that there is no more room on Twenty-eighth street the overflow will naturally gravitate to Twenty-ninth. Two more large ice-boxes at Saltford's are being constructed, one 7x14 feet and one 10x18.

On Friday one of Lecakes' horses, a wagon and load of plants, were all destroyed by a collision with an Eighth avenue trolley and S. T. Cotsonas, one of the members of the firm, was seriously injured.

A. J. Fellouris has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife last week. J. J. Fellouris has been confined for some days with a severe attack of the grip.

J. D. Cockcroft, of Northport, L. I.; Kimmerle & Minder, of Newark, N. J.; J. Peters, of Hempstead, L. I.; J. Hauck, of Bloomfield, N. J., and Alex. J. Guttman, of Chatham, N. J., are installing Kroeschell boilers this season.

Wm. G. Badgley, of Chatham, adds three houses 18x150 to his plant this summer. He maintains his reputation for extra Maids and Brides. His brother, L. V. Badgley, whose arm was seriously shattered by a gunshot wound, is recovering at St. Michael's hospital, Newark.

J. A. Manda, of South Orange, is now out, ready to tackle his orchid enterprise after a ten weeks' illness.

H. E. Froment had a little Fourth of July celebration last week when the gas, or something else, exploded in his basement. No one was injured, but Mr. Coyle had a shock. Down at the plant market, too, there was trouble when a small cyclone struck it and leveled John Birnie's big tent. Business was never so brisk among the plantsmen, who from now on will be hustling there before "sun up." J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOSTON.

The Easter Trade.

Once more the general verdict is that Easter trade has broken all past records. The weather during the whole week was ideal for shipping plants. There were misgivings as to what Saturday's weather might be, prognostications being for a cold rain. Fortunately we had no rain, only lowering clouds, the downpour being postponed until early Sunday afternoon.

Again it is to be recorded that it was more a plant Easter than ever, the demand being unprecedented. Of course, lilies led in popularity. As a rule they were in excellent condition. All the growers were cleaned out entirely. Azaleas came second in popularity. We never saw better, and the demand was excellent. There was a tremendous output of Crimson Rambler roses. Some were very good, many just as poor. It was an easy matter to pick out plants which had been pot-grown since the previous spring, the trusses being larger and richer in color and the foliage vastly superior. Quite a few Baby Ramblers were seen and sold well. In pink ramblers, Dorothy Perkins sold rapidly, much better than the red varieties. Some Lady Gay and Farquhar were also seen. Far more of these could have been sold. Quite a number of hybrid perpetuals were seen, also Clothilde Soupert and Killarney. Hydrangeas had a good sale, but many of the plants would have been better a fortnight later. Some very fine Marguerite Queen Alexandra were seen, and spiræas were unusually good. Acacia armata was the only variety of that genus seen. Very few of the rather coarse metrosideros were noted. Genistas were fine and had a good sale. In bulbous stock there was a good assortment of narcissi and tulips, and growers report a fine sale on these.

In cut flowers, while there was a very good market, no remarkable rise in prices occurred. Roses hardly moved at all. Best Beauties did not make over $5 a dozen, good medium grades being, however, in demand. Richmond and Liberty at $15 per hundred were about the top for these varieties, very few selling higher. Bride, Maid, Chatenay and other varieties made no advance at all and were inclined to be druggy. Carnations were better sellers than roses. Ordinary stock made $3 and $4, good stock $5 and $6, and some fancies $8. There was a heavy output, but even whites cleaned up well. There was a heavy sale for cut lilies, the bulk going at 10 cents and 12 cents per bud. In pots 12 cents seemed to be the general price.

Violets were somewhat scarce, especially good singles. The best stock made $1, a few going as high as $1.25. Extra doubles also made $1, poorer grades cleaning at 50 cents to 75 cents. In bulbous material, narcissi averaged $2 per hundred; single tulips, $2, and double sorts, like Murillo, $4; Spanish iris, $4; gladioli, $2 per dozen, and Dutch hyacinths, $3 and $4 per hundred. Cut spiræa averaged $3 per hundred, callas $10, marguerites $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas were in inadequate supply and were snapped up quickly, the best at $1.50 and seconds at $1 per hundred. There was the usual supply of stocks in a variety of colors, the best double making $4 per hundred. Singles were not wanted. Cut azaleas, antirrhinums, mignonette, anemones, ixias, tritomas and other flowers were seen. Lily of the valley was in moderate request at $3 to $4, and there was a fine call for asparagus and adiantum.

Easter Notes.

A good many pot plants from Philadelphia and Long Island were seen. As a rule these were inferior to stock grown by Roland and our other best plantsmen.

Dorothy Perkins was the leader in the rambler class, and if at all presentable it sold on sight. The hybrid perpetuals sold rather sluggishly.

Carbone had a fine lot of that beautiful rhododendron, Pink Pearl, which cleared quickly. He also had nice Boronia elatior, ericas, some superb Azalea Prof. Wolters, fine Dorothy Perkins rose and quantities of finely bloomed English primroses in pans.

Mann Bros. are about the only successful growers of Lilium candidum. They had 3,000 of these, the flowers making $8 per hundred. They sold 10,000 pots of L. longiflorum and an immense quantity of azaleas, rhododendrons, ramblers and bulbous stock.

Pierce Bros. cleaned out some 40,000 pots of lilies and had to refuse many orders. They counted it the best Easter on record.

McMulkin had some well-grown ericas of the Wilmoreana type and fine Dorothy Perkins and other ramblers. His large show window was a vision in white and his large conservatory very attractively arranged.

Houghton & Clark had a quantity of finely flowered double red hawthorns and excellent pyrus in variety and Prunus triloba. Their specimens of Hydrangea Otaksa were the finest seen.

Welch Bros. had a strenuous week of it. They report a very heavy sale of pot lilies, azaleas, spiraeas, ramblers and hydrangeas. In cut flowers their business was, as usual, of enormous volume, covering every part of New England.

Galvin, in addition to the regular line of Easter stock, had good bougainvilleas and standard wistarias. He did a very heavy business at the Tremont street and Back Bay stores.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report trade in their lines as unusually heavy, early morning and late night work having been necessary for the past fortnight.

As usual, Sim, Kidder, Spillsbury, Orr and other violet specialists had superb stock and they could have sold double the quantity they had.

Club Meeting.

A big audience greeted J. A. Pettigrew on April 17 to listen to his interesting and practical lecture on "The Embellishment of Streets and Waysides." Everyone present seemed to feel a keen interest in the subject so ably treated upon, and an animated discussion was followed by an enthusiastic vote of thanks. The new additions to the membership roll, numbering from three states, places the club well above the 300 mark. The president announced details of the club banquet on April 25. There will be a reception at 6 o'clock. The banquet will be served at 6:30, followed by a first-class entertainment. At 9 o'clock one of the floors will be cleared for dancing, for which an efficient orchestra is engaged. The large advance sale of tickets indicates an attendance of 300 or more. Everyone present was brim full of enthusiasm over the banquet, and it was stated that visitors from the North Shore and Rhode Island Horticultural Societies would be present.

It was announced that E. O. Orpet, of South Lancaster, will address the club at the meeting May 15 and that arrangements for the coming landscape gardening classes are being made. There were some interesting exhibits in spite of the meeting coming so soon after Easter. Refreshments were served and all present voted the meeting the best ever.

Various Notes.

The residence of Clothier Pierce, of Dighton, was destroyed by fire April 13. A large proportion of Mr. Pierce's big collection of dahlias were in his cellars. Fortunately his greenhouses were saved.

W. H. Elliott's faith in Richmond rose is such that he will plant 11,000 of it the coming season.

E. Sutermeister says his Easter trade in bulbous stock in pans was the best he ever had.

The next exhibition at Horticultural hall will occur on May 6. Azaleas, calceolarias, pelargoniums, tulips and narcissi will be special features.

Not for many years have trees and shrubs come through the winter with so little injury as the one just closed. Even plants of doubtful hardiness look fresh.

Nurseries in this section have all their resources taxed just now to fill their orders. The season opened so late, owing to the cold March, that the shipping season will be even shorter than a year ago.

H. M. Robinson expects to start on a business trip to California on or about April 29.

H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, has just received a letter from F. L. Schulz, secretary of the Kentucky Society of Florists, commending the wonderful keeping qualities of his new seedling carnation, No. 49. A box of it arrived two days ahead of the recent show in Louisville, and kept long enough thereafter to prove it to be a veritable "globe trotter."

W. N. CRAIG.

ST. LOUIS.

Easter Trade.

Easter trade from all reports was quite satisfactory with the retailers, wholesalers and growers. There was a marked falling off in the call for cut flowers of all kinds except lilies, but an increased demand for blooming plants, of which there were plenty, and of the best quality. Lilies were in great demand and sold out clean. Azaleas were in evidence at all the stores. Bulbous stock in pots and pans sold remarkably well and good prices were realized. Spiraeas and hydrangeas, too, sold well.

The floral displays in the windows of the up-town florists were fine. Theo. Miller, Eggeling, Kalisch and Windt had magnificent displays of all kinds of blooming plants. Fred. C. Weber, Townsend, F. H. Weber and Michel had a great plant trade and their stock was a sight worth looking at. The best trade in years was done by the Grand avenue florists, Mrs. Ayers, Geo. Waldbart, Ellison, Ostertag and Newman.

The down-town florists, who do not handle so many blooming plants, all report a big trade in cut flowers. The weather was not very pleasant, but favorable enough for delivery of goods without extra wrapping.

The wholesalers were kept very busy with the local and shipping trade, and with some of them it proved the biggest Easter on record. Great quantities of lilies were disposed of. Roses were plentiful. First-class stock sold clean. There was too much of the second grade in the market. American Beauties had a big demand. A fine lot of carnations were in the market, especially Lawson and Enchantress. Fancy grades sold at $5 per hundred. Of the other grades none were sold less than $3. Violets were more plentiful than expected, but not first-class. Of bulbous stock Harrisii and callas sold best. Next came lily of the valley and Dutch hyacinths. Tulips were over-plentiful, as only the lighter shades sold well. Smilax, asparagus and adiantum had a good call, with the market well supplied.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club should have held a meeting last Thursday afternoon, but only five members showed up. They were President Ammann, Vice-President Steidle, Secretary Schray, F. J. Fillmore and J. J. Beneke. The business of the meeting was laid over until May, when a large attendance is expected.

J. J. Karins, of Philadelphia, who represents H. A. Dreer, spent a few days in the city the past week.

Julius Buechel, father of Edward Buechel, manager of the Riessen Floral Co., died the past week. The funeral was held Saturday. Mr. Buechel has the sympathy of the trade.

Frank Ellis, who expected to be back from Panama for the Easter rush, writes that it will be May 1 before he will be able to return home. He sees a great future in his banana plantation.

Arthur Ellison, in a race at the roller rink the past week, had a fall which almost broke his nose. His friends hardly recognized him at the wholesale houses the next morning.

Miss Badaracco, in her pretty new store, had a fine display of Easter plants and reports a big trade.

Henry G. Berning reports that he disposed of nearly 7,000 lilies during Easter week. Business in other stock was also very satisfactory.

Mayor Wells this week will nominate the new city forester, and it looks as though this office, too, will be in the hands of politicians instead of an experienced man.

The florist bowlers lost two of their games with the Unions on Tuesday of last week. Capt. Beyer was high man and was followed by Ellison, Lohrenz, Beneke and Kuehn. Monday they rolled a match game with the Fern Glens.

J. J. B.

CROWN POINT, IND.—The material for C. M. Favorite's new greenhouse plant has arrived.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo.—Sarah A. Eades, wife of B. F. Eades, died April 3 after an illness of five months.

ALBION, MICH.—Dew's Greenhouses are shortly to be enlarged by the addition of a structure 42x128.

ANACOSTIA, D. C.—F. H. Kramer is preparing to put up three rose houses with as little delay as possible.

SUMMIT, N. J.—Lager & Hurrell, who exhibited at the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, sold a single plant, a Cattleya Schroederiana, for $1,000.

CUT IT OUT.

Advertisers are urged to cut out of their advertisements in the REVIEW any items of stock on which they are running low. Remember that the REVIEW is printed every Wednesday. Write so that your letter will be received on Tuesday, directing that items nearly sold out be omitted. Don't wait until you are completely sold out; orders will keep coming. Don't neglect it. You will be at no greater trouble to change your advertisement in the REVIEW than you will be to send back money—besides, you know how it would disappoint you to order stock and a week or so later, instead of getting the goods, have the money returned. Then, if the same stock is listed in the advertisement in the next REVIEW, what would you think? Cut it out!

WASHINGTON.

Easter Trade.

With ideal spring weather and exceptionally fine stock the Washington dealers were prepared to meet the volume of Easter trade under most favorable conditions. The results are most satisfactory, and it may be said without indulging in platitudes that in things floral it was a great Easter. Though New York, Philadelphia and smaller markets were heavily drawn upon for stock, in addition to a large local supply, there was little left. As a matter of course, lilies were the leading item, but many buyers took either a variety or "something just as good," in their eyes, the result being that all good stocks were rapidly depleted.

In cut flowers, excepting daffodils, which only figured in a small way, there was no outdoor stock in sufficient quantity to affect the market for greenhouse flowers. In addition to the abundance, good quality and ready sale of lilies,

We take pleasure in stating that we find features of the trade were many fine Crimson Ramblers, bougainvilleas, rhododendrons, spiræas and azaleas. At Cooke's the bougainvilleas and pyramidal pink azaleas were a surprise, even to some of the aristocratic residents of Dupont Circle, who, as a rule, are too well-bred to be surprised at anything.

The Gude Bros. Co. exhibited purple rhododendrons noteworthy for size and beauty. In addition they had an immense stock of lilies and other pot plants, which went fast, both at wholesale and retail.

Blackistone had a very attractive stock of plants, his bougainvilleas being prominent, while his gardenias, as pot plants, were by many considered novelties, as they are not often seen here in that form.

At Small's there were a number of very handsome combinations of spiræa and Farleyense, Crimson Ramblers and ivy, and a very fine collection of azaleas and other plants. The Crimson Ramblers grown by this firm were noteworthy.

The supply and quality of cut flowers was good. Roses, carnations, tulips, hyacinths and jonquils showed up in fine form. While the violets were small, the color, as a rule, was good and they sold fast. Without casting any reflections on the many newer varieties of carnations (may all of them that are good increase and prosper), it may be stated for a fact applicable to this market that nothing in sight throws even a shadow on the popularity of Enchantress. Good prices were realized throughout.

Various Notes.

George Shaffer had a regular Italian garden on his Fourteenth and I street corner, which was liberally patronized by the public.

The Center market dealers were badly handicapped for space to display their large stocks of pot plants. This was particularly noticeable at the stands of Alex. B. Garden, F. H. Kramer and C. Schellhorn, but all being men of the sanguine temperament, they kept at it and had good business.

Clarke Bros. brought in a house of Carnot roses for Easter that helped out materially in the cut flower trade.

J. M. Hammer & Sons came out strong on fine tulips and hyacinths.

Miss Ethel Ley, who enjoys the distinction of being the only woman in the city who runs a flower store and keeps "no men about," had a good stock and did a thriving trade.

In relation to the foregoing, Mrs. Rosine Stauff, who is the only commission dealer, had a busy week and was quite successful in bringing a number of producers and retailers together.

At most of the stores there was a demand for extra help of experience. George H. Cooke was ably assisted by John Barry and Mr. Lewis, of the U. S. Propagating Gardens. At Kimmel's Wesley Reynolds, of the U. S. Botanic Gardens, and Miss Robena Faulkner helped out. At Gude's, Small's, A. B. Garden's and the stores of the Washington Florist Co. the greenhouse force was drafted into service.

The American Rose Co. put a large stock of good lilies on the market, both at wholesale and retail.

J. C. Garden & Sons wholesaled a large number of their fine geraniums, put up in large pans. The combinations were quite attractive.

A scribe who occasionally visits the Connecticut avenue stores says that John Robertson's trade has doubled since he took to advertising. SCOTTY.

TIME TO SOW CINERARIAS.

When is the proper time to sow cinerarias to have them in bloom for Christmas? W. E. F. W.

The seed can be sown at the end of April or in early May. The cineraria is a cold-blooded plant and does best in a cold frame during summer, with the sash lifted both back and front. Beautiful as the cineraria is for the private conservatory, we think for the commercial florist it is a very unprofitable plant, occupying too much room for the price obtained. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Easter Trade.

Easter was the exact opposite of Christmas. At the yuletide stock ran so far short of the requirements that wholesalers were at their wits' ends in the effort to protect the interests of good customers. Last week supplies were so much greater than the demand that commission men were literally buried. Chicago never saw the like of Christmas; we hope we may never see just such another Easter. However distressing it may be to have insistent demands which cannot be met, it is infinitely worse to have the house full of stock for which there is no outlet, while the growers sit at home in serene anticipation of the receipt of checks for the week which will pay the summer's expenses, including the cost of a new house, or at least a trip to the convention.

It is always the unexpected that happens. It was the practically unanimous opinion that there would be enough of everything except carnations. It developed that these were the greatest overstock. In the advance quotations prices were stiff; early in the week large orders were accepted with reluctance, or even declined; stock that commanded $40 per thousand Thursday brought $30 Friday, $20 Friday night, $15 Saturday afternoon, and Saturday night white was offered as low as $10, with no takers. There was no time that the market was cleaned up, and Saturday night many thousands were still on hand. Easter morning was cold and damp, and sales were made only at sacrifice prices, especially for the day-old stock and for white. So bad a glut of white carnations, many showing signs of age, never has been known in this market.

What the growers will say may be guessed. The commission men will have need of an antipyretic; the "roasts" are certain. The man whose stock was handiest when good shipping orders were going out got the benefit; the grower whose stuff was in the box underneath got—what? If they chanced to be neighbors you can imagine what at least one of them thought. At the same time, the wholesalers were blameless. If the growers could not foresee the immense supplies, and warn their agents, how could the wholesalers prepare an outlet? Where did all the carnations come from, anyway? One house received 75,000 on Saturday, most of them white!

It had been expected that the supply of roses would be adequate. It was barely so. Deuteropathy, that sympathetic affection of one part of the body by an ailment of another, was the only cause of weakness in rose prices. Had the stomach of the market not been overloaded with other stock, the rose department would not have had its headache. Growers who had expected to fill all orders for Beauties found themselves short. Orders for Liberty and Richmond also had to be cut. The general quality of roses was much fresher than of carnations.

Of lilies there were enough. All the good ones brought $10 to $12.50 per hundred, but there was short-stemmed or small-flowered, spindling stock that went as low as $6, and some that was not sold at all. Of other bulbous stock the glut was something not soon to be forgotten. A few days of warm weather to the south of us served to bring in large quantities of outdoor flowers and the receipts of indoor tulips, narcissi and daffodils were tremendous. It was impossible to do anything with the flood.

Close to a million violets came in for the Easter trade. Singles were not a factor. The Hudson river stock was in very poor shape; good to look at, perhaps, but offensive to olfactors and to be handled gingerly if any petals were to be retained. A few of the best fetched $1 a hundred, more brought 40 cents, and some were not sold at all.

Of course, in such a generally glutted market the odds and ends, like sweet peas, mignonette, pansies, etc., were lost sight of, and if sold at all, brought very little. Greens were not specially abundant; if you needed smilax you had to pay for it.

In the plant department there was also a surplus. Many poor lilies were left; also Crimson Ramblers, hydrangeas, spiræas, etc. Some commission men returned the unsold plants to the growers; others have them yet.

Taking it all together, a simply prodigious quantity of stock was received, an amount beyond all precedent, even for the "great central market," and the volume of business was something to marvel at. On Friday night practically every house in town was well ahead of its sales for the corresponding days last year. This was shipping business. Had receipts of stock been shut off Friday night, growers and wholesalers might on Sunday have joined in a glad antiphony, but the crash of values pulled Saturday's and Sunday's sales below the same days of a year ago; in some cases the falling off was greater than the previous gain had been. Taking it by and large, the money result was satisfactory to the wholesalers; it was about the only satisfactory feature, the same as at Christmas, the result being reached from the opposite direction.

Easter at Retail.

There is more than usual unanimity in the reports of the retail trade. A few high class stores did less than usual, because of the absence of wealthy customers, but most of the retailers did at least as much business as last year—and they made more money. There were larger supplies of blooming plants, which were therefore to be had cheaper than usual, and the break in the cut flower market on Saturday gave them the chance that night to get stock at very reasonable figures, so that the increased profit was in proportion to the shrewdness of the buyer.

Some of the retailers who get violets direct from the growers had an experience which was an argument in favor of the commission man. Several shipments arrived in unusable condition. Not only were the retailers this time paying more than the going price, but they had to fall back on the wholesalers for a second supply; however, with the privilege of seeing that the stock was all right before they accepted it.

This Week's Market.

After the effort made for last week, it was to be expected that Monday's receipts would be light. The demand was stronger than had been expected and there was a better market on Monday than on Saturday, especially for carnations. By Tuesday receipts were again on the increase and values retrograded. Beauties continue in active demand. There is some call for lilies for the numerous spring weddings, and valley is also wanted for the same occasions. Bulbous stock in general is nearly gone. Violets were asked for on Monday and Tuesday and could not be supplied, unless the left-overs from Easter would do. Carnations are again coming in heavily and special sales will now be in order.

Various Notes.

Easter in 1907 falls on March 31.

On April 16 the Chicago Rose Co. increased its capital stock to $30,000 and took over the business of Joseph Ziska, the manufacturer of wire work, who put in the new capital. Officers were elected on the same day, as follows: President, Joseph Ziska; treasurer, John J. Ziska; secretary, John P. Degnan. Mr. Ziska has been engaged in making wire work for twenty-seven years and will continue to give his personal supervision to that department. D. J. Murphy has charge of the company's greenhouse plant at Libertyville.

Crimson Ramblers were much more plentiful and much better flowered than in previous years. Vaughan & Sperry had some fine ones.

Peter Reinberg's Liberty grower knows his business. The same houses that gave such a big cut for Christmas were again in full crop for Easter.

It will be news, if not good news, to several wholesalers that the Shaeffer Floral Co., Kansas City, made an assignment the morning after Easter.

A. L. Randall Co. on Friday sent out a single order of roses and carnations only that required twenty-two large boxes. Their receipts of violets were 376,000 for the week.

F. C. Struvy is preparing to start next week on a two months' trip to Mexico and California.

L. Coatsworth returned on Monday from a fortnight spent at New Castle. One of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co.'s new houses will be finished and ready for planting this week. The other two houses are under way.

Chas. Heim, of Blue Island, who closed up some time ago, has gone to Texas.

George Reinberg says the business in carnation cuttings is breaking all records. Last week, during the Easter rush, orders were received for more than 35,000.

Since the Supreme Court decided upon the legality of the bond issue for the west side parks, work will now proceed upon the erection of one of the finest conservatories in the country at Garfield park.

Samuelson's Easter window is always one of the most tasteful in town. The center was an eight-foot cross of box-wood, made full and studded with lilies. The background was a curtain-like effect of narrow white ribbon, and in front was a single hamper of lilies. One side was banked with green and lilies, the other open. The simplicity of the decoration heightened the effect. When illuminated it caught the eye of every passer-by.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received on Friday a shipment of Lilium candidum, the old-time Easter lily. The stock was very fine, but the buyers did not care for them, having in mind the public's lack of appreciation last year.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting some very fine President Carnot from their house for summer blooms. The first were ready for Easter and sold at sight.

E. H. Hunt had a good shipment of home-grown Marie Louise violets for Easter that brought $1 per hundred when the Hudson river stock could hardly be moved at all.

Jegen, who has been at 96 State street for a year, will move May 1 to 31 Madison street, near Wabash, where he will have much larger quarters.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving very heavy shipments of bulbous stock from Tamaroa, Ill.

Wieter Bros. have sold about all the carnation cuttings they care to spare. They expect to plant out over half a million.

One of the week's visitors is Harry E. Felger, Geneseo, Ill., grower of gladioli.

PATERSON, N. J.—Edward Sceery is to open a first-class flower store at Main and Bloomfield avenues, Passaic.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Henry Hession is preparing to erect an addition to cover 125x135 at Lenox road and East Forty-eighth street. Hot-water heat will be used.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Easter Market.

The greatest church festival of the year, with its attendant throngs, music and flowers, has been more universally observed this year than ever before. The enormous increase in the Philadelphia market makes it difficult to give an accurate report of the business done in Easter plants and flowers. One man's experience is exactly the opposite of another's. Taking the consensus of opinion, it is safe to say that the plant business was larger than ever before. There were more plants grown, they were better in quality, and there were more sold. The weather up to Sunday was ideal. The retail stores handled just as many plants as it was possible for them to deliver. The balance went on the street in such great quantities that many persons who did not visit other localities expressed the opinion that the street vendors were taking the business from the stores. The absurdity of this idea was quickly demonstrated by visiting the stores, which had choice blooming plants packed like sardines in a box in their greenhouses or annexes during the middle of the week, and by Sunday morning practically everything had disappeared except in some cases a small supply utilized for wedding decorations this week.

It is difficult to particularize regarding the varieties. The list given in this column last season, with the addition of a few novelties mentioned recently, will practically cover the ground. Further than that it may be added that the retailers, by the aid of our energetic supply men, created combinations that fully rivaled the dazzling Easter bonnets in their effects.

Azaleas continue leaders and were very fine. Both lilies and hydrangeas were more plentiful, it seemed, than last season. Spiræas were exceptionally well done and were in great demand for church decorations. Ramblers have a strong following, but do not create the furore of their novelty year. Of the other plants, rhododendrons and genistas were most in evidence. Tulips and daffodils in pots and pans were rather scarce, but hyacinths were plentiful and of fine quality.

Despite the tremendous quantity of plants marketed, the business done in cut flowers was eminently satisfactory. Barring cut Easter lilies and calla lilies, it cannot be said that any variety of cut flowers were actually scarce, though more could have been used at certain times. The surprise of the market was the heavy demand for Easter lilies. Opinions differ as to the supply. Not so many arrived in the city as had been expected and the demand was so heavy that prices advanced toward Saturday evening, when 15 cents could readily have been realized for good flowers. Calla lilies were scarce all week, good flowers bringing satisfactory prices.

Another surprise was the rather moderate supply of American Beauty roses.

The demand for red roses was excellent and Beauties advanced to prices above those listed in this column, $7.50 per dozen being realized in many cases. The Brunners, from Graham's, at Logan, were of excellent quality and helped to fill the place of Beauties in some cases. Liberties were rather scarce and there were very few Richmonds. Kaiserins were in over-supply in some cases, prices falling badly. The general rose market dragged until Saturday, when at fair prices there was a general exodus, a few of the left-overs going on the street.

Carnations started at high prices but failed to keep the pace and by the end of the week prices had sagged badly in many cases. Violets were in good supply and heavy demand. Prices varied considerably, the best doubles bringing $1.50, while some fairly presentable stock was sold at 50 cents. The shipments from Rhinebeck did not all arrive in good condition, Hightstown flowers averaging better.

Valley was in very heavy supply and, while it could hardly be called "a lily of the valley Easter," still there were great quantities used. Sweet peas were popular and fairly plentiful; prices averaged lower than last Easter, though $2 per hundred was obtained for quite a few. Daffodils and daisies sold fairly well, at good prices. Gardenias were in plentiful supply, ranging from $1.50 to $3 per dozen.

Greens were unexpectedly plentiful. A shortage in Asparagus plumosus in some cases was filled with A. Sprenger, but smilax, at the advanced prices, seemed pretty nearly equal to the demand. A good deal of wild smilax was also consumed.

To sum up, it might be well for growers to notice that this Easter brought out more strongly than ever the folly of sending flowers at the last moment to the wholesale houses. I do not mean by this to say that the evil of holding or pickling stock was seriously felt, but many growers send in rather green flowers that are often badly wilted, at the last moment, expecting them to bring Easter prices. Such stock is unsatisfactory to every one handling it, and invariably disappointing. It is also of interest to note that the best prices, as a rule, were realized on Wednesday, Thursday, and in some cases on Friday, while on Saturday prices declined all along the line. The reason for this is that the demand out of town is over, and in town the retailers anticipate their wants and except in cases of dire necessity will not be bothered securing extra stock until their entire supply is delivered.

Various Notes.

Paul F. Richter, manager for the Henry F. Michell Co., has resigned his position to take effect on April 28. Mr. Richter's resignation is due to ill health and is greatly regretted by both H. F. and S. J. Michell. He started with the firm as a boy eleven and a half years ago, sweeping out the store, doing odd jobs. By hard work and ability he steadily advanced to his present position. Mr. Richter will take a two weeks' vacation and, on May 15, he will begin work as general manager for the American Horticultural Distributing Co., of Martinsburg, W. Va.

There are a number of weddings and other social festivities this week that are keeping the retailers actively engaged.

The formula given by Benj. Dorrance before the New York Florists' Club, published in the REVIEW of last week, is so good that it will bear repetition. He advises beginners that the road to success is most likely to be attained by "constant watchfulness, great care, the utmost cleanliness and steady work."

Bayersdorfer & Co. report the largest Easter ever had and are still very busy filling orders. Mr. Bayersdorfer will sail for Europe on the Kurfurst about May 1.

John Lucas & Co. report further advances in the price of greenhouse glass. They strongly advise intending buyers to purchase at once, as indications point to still higher prices. The third or B quality is more than proportionately lower than the second or A quality, owing to a scarcity of the latter.

A number of buyers of hard coal were disappointed in not receiving late shipments just before the strike, due to the railroads seizing them by right of eminent domain "from necessity," or in plain English, to store them in anticipation of high prices, should the strike continue for any length of time.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

After a week of anxiety and worry, to say nothing of working almost day and night, we have again survived that towering land-mark in the florists' business, that day of all other days, Easter. Many are the sighs of relief, now that the strain is over; but above it all, everyone joins in the refrain: "It was the greatest Easter ever." The demand was something wonderful, but the one reason which tended to make such a healthy increase over other years was the fact that there were so many more flowers. Never has the supply been so large. Most of the growers managed to have a crop in full blast.

Bulbous stock was in all its glory and never in my experience has it sold to such good advantage. Lilies sold out very quickly and there were calls that could not be met. Tulips ran a good second and Dutch hyacinths were right up with them.

Roses were in good supply, but I am sorry to state that a large proportion of those received in the wholesale district were almost beyond recognition, owing to the salting process they had been subjected to. Quite a number actually had to be thrown on the dump. Will growers never learn?

Carnations came very near being equal to the demand and the stock was comparatively fresh. The bright days made a vast difference in the supply of this flower. Violets were in large supply and many thousands sold to good advantage. The supply of green goods was also entirely adequate.

The shipping trade was unusually heavy.

It would be incomplete, were I to close these remarks without saying a word or two about the Jabez Elliot flower market. Readers who have not visited this market can scarcely appreciate its extent, and for those who have, I will say that never before were so many flowers and plants seen under its roof. It was a mass of blooms from one end to the other, a sight unequaled, perhaps, in this big country of ours, and one well worth going many miles to see. Second only to the wonderful display of flowers was the crowd which thronged the building. There was scarcely room in which to breathe. The amount of business done can only be guessed. Suffice it to say that at closing time there was scarcely a plant or even a bloom left to tell the tale. The stand-holders are almost as one voice in declaring the business this year a healthy advance over last year.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. There are a number of important subjects to be discussed, among them being the flower show to be held in August, during the Fall Festival. This subject will be of interest to all growers and store men, as over $1,000 will be offered in premiums for cut flower and design displays. A large attendance is hoped for.

The retailers report increased business in flowering plants. They were all well stocked and say sales were more brisk than usual.

MARQUETTE, MICH.—The Stafford greenhouse will move its downtown branch store from the building occupied by the Western Express Co. to a new location in the Manhard building. More floor and window space is available in the new location.

FAIRMONT, W. VA.—Herman Schlachter, who for nine months has been foreman for H. G. Fleming, has returned to Winton Place, O., where he was in business for many years. A nearby chemical works rendered his place no longer habitable. He sued the concern and the case was recently settled out of court by the purchase of the property, Mr. Schlachter to remove the greenhouses. He will shortly resume business at a new location.

GOVERNOR HERRICK

The New Single Violet

Did you know that the Governor Herrick Violet was the freest bloomer ever originated, and has the largest open flower borne on a stem that is heavy enough to hold the flower erect and that the color is the most intense purple of any violet, that we never have shown it to any one, whom it did not please, and that at the Philadelphia Spring Show it was awarded a certificate of merit and at the Boston Carnation Convention it received special mention, and down at Louisville, Ky., it was one of the sensations of the exhibition, and that it will please you? Write us and let us send you a description of this violet or a small bunch of the violets and then you will order some; the prices of this violet are $2.00 per doz.; $10.00 per 100 plants; $75.00 per 1000 plants. Let us figure on your order.

by hand in the brief period available for the work.

The automatic packeting machine was the invention of Joseph C. Brown, of Burlington, Vt., who built his first machine in 1885. It little resembles the present model. It was not until 1892 that the Brown Bag-Filling Machine Co. was organized at Fitchburg and the first improved machines put out. The first practical machine was leased to Burpee & Co., and the first of the improved model to Henderson & Co. Now practically every one packeting any considerable quantity of seeds is using one or more. The accompanying illustration shows one of the latest installations, operated by Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago.

The present-day machine has a capacity of an average of 3,000 uniformly measured sealed packets per hour. Every action of the machine is automatic, it being only necessary for the operator to keep the seed hopper full and the guide box full of bags. The machine measures the material, opens the bag, fills it, gums it, turns the flap, presses it hard down and holds till it sticks fast, making the packet secure for the finest seeds. Each machine carries a counter. A motor of only one-eighth horse-power is required to drive the machine.

In the last two or three years the Brown Bag-Filling Machine Co. has had its imitators and has been put to considerable trouble and expense in the prosecution of infringements, but recently secured a decision from the United States Supreme Court confirming its patents broadly. B. F. Brown, president of the company, says that, gratifying as is the decision, a factor which they do not fail to appreciate is the cordial loyalty of the seed trade, which has been with them throughout.

BEAN SAMPLES WANTED.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. have suggested that you may be able to aid me in obtaining samples of several old varieties of beans which I wish to get, but which are not on the general market. They are Jackson's Wonder bush lima, Burpee's White Zulu, Flageolet, White's Prolific pole bean, any sort of lima bean not white seeded, a bean in New England called Spruce gum bean, a tree bean with white, yellow-eyed seed. And any sort of bean not on the general market. Belle Plaine, Ia. H. R. MOSNOT.

SEED TESTING.

The Seed Laboratory, Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has sent out the following circular:

Address all samples and correspondence concerning seed testing as above.

Samples are often lost and reports delayed on account of improper address.

Accompany all samples with a statement as to the exact purpose for which they are sent:

1. Examination for presence of adulterants or dodder.

2. Test for mechanical purity.

3. Test for germination.

The examination of samples for the presence of adulterants or dodder requires but little time and will be given precedence over all other work. All samples sent for this purpose will be examined at once and reports sent by mail or on special request by telegraph at the expense of the receiver.

The test for mechanical purity requires the separation of the samples into three parts:

1. Pure seed (the kind being examined).

2. Foreign seed (all seeds not of the kind being examined).

3. Sticks, stones, dirt and chaff, the determination of the weed seeds present, and the percentage by weight of each of the three parts.

These tests require considerable time and can only be made by experts. The facilities of this laboratory will not permit more than five such tests to be made for any one firm or individual in any one calendar month. These tests will be made and reports sent as promptly as possible and in the order in which the samples are received.

The test for germination consists in determining the percentage of a sample of seed which will germinate under favorable conditions. These tests of most seeds are easily made by anyone, although some seeds, including many grasses, are somewhat difficult to test, requiring exact conditions.

Samples will be tested in the order in which they are received, and not more than five tests for germination will be made for any one firm or individual in any one calendar month.

it not for the low prices they would receive scant attention. The prices for mangel are higher and trade in this article is likely to very considerably improve in the near future, as stocks are not so large as anticipated.

Complaints are heard from many quarters of failures of early sowings of various seeds and a further order to the seedsmen is required to fill up the gap.

German seed houses report that stocks of flower seeds and vegetable seeds have cleared out well. Perennial grass seed is active. Some firms have exhausted their supplies of meadow foxtail and prices of some varieties, such as tall oat grass and cocksfoot show an upward tendency. Clover seeds keep firm. Sufficient time has not elapsed since the late blizzards to judge to what extent these have affected next season's seed crops throughout Europe, but the outlook for biennials is by no means encouraging, as many of the stocks are killed outright and others severely crippled.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued The Lawn, by L. C. Corbett, which will be sent on request to any address. It is designated as Farmer's Bulletin No. 248.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

A record sale of orchids, so far as high prices go, was recently held by Protheroe & Morris at their salesrooms in Cheapside, £5,340 being received for a lot of only 122 plants. Odontoglossum Pittianum, a plant with three bulbs and only two with leaves, brought slightly above £120. For Odontoglossum crispum F. K. Sander, with only one bulb and one growth, £840 was obtained. For an Odontoglossum crispum Abner Hassell, with four bulbs, just under £50 was paid, while an Odontoglossum crispum Persimmon with three bulbs was knocked down for a few shillings over £30. For Odontoglossum crispum Pittiae and O. crispum Fearnly Sander £420 and £315 was realized, the latter with only one old bulb. Quite a number of other types of odontoglossum made between £70 and £100 each. The plants were from the well known Rosslyn collection of H. T. Pitt. Sales of orchids in England have been very common of late, but such prices as described above are not of frequent occurrence and when such high prices are maintained throughout the sale, it is a sure sign of better times for trade generally.

Speaking of orchids, advantage has been taken by a west end florist of the fact of Mr. Chamberlain's propensity to always wear an orchid in his buttonhole, and when Mr. Balfour also wore an orchid during his campaign, the florist referred to displayed a buttonhole made up of dendrobium and fern with a card attached "As worn by Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain."

A very distinct and new variety of Freesia refracta is recorded, the color a purple violet with white throat and a blotch of yellow at the base similar to the old variety of freesia. It is said to produce one-third more blooms on a spike. As a novelty and pot plant it will be useful and enjoy a certain amount of popularity, but the color is entirely against it competing with the old Freesia refracta alba as a cut bloom.

A to us new variety of carnation of the American section is being introduced to the English trade by A. F. Dutton, Iver, Bucks, in Nelson Fisher. Mr. Dutton has a grand collection of American carnations and makes a commercial specialty of them. He was one of the first to take up their culture in England on a large scale, and is also now disposing of a considerable quantity of young plants of leading sorts to other market men in England.

Prices of cut bulbous stock are keeping up better than was generally considered they would. Huge quantities are coming in from the Channel Isles, Lincolnshire and other growing centers. The supply is probably somewhat larger than previous years, but taken on the whole prices are more satisfactory. It is noticeable that both early forcers and outdoor growers cultivate hardly any other sorts than the heavy and the large growing narcissi, such as Emperor, Sir Watkin, Golden Spur, etc. Of course poeticus is an exception. Such sorts as the Leedsii type are hardly ever seen in the markets and what few there are generally make high prices. No variety is better adapted for forcing than Mrs. Langtry. It can easily be had in bloom in January and is particularly free flowering; as many as five to seven blooms can be had from a single first-class bulb. This sort would prove a profitable market variety if used in larger quantities and would be a great change from the everlasting yellow and sulphur trumpets.

THE "seed special" is an institution of the western railroads to demonstrate to the farmer how best to cultivate his land. These trains are maintained by nearly all the western lines, but the idea that they could be useful in the east has only just dawned. The Boston & Maine is the first eastern line to equip a farmers' special, a train of five cars, which is to be sent through Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The European travel already has set in and after Easter it will be on in full force. It will pay you to post steamer sailings in your window this summer as a reminder to your patrons. The Easter Trade.

We have only been in touch with a few of our brother florists so far and will not attempt to report fully on the great event.

The first three days of the week were dark, gloomy and rainy; then came Thursday, Friday and Saturday, fine, bright and warm, ideal not only to sell but to deliver. Those who depended on Sunday business from people visiting cemeteries were disappointed, for Sunday turned out to be cold, raw and right down miserable, but take it altogether we must be well satisfied with the elements and hope other localities were as fortunate. We can't expect to be increasing our business by leaps and bounds every year, yet if it could be accurately figured out I feel sure the whole amount of sales would be found to be at least ten per cent ahead of any former year. We have added 15,000 to our population and all hands feel prosperous. There are few unemployed, all of which helps more or less to induce people to spend something on luxuries.

Miss Rachel Rebstock said that sales of plants were far ahead of anything in her experience, but on cut flowers she thinks there was no increase.

Mr. Snell, of S. A. Anderson's force, was delighted with the business in all departments and said that, although their stock was large and in prime condition, there was not enough left to load a baby go-cart.

W. J. Palmer & Son had the largest stock of lilies and enough, as did several others, while with many they were scarce, but when several car-loads arrived at Wm. Kasting's, from Cromwell, Conn., there were enough for everybody.

Schwerdt & Berner supplied the stores with very well grown hydrangeas, immense heads of bloom, but it is not at all a popular plant in this city. Rhododendrons sold well and so did azaleas. There were extra fine Gladstone spiræas grown here and they went well. The cytisus is almost a played-out plant and the Crimson Rambler is scarcely as popular as it has been. We have to grow Lady Gay or the Farquhar. Pans of Murillo and Couronne d'Or tulips and superb pans of hyacinths sold well. A noticeable increase in hybrid roses, grown by the William Scott Co. and Collins & Forbach, of Pine Ridge, were in great demand. Nothing sold better.

Violets were all the rage. Never were so many handled. W. J. Palmer received 50,000 on Saturday night, but he had none to spare Sunday morning and other firms sold nearly up to that mark.

Carnations of finest quality came in from the rural districts. None were better than came from Corfu. We did not hear of any scarcity of good roses. Among bulbous cut stuff Von Sion narcissus was a decided favorite.

A novelty in plants was a fine lot of standard lilacs handled by President Neubeck.

Everyone should be satisfied. Delivery was mostly very satisfactory and there are few telephone calls at present; those sweet little messages that sound like this: "Hello! I ordered a lilac sent to Mrs. Snodgrass and they never got it." Or: "We had a beautiful pan of hyacinths sent to our house Saturday night with no card and we can't think who remembered us. Will you please look up and let us know who sent it?" All went well and all the pleasure and most of the profit is in doing business in a satisfactory way. Mistakes, kicks and blunders are miserable and turn your hair white, if there is any left to turn.

KANSAS CITY.

Assignment of The Shaeffer Co.

On Monday the Chas. A. Shaeffer Floral Co. made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. The assignee is W. W. Filkin, 510 American Bank building. No statement is made as to the amount of liabilities or assets.

C. A. Shaeffer's embarking in the trade was with a blare of trumpets which resounded from Kansas City to New York. He was lauded as the type of wealthy business man who turns to the florists' business as a polite occupation for energies so long successfully active that idleness is irksome. It was asserted that he had "money to burn;" and people believed it, for he said so himself. He opened a wholesale and a retail store at 805 Walnut street, and built a range of glass with the announcement that it was only the nucleus for a plant which would make Kansas City the cut flower center of the west. The wholesale store was disposed of some weeks ago, to the Western Cut Flower Commission Co., W. A. Bastian, manager, but this was subsequently closed, Mr. Bastian starting for himself at 1303 Baltimore avenue.

The assignee states that the assets of the company consists of "a very full greenhouse," which is good for an assignment the morning after Easter. The assignee asserts that if creditors are lenient the assets will be more than enough to meet all liabilities.

Various Notes.

L. D. Lane has become manager for the Kansas City Carnation Co., 1303 Baltimore avenue, having greenhouses at Pope Station, Kan.

PRINCETON, ILL.—Carl Ericson is making some extensive improvements at his greenhouses on South street. The old houses are entirely too small for Mr. Ericson's large and growing business. He is now erecting a modern and strictly first-class range to cover a ground space of 113x136 feet. He expects as soon as the new building is complete to tear down the old houses and move his stock to the new ones.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE Theodosia B. Shepherd Co., Ventura, Cal., has just issued a catalogue which shows the Pacific coast to be keeping up with the east in the matter of good printing for trade literature.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—The Leedham Bulb Co. has been reorganized and considerably strengthened financially. The new officers are Montroyd Sharpe, president; E. Leedham, vice-president; O. J. Lincoln, secretary; Henry Willey, treasurer. C. E. Lilly is superintendent. In the past narcissi and dahlias have been the principal stock produced, but tulips, hyacinths, lilies and gladioli will now be added. Additional land has been secured and the company now has sixteen acres of land especially suited for bulbs.

FLORISTS' MOSS.

The scarcity of florists' moss has prompted some of the dealers to send for their supplies to Washington or Oregon. The article from that neighborhood is not so valuable as the native moss. On account of the excess of moisture it grows very coarse and stringy and cannot be used to the same advantage as the local variety, and for hanging baskets and other places where it is expected to be kept green for some time it is of little or no use.

For the past five or six years the gathering and selling of moss has been in the hands of various Italian firms, which have practically a monopoly of it. As the regions close to the railroads have been denuded for years, there are but few places left that can be profitably worked. Far removed from the beaten paths there are, of course, many thousands of sacks still to be had, but as the hauling is an important item when bulk is considered, such localities are not very popular.

On account of the fact that in central and southern California the native mosses make but a very meager growth, it takes four years before the ground can be covered again to advantage.

The best quality of moss is taken from our native live oaks, and the poorest quality is found on moist rocks. The latter is usually very short, with quantities of gravel and soil mixed with it. If the conditions are favorable, the men who gather moss can easily pick twenty-five sacks a day. If there is any moisture in it, it must be spread on the ground until perfectly dry and then sacked. The usual price charged by the wholesalers is from 40 to 50 cents per sack, each sack weighing in the neighborhood of fifteen pounds. It has been the fashion with the Oregon tree moss to bale it in large bundles, but there seems always to be more or less moisture, and as a result considerable stock has come from that locality entirely unfit for use. From $40 to $50 per ton is the price asked for moss in this shape.

Moss has not as yet entered so largely into the packing of plants, etc., as it does in the eastern states, on account of its high price, and the chances are that it will never again be very plentiful in this neighborhood. With each successive year the gatherers will have to go deeper into the forest, and this, together with the destruction of much of our native

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Writing just in the Easter rush, business is fair along general lines. There do not seem to be so many shipping orders as we have formerly enjoyed. All kinds of flowers are plentiful and cheap. Carnations are to be had in any quantity and at very low prices. Roses, although they have kept up in price, are in good supply and from present indications they will be very cheap in a few days. For once at least in the history of San Francisco there are plenty of Easter lilies, both as cut blooms and potted. The former cost the dealers from $2 to $3 per dozen and the latter from $6 to $9 per dozen. The country is covered with calla lilies and they can be had at from 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Quantities of them are always used in church decorations.

Green stuff, both cultivated and wild, is in good supply, the only article that is scarce being wild maidenhair.

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has recovered from a slight indisposition and departed for the southern portion of the state.

Pelicano & Co. will shortly open a much larger establishment three doors from their present location. They will handle seeds and bulbs in addition to their flower trade.

G. Rossi will depart next week on a European trip. He expects to be absent from San Francisco for four months.

Chas. Schultz is up from San Jose. He will remain in town for two weeks.

John Vallance, superintendent of the Cox Seed Co.'s plant department, reports heavy spring sales in all lines of ornamental stock.

Moss is scarce. On account of the continuous wet weather the price has advanced to 50 cents per sack.

There is no excess of azaleas in bloom for Easter. With most of the growers, well flowered plants are scarce. The warm weather in the early part of March had the effect of rushing the season and the plants in most instances bloomed before they were wanted.

D. J. Richards will visit Goldfield and Tonopah, Nevada, to look over the ground preparatory to opening a floral establishment there.

KOCHIA SCOPARIA.

How is Kochia scoparia grown and what is the best soil for it? J. H. C.

This annual is often known as the mock or summer cypress because it resembles a closely clipped evergreen. We have never grown it, but remember seeing it at Washington, D. C., last summer and thought it a very decorative and desirable annual plant. The seeds may be sown in the greenhouse in April or in the open ground in May. The plants should stand about two feet apart. Any ordinary garden soil will grow it, but a light texture is preferred. We learn that this species has small, light-green foliage, very compact, which gives it its familiar name. At the end of August it becomes covered with its minute but countless flowers.
 W. S.

MISHAWAKA, IND.—C. L. Powell has begun work on an addition to his plant. The plans include two new greenhouses, a boiler house, bulb cellar and a salesroom 12x32 feet.

CONNERSVILLE, IND.—A short time ago Henry Rieman sold his greenhouses and business to his son, Charles A. Rieman, who now has about 25,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Rieman has been in ill health for some time and has not been able to be out of the house for weeks prior to April 12.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

It is stated that the peach buds in Michigan suffered to some extent in the March cold snap.

THE invoice value of the trees and shrubs imported through the port of New York last week was $19,872.

THE nurseries at Monroe, Mich., have had a busy three weeks, the season's shipments having been the heaviest ever sent out.

"THE Control of Apple Bitter-rot," by W. M. Scott, is a bulletin by the U. S. Department of Agriculture which will interest nurserymen.

FROM Coeur d'Alene, Wash., comes the report that the season's planting of fruit trees is five times that of any previous spring. The demand for cherry trees could not be supplied.

THE RICHARDSON PEONIES.

It is now over thirty years since I began to study and experiment with peonies. Great changes have occurred during this time. Almost all of the best varieties of that day would now be considered very common. About twenty-five years ago the late Charles M. Hovey, of Boston, one of the foremost horticulturists of his time, had a collection of peonies probably as good as any in the country. He imported from the best European nurseries; and some of his varieties were really magnificent. The old festiva maxima was as good with him as it has been since; but he had the misfortune which most of us experienced later, in that he got his varieties badly mixed; and often plants imported from different nurserymen, under the same name, proved to be entirely different varieties. He imported the variety Mme. Breon, and we propagated and sold it by the hundred; a dark purplish red flower, a good variety in its way, but not at all the Mme. Breon of the present day.

About twenty-three years ago John Richardson, of Dorchester, near Boston, then a man of more than 80 years, raised a number of seedling peonies which were remarkable in that they were for the most part late, vigorous, free-flowering and fragrant. All the varieties, with one or two exceptions, were of a beautiful silvery pink, or varying from flesh to rose. In 1886 we procured the five of these varieties which he considered best; and in thirteen years from one plant of each we propagated thousands, which we sold all over this country and in Europe; and we think that every plant sold was true to name. The varieties obtained from Mr. Richardson were Dorchester, Grandiflora, Norfolk, Perfection and Rubra Superba.

We have been thus particular in regard to the history of the Richardson's seedlings because certain parties in England have listed several of them as their own seedlings. In justice to Mr. Richardson, this mistake should be corrected.

Six years ago, on account of ill health, our entire stock of peonies was sold to a Chicago party. About that time, however, my eldest son, George C. Thurlow, concluded to go into the nursery business also, and we have been trying ever since then to get up a stock of the very best herbaceous peonies to be obtained anywhere. We ordered, generally in small quantities, from the leading nurseries in France, England and this country, and quite largely from Japan. When they bloomed (in two or three years) we ordered more largely of those varieties which we considered the best for this section; but we had the misfortune, in several importations, to get varieties entirely different from those we ordered, and, in one instance, to receive a shipment badly mixed.

Our peonies are raised in a very simple way. Any good loamy land, good enough for corn or vegetables, we consider good enough for peonies. We sometimes plow two furrows deep, and set the plants quite closely together. Our rule is to fertilize the land at least one season before planting the roots; and we never, under any circumstances, put manure or other fertilizer directly under or among the roots at the time of planting. For light land we consider peat muck, well exposed and decayed, the very best fertilizer for small peonies or other small plants. It produces an abundance of roots, which we consider of more consequence than extra large, often superfluous, roots.

T. C. THURLOW.

ANOTHER INVESTIGATION.

A congressional investigation of the Department of Agriculture was set in motion March 27. It was begun in a conference between Representative Littlefield, chairman; representatives Davis and Samuel, members of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Agricultural Department, on the one hand and Secretary Wilson, Assistant Secretary Hays and other officials of the Department on the other. At the request of Chairman Littlefield, Secretary Wilson will at once forward to the House Committee a statement giving detailed information relative to expenditures. This will be followed by hearings before the committee, at which Secretary Wilson and other employees of the Department will be asked to appear.

ROOTING BEGONIAS.

We have not been very successful in rooting begonias. Will you please state the temperature best suited to root them, both temperature of house and sand?

K.

You should state which species or type of begonias you are rooting. There is a wide difference in species. There is the Rex, or ornamental section; the shrubby, the tuberous-rooted and the semituberous-rooted.

If it is the shrubby section, of which we will take Pres. Carnot and incarnata as types, then we have found some peculiarities about rooting them. In January, February and March they root fairly well with the sand 65 to 70 degrees and nearly the same top heat, but if cooler they root slowly. Then, again, in April, May and June, when the houses are quite warm and the temperature of the sand is on the average less than the atmosphere, they root quickly and well.

This is contrary to conditions that suit the great majority of soft-wooded plants and can only be accounted for by the supposition that the begonia, being a tropical plant, or at least sub-tropical, wants at all times a good genial heat, which in our greenhouses it often does not get.

W. S.

CHESTER, PA.—William Fowler, of Holly Oak, Del., formerly a resident of this borough, has purchased land on the Smedley tract, Morton, where he has started to break ground for the erection of eight greenhouses. When the new houses are completed he will discontinue his plant in Delaware and remove to Morton. His brother, Richard Fowler, of Sharon Hill, will operate the latter establishment.

The Easter Trade.

Trade the past week has of course been good. Easter stock was abundant. All the growers were successful in getting in their lilies for Easter. The majority of the stock was good. The inferior stock was disposed of on the street during the few hours of good weather which we had Saturday. Azaleas were handled quite heavily and were disposed of to good advantage. Spiræas, rhododendrons, hybrid roses and hydrangeas also sold well and one of our largest dealers was practically out of them by Thursday. Bulbous stock in pots was slow sale and all dealers still have some on hand. Some choice Easter novelties, such as violets in fancy baskets, sold very well.

Cut flowers were in big demand Saturday but from the appearance of the different stores Sunday morning, all were not successful in disposing of their stock. The price on roses was if anything too low. Brides and Maids sold at $1.50 and $2 per dozen; Richmonds, Gates and Killarneys at $2.50. The advance in prices was indeed small on every item, possibly on account of there being large quantities of stock on the market.

St. Paul.

The Swanson Floral Co. put up a very nice display, and handled a large number of Easter novelties. The bulb stock was fine and good sales are reported.

L. L. May & Co. handled a large number of baskets made up of different flowering plants, which sold well. J. W.

Hoffman, who has charge of their retail department, was thoroughly satisfied and reports a large gain both in the city and country trade over last year.

C. F. Vogt reports a gain over last season, both on cut flowers and plants. He had a large number of church orders.

E. F. Lemke disposed of about everything that looked like a flower; his store Sunday looked as though a cyclone had struck it.

Holm & Olson had a branch store which was used entirely for Easter plants.

Minneapolis.

Donaldson's department store, on account of lack of room, was compelled to rent an addition in which a grand display was made. Friday they advertised spiræas at 40 cents each, which attracted a large crowd and which no doubt sold considerable other stock. Ralph Latham said that business was good.

The Rosary reports a good business but has a grievance against the Greeks, who are directly opposite and sell at close figures.

John Monson says everything sold well and has but a few lilies on hand, which can be used to good advantage.

The sweet pea registered by A. C. Zvolanek as Mrs. T. J. Dolansky should be Mrs. F. J. Dolansky. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

THE YELLOW SEDUM.

Please tell me about propagating and growing the yellow sedum. J. H. C.

We could speak more definitely if we knew the species you allude to. Sedum is a numerous genus with over 100 species, many of them yellow. Sedum acre, the well known stone crop, is one of the most familiar. It is of creeping habit and much used for covering bare spots in cemeteries and for carpet bedding. Any garden soil will do for it. In fact, a rather poor stony soil is best, and anything but a wet or damp place in winter. It can be divided in the spring, or rather small pieces can be taken off older plants and put into the ground. If we wanted a large lot of this plant we should insert small pieces in flats and when well rooted place the flats in the cold frame for the winter. They are mostly all natives of the temperate or frigid zones.

Years ago we grew a sedum for hanging baskets. We knew it as S. Sieboldii, but its correct name is Japonicum. There is also a variegated form of it called aurea marginata because the variegation is a light yellow. It was propagated in the fall, several cuttings in 3-inch pots, and then kept at a low temperature during winter and started growing with heat in April. It also has yellow flowers. W. S.

CHESHIRE, CONN.—Nettie C. Smith is doing a nice local trade. Her establishment is not large, and she does all the growing with one helper for the heavy work.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW the best in every respect of any florists' paper; it is very helpful to me.—J. N. HOLLAND, Greenville, S. C.

Some People have taken our advice as published in these columns recently and are buying My Maryland for trial. We reiterate here—if it succeeds with you as it does with us, it will prove the best white carnation you ever grew. Despite the variety's apparent failure in several places, we strongly advise all growers to give it a trial. We have been frank about its faults as developed in other places. We doubt if these will develop in many places.

Jessica we believe, will succeed generally and will prove to be the best red and white variegated ever disseminated. Few varieties show as strong constitution as this one does and it is a wonderful producer. Extra fine stock of both varieties ready now. R. O., $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Pot plants, $3.00 per 100 extra.

LAST CALL

ABUNDANCE

Rooted cuttings from the soil, price, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. Carnations have been scarce for Easter around New York, especially whites. Abundance has done honor to its name by providing thousands of blooms for Easter, it will continue to do so until it is time to make room for the young plants from the field. Come and see them, they are as full of shoots and buds as ever they were at any time this season.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The regular meeting of the Hartford Florists' Club took place April 13, President Huss in the chair. Owing to the rush of work incidental to Easter, the attendance was not large.

Francis Canning, instructor in horticulture at the State Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., was present and gave an interesting address, explaining the scope of the curriculum in the various branches as taught at Amherst and compared the methods of imparting instruction in this country with those which generally obtain in Europe. Considering that at the various State Agricultural Colleges a general education is given with special training along horticultural or agricultural lines, and that for many operations the student is paid a regular wage, the youth of America has advantages not usually obtainable in Europe.

Mr. Canning closed his remarks with the truism that, notwithstanding the facilities offered to acquire a scientific training in the several branches, ultimate success still depends on the man himself. Mr. Canning was awarded a hearty vote of thanks.

A discussion ensued as to the advisability of amalgamating the Florists' Club with the Connecticut Horticultural Society, and this important step will be considered at future meetings. A. C.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The Wm. Rothke Floral Co. is adding to its plant this spring and building a new, detached, fire-proof boiler house for its steam plant. The new houses, four in number, will be each 27x300 feet, ridge and furrow plan, and will be used for roses and carnations. The material is being furnished by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, whose sketch was reproduced in the Courier-Herald of April 8, occupying nearly half a page.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Bedding stock is being planted out, including coleus and alternantheras. The Easter business does not amount to much in this section, but there is a great amount of bedding stock sold. Stock is looking fine and the indications are that this will be the banner year on bedding plants.

Carnations are coming along beautifully since the sun commenced to shine, but for three weeks things had a gloomy look. It has been impossible for either farmers or gardeners to get into the field and it is feared that in case we have much more rain the corn will be replaced by cotton and there will be more cotton raised than ever has been in the history of this state.

There has been quite an amount of funeral work and good prices are realized. It is hard to conjecture what the amount of business will be here in a couple of years. It is yet in its infancy. Texas bids fair to be the coming state in a floral point of view. Where the wholesaler ignored this place some couple of years back and what few came met with discouragement, today finds almost every reliable house represented, and all report good business. Where a few years ago the grower had but a small house or two, today the same florist has four and five houses and even then hasn't enough room for his stock. Late, mild winters and early springs give the grower here the advantage over his northern brother as far as expense for fuel is concerned and it will only be a matter of time when he will get as much for his stock.

NARCISSUS.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

A single greenhouse thirty feet wide and four miles long given to growing roses, with a few carnations, is what will be seen in this city before the end of the season, provided one in his mind's eye places all the houses used for this purpose end to end. Three of the concerns here have announced that they will make additions to their plants during the summer and when they are completed there will be sixty-seven houses in all, 30x300 feet and covering a space of over 600,000 square feet.

The additions consist of three houses each by William Dittmann, Benthey-Coatsworth Co. and Weiland & Olinger.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Easter morning found the most tired lot of boys in the flower shops this city has ever seen—and they had good cause to be tired. Notwithstanding that the weather was against us, nearly every shop in the city cleaned up fairly well and all declare it the best Easter to date.

Undoubtedly plants are growing in favor with each year, and with good reason, for you can sell a plant for $2 to $5 that is not only effective and beautiful, but will keep and look well for several days, and the regular flower buyers know this and profit by their knowledge. However, it does not seem to affect the cut flower business, as there are a great number of people who do not belong to the class of regular flower buyers, but always show up at the holiday time with a handful of cards and addresses to which they wish to send the offering of the season.

The weather was bad for the growers until two days before Easter, the result being a good deal of stock came in late Saturday, after the trade had been supplied, but nearly everything cleaned up. Prices were reasonable, nothing being what you would call high. Bulbous stock did not seem to find much favor, except in pots or pans, and is largely dropping out as cut flowers. Violets were very fine and cheap, and immense quantities of them were sold.

There were a great many green hydrangeas in evidence and they were still on hand Monday; plants must have color to sell.

Again the trade is indebted to the express companies for the promptness with which they handled stock. The Adams detailed several men to the florists' shipments.

The retail stores never had as good effects in plant baskets as this year, and they were well repaid for the trouble, as all were sold.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decoration for the Knights Templar reception at Duquesne Gardens, April 17. This was one of the largest affairs held in this city this year, and the boys were pretty tired when they started in on the decorations Sunday, but no doubt did themselves justice. They also had a large wedding for the same day. Hoo-Hoo.

When You

buy tobacco dust to burn from a seedsman, thinking it is THE FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER, ask him if the bags bear our brand, name and address; if they do not, you are getting his substitute for it—ground stems—and not THE FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER made from the pure leaf tobacco, which seedsmen seldom keep, as our price to you and to them is the same. You can try ours for a few cents; let us tell you how.

INSECTICIDES.

Haslam's Insect Powder, an infallible insecticide. Destroys insects injurious to house and garden plants, shrubs, trees, vines, potatoes, melons, cabbage, currants, and vegetables and fruits of all kinds.

Kills green fly on roses and other flowers, insects on quinces and pears. Insects that fly like flea beetles and rose bugs are more difficult to contend against than are caterpillars or slugs. Look often and dust or sprinkle when necessary.

BEST DOUBLE TULIPS.

Murillo is one of the most popular double tulips, and we now have a fine yellow variety of this; but it is Couronne d'Or that is most largely grown, and perhaps one of the very best tulips we have. The color varies a little; from some growers the deep orange has a bronzy tint, but as generally seen, it is much of the same shade as a well colored Marechal Niel rose. Couronne des Roses is very fine. Alba maxima, a good white. Cramoisie Superb, Rex rubrorum and Imperator rubrorum are good crimson scarlets. Raphael is another good rose pink variety. Rose Blanche is a good white. The Tournesols come in early, but they are too heavy, and do not command such good prices as others.

It is one of the most important points to get well matured bulbs for early forcing; and with the best bulbs, much depends upon the treatment. One only has to go around the market to see the very great difference in the quality and color of blooms from different growers. Early potting, in a compost that is fairly good, without containing any strong manures; a good covering of light material to prevent the bulbs starting prematurely, before they are well rooted; and when taken in for forcing, avoid giving too much heat, especially at the start.—Horticultural Advertiser.

The Market.

Everything was ideal for Easter trade. The weather, the supply of stock and the quality were the combination by which the record for Easter sales was broken. Had growers sent in stock earlier they would doubtless have fared better. At the last moment there was a great congestion and average prices were lower than they would have been could this have been avoided. Carnations and bulbous stock were especially abundant. Plants were in popular demand and everything salable found a market. The supply of lily plants was larger than last season and demand was fully equal to supply. Azaleas were somewhat scarce, as most varieties were in too early. The mild weather made it difficult to hold them back.

Various Notes.

In most of the window displays genistas, cyclamens, lilies, rhododendrons, hydrangeas and bulbous stock in pans were used and more attention was paid to trimming plants than in former years. J. Fox, M. A. McKenney and Currie Bros. made artistic displays of plants. Wm. Edlefsen and Mrs. Baumgarten, on the west side, were also well stocked with a fine assortment and found good sales.

Peter Kapsalis' glass store next to the bridge looked gorgeous. Everything except the cash taken in could be seen from the outside, and Peter was busy counting his money late Saturday night.

Jas. Chacona, B. Lambros and Mrs. Ennis made big displays of cut flowers.

Holton & Hunkel Co. had some large shipments of cut stock from Chicago growers and also a good line of miscellaneous plants from their own greenhouses.

C. C. Pollworth Co. hit the market just right on lilies. Their cut of roses and carnations was also heavy.

Robt. Zepnick and Loeffler Bros. are keeping the market supplied with good violets, and their quality of stock is holding out fine.

F. P. Dilger had enough bulbous stock to take care of the demand.

M. A. McKenney sustained quite a loss owing to the runaway of a team with a wagon-load of plants. The stock was ruined.

NEW ORLEANS

Easter in New Orleans is not a day on which as many flowers are bought as in northern cities. The outdoor flowers at this time are so much advanced in bloom that everyone has more or less of a supply for decorations at home or at church. Still there is certainly an extra demand for good blooming stock, and this year seemed to be as good as before.

Department stores on Canal street are quite busy now. D. H. Holmes, who had his plants in charge of H. Papworth, offered a fine lot of astilbe, of the Gladstone variety. The spikes are full and well developed. They also had fine hydrangeas and a general stock of Easter selling plants. U. J. Virgin, Wm. Rehm, Chas. Eble and others also had a fine display in their show cases.

Passing through the garden district a few days ago, we stopped at P. Chopin's, where we learned that he was well satisfied. A few blocks from his place we saw F. Faessel, who was busy erecting outside raised benches on which he intends growing roses. In the middle of the city, where the ground cannot be renewed easily and becomes sour and tight, the idea of growing roses and other stock on elevated benches seems to be full of sense and no doubt his experiments will be closely watched by many florists.

Work is plentiful about private gardens, the scarcity of hands now being the worst drawback. Outside of the general gardeners who follow the business, some regular florists have also quite important jobs on hand.

J. H. Menard has been remodeling the grounds of the Soldiers' Home, on Bayou St. John. The place will be ready for the next convention of the confederate veterans and will be a good attraction for the many visitors.

Abele Bros., have been planting two car-loads of plants and shrubs for a real estate company. M. M. L.

MILWAUKEE.—The board of park commissioners has advertised for bids for the construction of three greenhouses in Mitchell park. One of the conditions specified is that the greenhouses must be completed on or before June 1, 1906.

NORRISTOWN, PA.—Wm. H. Catanese sold out clean for Easter, the sales footing up a better total than ever before. He will add to his glass during the summer.

JOLIET, ILL.—A. F. Longren, formerly at Lockport, Ill., and Peter Olsem, for the past five years with the Chicago Carnation Co. as steam fitter and glazier, have formed a partnership as Longren & Olsem to do a general contracting business in the line of greenhouse erection, glazing and steam fitting.

DETROIT.

The Easter Business.

Reports of an exceptionally good Easter business are heard all over town. Up to Friday evening the weather was exceptionally fine and tended to start the buying earlier than usual. Saturday and Sunday we had cloudy weather with an occasional shower. This hurt the cut flower sales a great deal.

Violets were exceptionally good for this season and sold away beyond all expectations. Roses were also very good, but did not find a ready market. Carnations showed evidence of pickling, and as a result did not give satisfaction to customers. Lilies, both cut and in pots, sold very well, as did all potted plants, especially azaleas, ramblers, lilacs, etc.

Now that Lent is over, parties, receptions, weddings, etc., will have a tendency to add a little variety to business, as lately it has all been funeral work. Stock in general is very good.

Various Notes.

Fred E. Walker, formerly head gardener at the Eastern Michigan Asylum, and who last summer gained national notoriety through being mistreated by officers of the government at Panama, has been appointed manager of the Michigan State Prison farm at Jackson. Mr. Walker will also have charge of the prison greenhouses.

During Easter week E. A. Fetter's window was very tastefully decorated, an immense cross of boxwood studded with lilies and having as a base an assortment of foliage plants, forming a very pretty background.

Philip Breitmeyer has been appointed park and boulevard commissioner, to succeed Robert M. Bolger. This will place Mr. Breitmeyer in complete charge of all the public parks and boulevards in this city, and with the able assistance of Wm. Dilger, who is to act as his assistant, our parks, already well known for their attractiveness, will become doubly so. At present the new commissioner will be somewhat handicapped, as the former one refuses to accept his discharge, as also do some of his subordinates.

BOONE, IA.—Martin J. Lockard has branched out in business, has put in a handsome refrigerator and now carries a good line of cut flowers.

JOHNSTOWN, PA.—Traugott Malbranc secured G. A. R. hall for his Easter display of plants, his store opposite the City hall being entirely inadequate.

Easter Trade.

An enormous business was done. Commencing in real earnest Tuesday afternoon, it culminated in a run of trade on Saturday that was by far the largest ever known in this city. Some say it was a half greater than ever before; but in this all are agreed, it was far and away ahead of any previous Easter. The sale of cut flowers was certainly splendid. All day and evening Saturday the roses and carnations melted away and when midnight came the ice-boxes were empty. Carnations were most in demand; every customer wanted them, and they went fast. In fact, everything found buyers and at the usual good Easter prices. The way flowering plants sold was simply a revelation to the trade; it seemed impossible to satisfy the demand for them. Azaleas, spiræas, ramblers, tulips, hyacinths, cinerarias, in fact, anything in good bloom found places at good prices. It was a great trade, and the craft is indeed happy. ZERO.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—H. H. Potter was very successful with his Easter crops, everything being in fine shape, and did a larger business than ever at this season.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The Lockhart establishment, of which Geo. McLean is manager, had so large a stock for Easter that an annex was rented at 12 South Phelps street.

DENISON, TEX.—E. Farley, of the Denison Greenhouses, says business in March was nearly three times as heavy as in that month last year. Stock is in very good shape.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—The Miles Co. had good lilies for Easter, and could have sold more of them in pots. John Nelson did not have his usual stock of bulbous stock, hyacinths in particular being too early. He had a very heavy trade.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—On April 5 fire in the building occupied by T. F. Keller & Sons did $50,000 damage, the florists escaping with $1,000 loss, covered by insurance. They were compelled to seek a temporary location for the Easter business.

WASHINGTON, PA.—Jos. H. Seaman & Co. report the Easter business the best they ever had. Their supply was larger than ever and they just about cleaned up, at prices a little better than last year because of the high quality of stock. The demand was mostly for flowering plants.

Quality of Materials in a Greenhouse has not only to do with the life of your house, but the life of your plants! Beyond all doubt decaying wood harbors plant pests. Sappy Cypress is soon decayed Cypress. Sap free (not almost free, but free) Cypress is the most lasting of woods; then get your materials of a firm you know, knows what sap free is.

Best Greenhouse Material

The best is the cheapest in the end. "Cheap" greenhouse material is expensive.

It costs just as much to erect houses with poor material as it does with the best—usually more.

The houses must be often repaired and the work and cost of erecting soon repeated.

The progressive florist uses the best as he knows it pays to pay for quality.

Send for an estimate on your present needs and let us tell you about our material—the best material.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE

THERE ARE NO TWO WORDS THAT APPLY AS WELL TO SOME GROWERS

Every one of you growers have a great pride in what you grow; it's doubtful if any profession is as keenly alert to what is doing or as persistently ambitious for results. But by the same token the profession has the strongest sort of prejudices. The kind that frequently leads them to continue erecting houses with cumbersome supports and "old-timey" gutters or some other equally unfortunate thing—just because there are some few things about that house they like—they are "used to." When you get so "used to a thing" that it stands right in the middle of the road of progress, you can depend upon it, your competitor is from that moment getting away your business, enjoying your profits.

Dear Sir:—The refrigerator you built for us recently is proving entirely satisfactory. It maintains a very uniform temperature of 42 degrees, and flowers keep in it well.

We find it well constructed and a highly attractive ornament to our store.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florist and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly,

GREAT DISASTER AT SAN FRANCISCO

A NATIONAL CALAMITY.

During the past week the daily papers have devoted so much space to the great disaster which has overtaken the city of San Francisco that little of a general character need be said. No calamity of like magnitude ever has befallen an American city. So great a portion of the city has been destroyed and so many people driven from their usual walks that it has been impossible for many interested parties to communicate with those whom they sought at San Francisco. The telegraph companies were badly crippled and the rush of business has been so great that a telegram for the REVIEW filed outside the city on Wednesday, April 18, did not reach Chicago until the afternoon of Monday, April 23.

Without in any way minimizing the extent of the great and unparalleled disaster it appears that it has lost nothing in the telling in the newspaper reports. Many buildings are safe which at first were reported destroyed. The map shown on page 1635, this issue, gives an accurate boundary of the burned district. It covers almost all the business district and most of the better residence and closely built portion of the city.

The only florist among the known dead is Frank Parmesia, of Frank & Parodi, on Geary street, who was struck by a falling brick. The loss of life principally was in the picturesque old Mission district south of Market street, where no florists either do business or reside. The deaths were mostly due to the collapse of buildings during the earthquake. There were some casualties during the wild disorder which prevailed when the imminence of the great conflagration was seen and before the troops took control. Not all florists are accounted for, and many employees still are missing, but it is thought all escaped with their lives. Many thousands of people left the city before the fire was under control and have not yet returned. It will be a long time before all are accounted for. Gen. Greely, who has succeeded Gen. Funston in command of the U. S. troops, reports to the War Department April 24 that the total dead are 277. The coroner, however, places the number much higher, saying that 350 bodies have been buried. Even the higher figure is little more than half the deaths in the Chicago theater fire of 1904.

More than half the florists of San Francisco were located in the district which was fire swept. Nearly all were retailers. The glass is in the outlying sections and from all reports has sustained little injury. In some cases the flames crept dangerously near. The fire reached the brow of the great hill above the big range of Sievers & Co. at 1251 Chestnut street, but the greenhouses escaped with a little glass broken.

A large part of the cut flower and plant production for the San Francisco market was carried on in greenhouse establishments located in Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda. These districts did not suffer to any great extent from the earthquake and were spared the ravages of fire. They are, however, left wholly without a market and advices to hand state that immense quantities of cut flowers are being sent to the hospitals and charitable institutions of the neighborhood, there being no other use for them.

In the general chaos which still prevails in the business center of San Francisco it has been impossible to check up each individual establishment, and it is impossible to say just what the loss is. There are many cases where buildings were spared in the center of the devastated districts and it may be that some retail flower stores have escaped total destruction. A number of the modern steel buildings are found to have suffered comparatively little. The Art Floral Co., owned by Peter Matraia, was in the Flood building, which sur-

LATEST DETAILS OF LOSSES.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 21.—The new ferry building, although slightly out of plumb, still keeps watch at the foot of Market street. Smoldering fires can be seen both at the north and south sides of Market street, and the conflagration is over only because there is nothing more to burn. Everything is chaotic. It is impossible to state fully at this time of the losses sustained by the trade.

The magnificent establishments of Sievers & Boland, Pelicano & Co., Podesta & Baldocchi were all swept out of existence early Thursday morning. So fast did the flames spread in the center of town that there was no chance for any of the merchants to save anything in the line of stock or fittings and, with the onrushing flames and air thick with smoke and flying cinders no one thought of anything but the race for life. The earthquake occurred before six o'clock and the fire, which started first on Mission and Third streets, galloped quickly down toward the water front and then over in the direction of the Palace hotel and toward the banking district. With not a drop of water on hand to stay the flames the firemen had to depend on dynamiting buildings in the path of the flames.

vived the conflagration, although a part of its contents was burned.

The rebuilding of the city has already been undertaken. A new San Francisco will rise from the ashes of the old town. It will be a city which will defy another fire and the flower stores will be models of their kind. The business was always prosperous there and it will be more so in years to come, but for a season there is no prospect of business, other than rebuilding, before them.

tain there were no fatalities among the florists, and for this we should be thankful.

The twenty stores, comprising those situated in the central portion of town, were the first to be abandoned, although records and valuables were generally saved. The three I have first mentioned, also Jaeger & Co., Geo. B. Jones & Co., Ephraim & Co., Rossi, Rosaia and The Sutter Street Florists, will have losses running from $3,000 to $10,000 each.

The business was always prosperous there and it will be more so in years to come, but for a season there is no prospect of business, other than rebuilding, before them.

tain there were no fatalities among the florists, and for this we should be thankful.

The twenty stores, comprising those situated in the central portion of town, were the first to be abandoned, although records and valuables were generally saved. The three I have first mentioned, also Jaeger & Co., Coe, R. Jones & Co., Ephraim & Co., Rossi, Rosin and The Satter Street Florists, will have losses running from $3,000 to $10,000 each.

Pelicano & Co. have been for the past two weeks fitting up a much larger store at a cost of $5,000, and this, together with their fixtures in the older establishment, are a total loss. Sievers & Boland had probably the finest equipped store in the city and their windows for years have been one of the sights of the town. Their loss will probably be larger than that of the other retailers. Ephraim & Co., just above Sievers & Boland's big store, shared a like fate. Podesta & Baldocchi, Jaeger & Co., Geo. B. Jones & Co., and The Sutter Street Florists, situated in one block on Sutter street, did not long survive the Post street stores.

Geary street was next attacked and Rosaia and Rossi each will lose at least $10,000. The Misses Worn lost their entire equipment.

The fire did not reach Fourth street until the latter part of Wednesday afternoon, and Dominic & Co. and the Fourth Street Florists will probably lose from $3,000 to $4,000 each. In spite of every effort the Palace hotel, one of the most longings little was saved. When it is taken into consideration that almost all the wagons in town had been pressed into service to carry the sick from the hospitals and when $50 an hour was demanded by the ordinary expressman, it is easy to understand why so little was saved.

Frank Shibeley and A. Mann, Jr., had the biggest losses on Polk street. Miss Rose Mann, Jaccard & Co. and Wallenberg & Daley were also wiped out. Over in the direction of Telegraph hill all the Italian retailers were annihilated.

Among the seedsmen the Cox Seed Co. sustained a loss of $100,000; Trumbull & Beebe, several doors below, $15,000, and Thomas Meherin, 516 Battery street, about $5,000. Lilly & Co., on Market street, sustained a loss of about $15,000. It is reported that the loss of C. C. Morse & Co., at the old Bowen stand, is $100,000.

Over across the bay, where the earthquake was fully as severe as in San Francisco, but was not followed by fire, the losses were merely from broken glass.

were very fortunate. Strange to say I have yet to meet any grower who complains of loss of glass from the earthquake. It is always occasioned by falling chimneys.

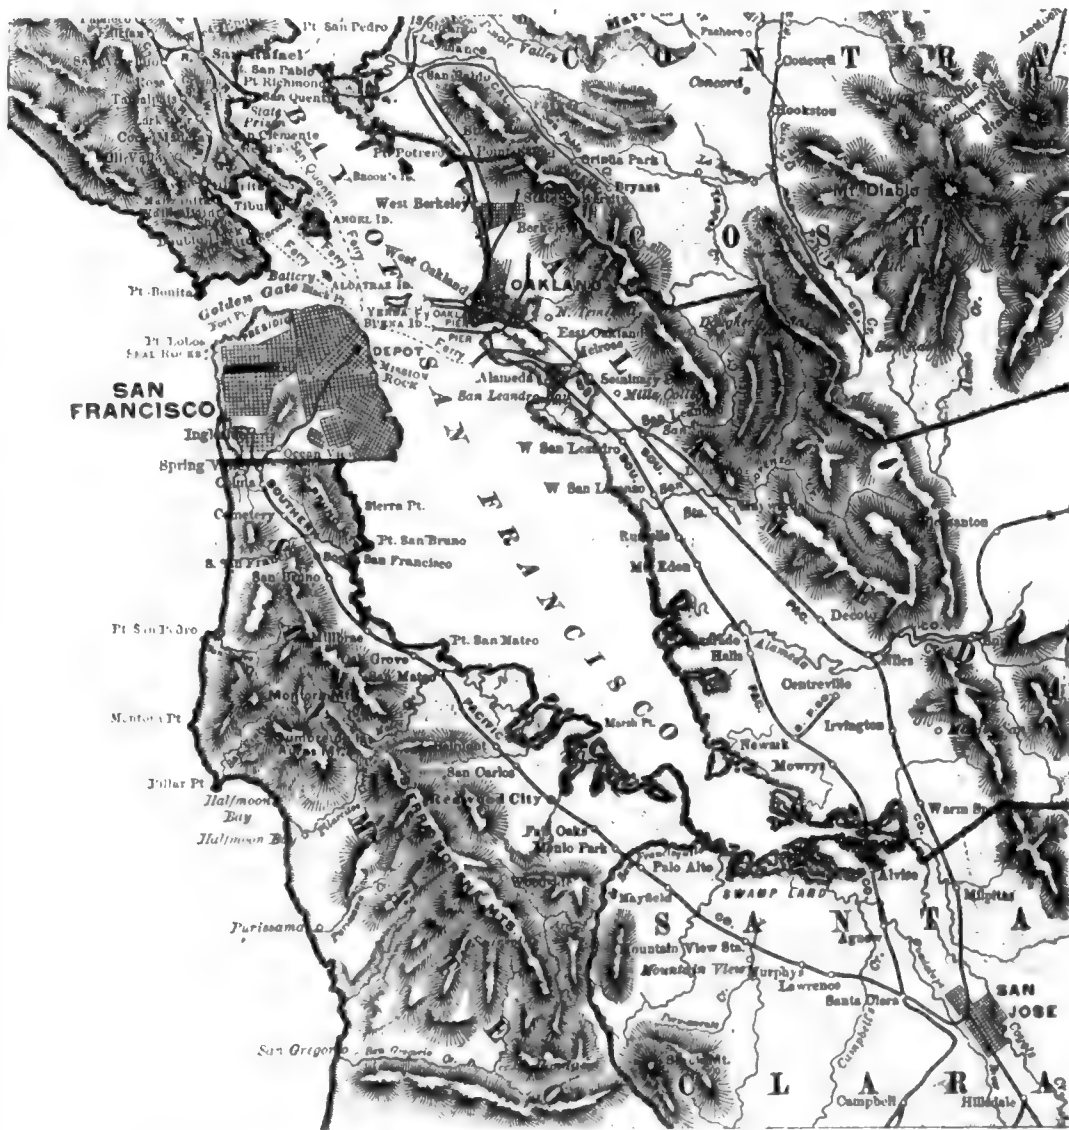

The florists from San Francisco are scattered all over the country. A few are stopping in town, but from what I have heard at least nine-tenths of them have lost their homes as well as their stores, and they have joined the march with the other thousands of homeless people whose only safety was in flight.

Already from the wholesalers the cry is going up: "What will we do with our flowers?" And this is a very pertinent query at this time. I think it is safe to estimate that at least 3,000 dozen of carnations are cut daily in Alameda county alone. Fully as many more come from San Mateo county, to say nothing about roses, lilies and other stock. San Francisco uses nine-tenths of this stock and San Francisco will not be able to use more than a fraction of the quantity produced for the next six months at least. What will the growers do? The surrounding towns are amply supplied by their local growers.

To sum up, I figure that the direct losses to the florists are $750,000, with a third covered by insurance. G.

Many of the largest producing establishments for the San Francisco Market are at Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda and are safe.

QUAKE DOWN THE COAST.

SOQUEL, CAL., April 18.—The earthquake at 5:20 this morning gave us the shake-up of our lives, but none of us was injured. A good deal of the furniture was damaged; almost all the pictures and dishes are broken, the stove upset and the place looked as though a cyclone had passed through. We had to break in the upper panels of the door to get Helene out of her room. The door had been slammed shut and several hundred pounds of books piled against it. One of our cottages was thrown from its underpinning and tipped to one side. I haven't ventured inside, as we are still having slight tremors, any of which may bring it down, but I expect the contents is pretty well wrecked.

G. L. GRANT.

It is apparent that at the time the above was written Mr. Grant had no idea of the calamity which had followed the quake at San Francisco, eighty miles away. At San Jose and Santa Clara, the seed growing centers, twenty miles or so west of Soquel, buildings were thrown down and several lives lost. At Santa Cruz, six miles from Soquel, the quake wrecked several buildings, including the court house, in which Mr. Grant's son-in-law had his office.

BELGIAN JUSTICE.

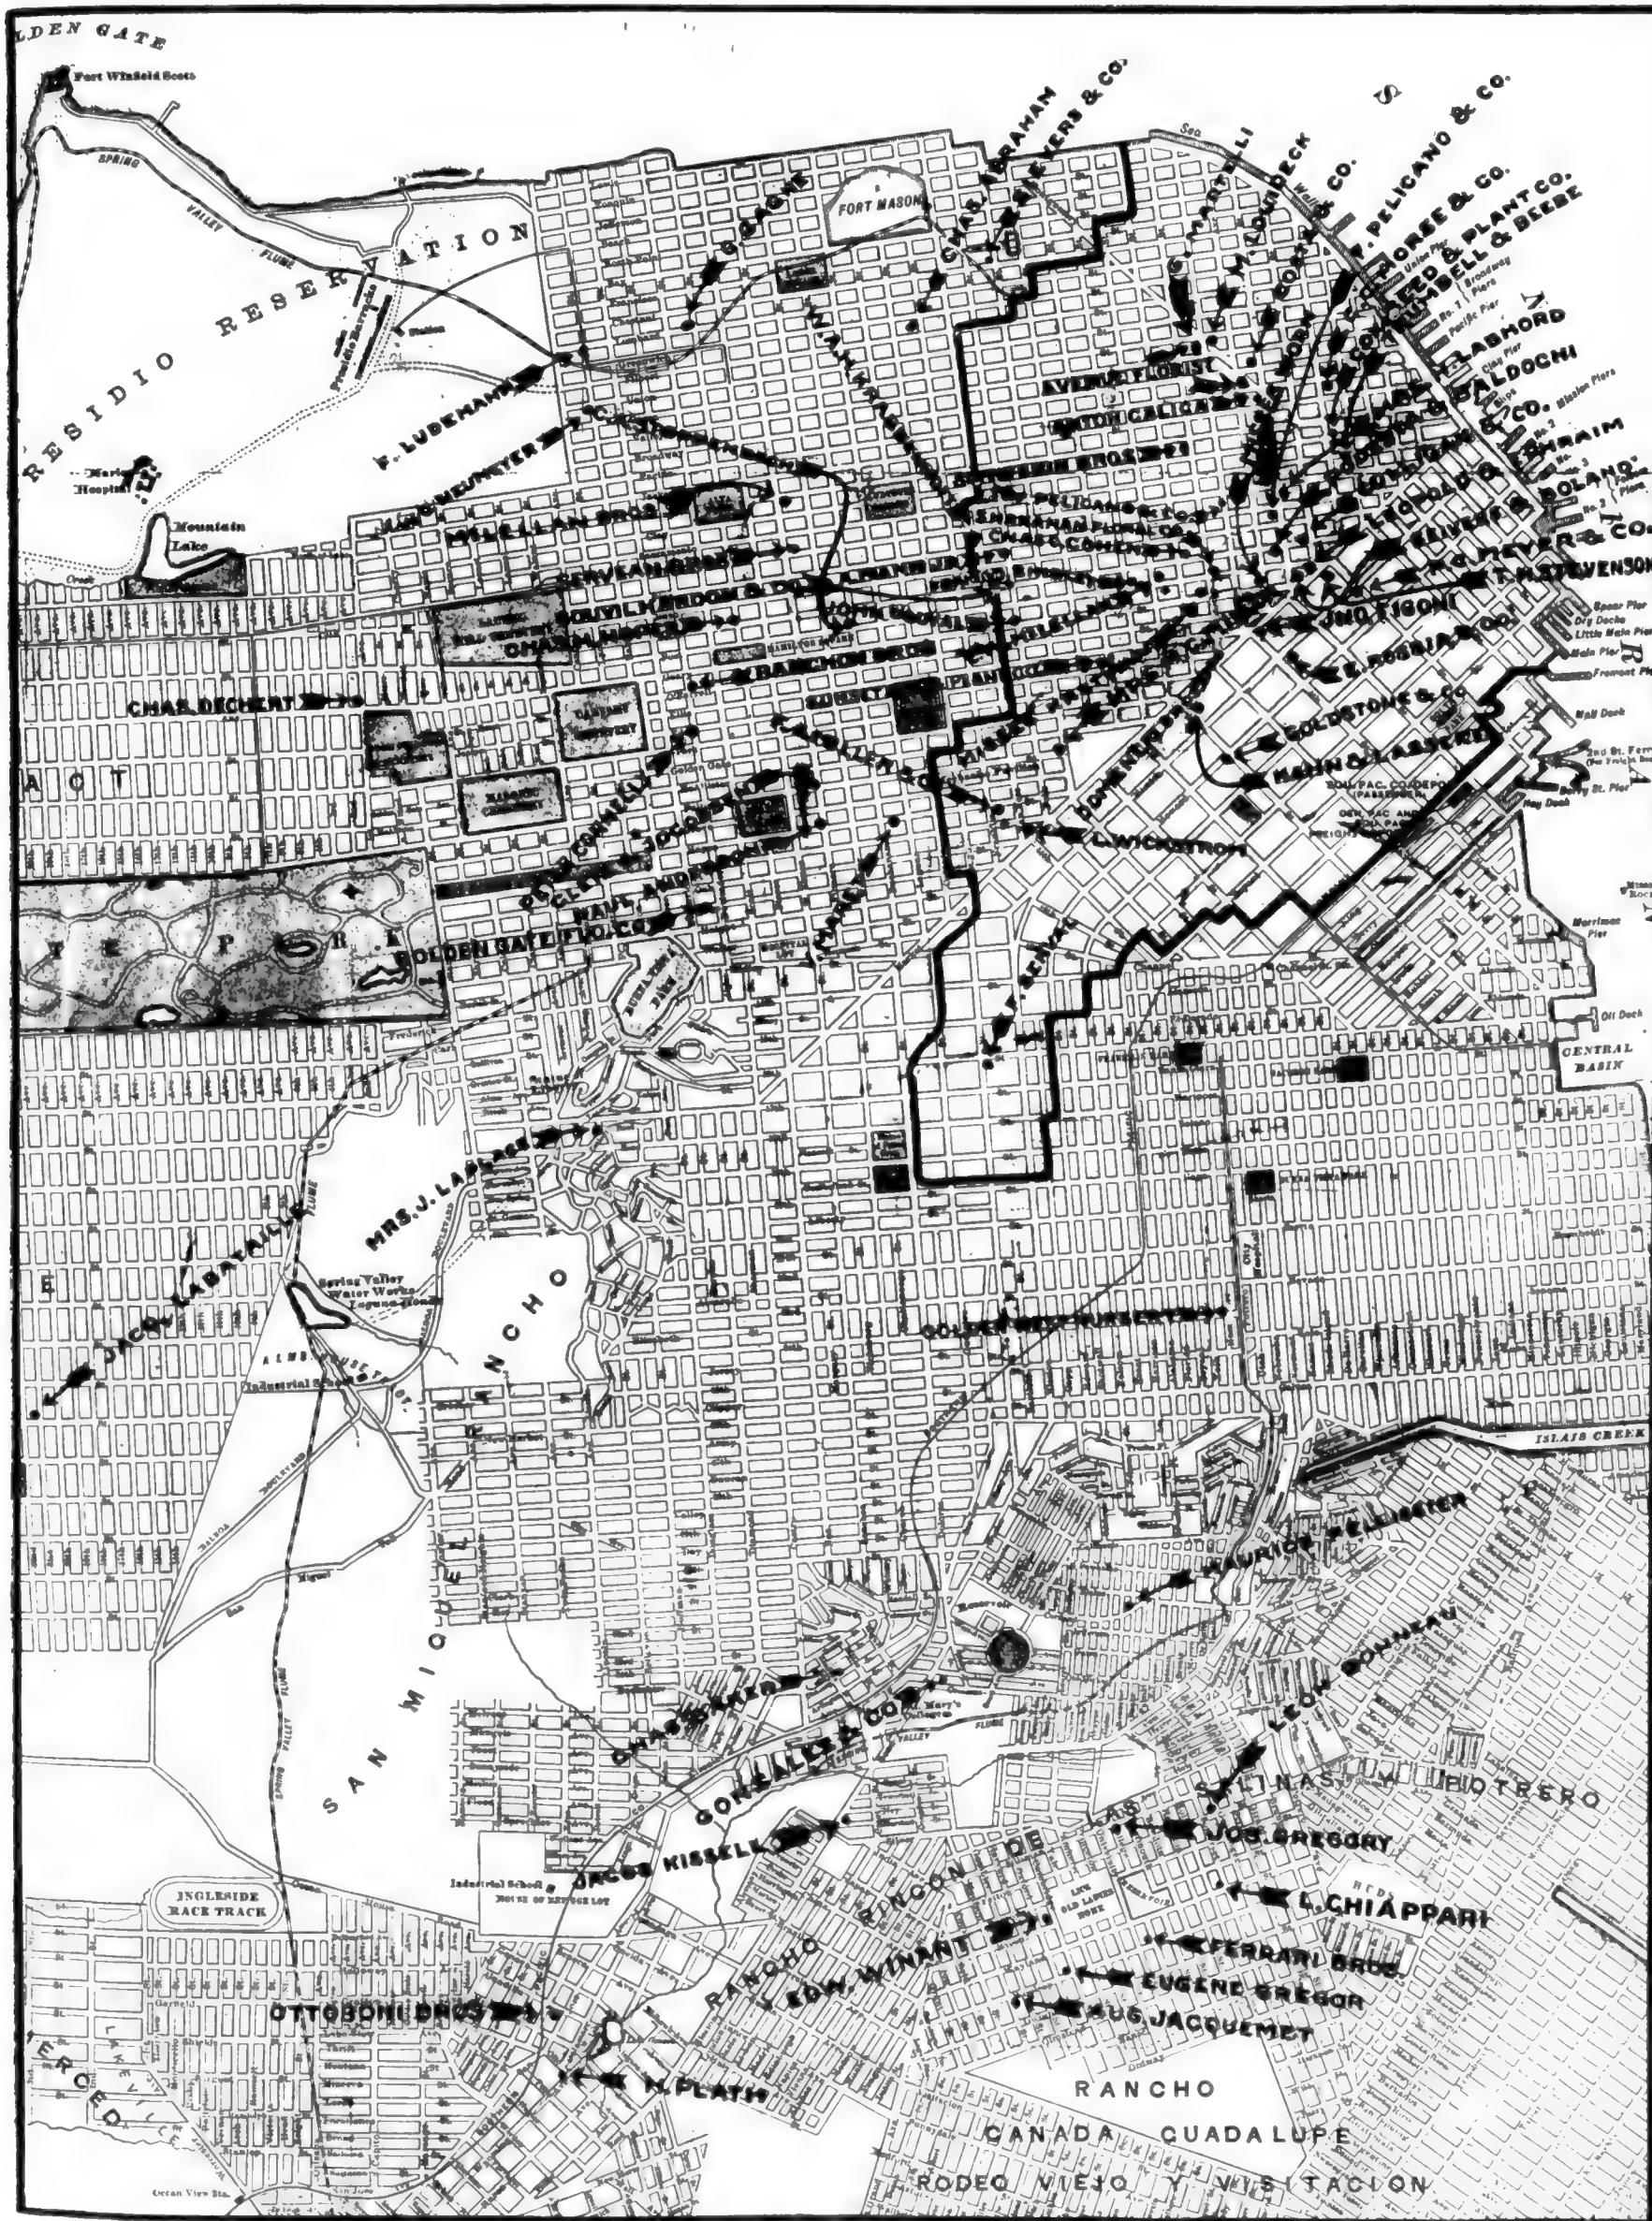

A well-known English amateur purchased in 1904 five orchids from a Belgian firm at a high price, £1,200. The orchids were not in flower at the time of purchase, but the transaction was carried out on the strength of some colored illustrations which, it is alleged, purported to be correct representations. When the orchids flowered, however, it was seen that the blooms were not so fine as those represented in the plate. The purchaser thereupon took steps before the Tribunal of Commerce of Brussels to have the contract of sale annulled. The court took the opinion of sundry experts, all well-known Belgian orchid growers. The result was in favor of the plaintiff purchaser, who is to be reimbursed £1,200 as well as a further sum of £120 for interest.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bays and Box.

There are several plants that endure a few degrees of frost and are, perhaps, occupying space in the greenhouse which you sorely need. Among these could be mentioned large pots or tubs of agapanthus, sweet bays, tree box and hydrangeas. It is not only a relief to get them outdoors, but it is far better for them. The agapanthus is not hurt by a few degrees of frost, and unless my memory misleads me, it is hardy in the south of England. The tree box is almost hardy in our state, if planted out. There will be no frost after this to hurt a bay tree.

When these are making their growth in the spring is the time to pinch the young shoots to keep them in the ideal form they reach us from Europe. Few of us can keep these ornamental evergreens in the splendid form and deep green color that they possess when first imported. Form is maintained by pinching in their growing season and health and vigor sustained by protecting their roots from continual drying out, and from starvation by copious applications of the strongest liquid manure.

For six weeks there is no need of sinking the tubs in the ground, but by the middle of June this should be done. They have a much better appearance, appearing to be naturally growing, which the sight of the tubs dispels, and it saves the roots from a daily drying out.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas, even if kept all winter at about the freezing point, will, under the influence of the warm days of March, start to grow, and more care must be taken with them, for the young shoots are as tender as bleached sea-kale. Yet the sooner they can get the open air and light the better. We have had many hydrangeas badly injured by a few degrees of frost, even in May, but that was through carelessness, for any evening when there are forebodings of frost it would take but a few minutes to lay these plants on their sides and throw over them some sheets or blankets.

Aquatics.

There are few features more attractive than a pool of aquatics in a pretty garden, and yet how seldom they are seen. A tank built of masonry and lined with cement is expensive and is never so attractive or natural as an excavation with the water a few inches below the level of the surrounding lawn. The facility for constructing such a pool that will hold water fairly well will depend on the nature of the subsoil. If the subsoil is clay, little more is needed than to excavate two feet and quite thinly "puddle" the bottom and sides of the excavation. But if the subsoil is gravel, then the whole face of the excavation will need three or four inches of puddled clay, then eight or nine inches of heavy clay loam, with a third of manure. There is nothing better than cow manure, and lots of it will grow any of the nymphæas to perfection. They are the queens of the is plenty of room and a suitable soil, in

When you lie on the bank of a nymphæa pool, accompanied by a "two-for-a-quarter" and watch the golden carp darting among the placid leaves, and the frogs jumping at gnats and dragonflies and other prey, you will forget your debts and forgive your debtors. You will bowl 210, beat Mr. Smith, of Richmond, Va., at clay targets, think of sweet ones far away, and do all sorts of beautiful things in your mind. Such is the influence of the water garden on an imaginative nature.

Plants and Profit.

If good, strong plants of nymphæas are procured and planted by the middle of May, you will get flowers in abundance by July and on until frost, or until nature says it is time to hibernate.

If you do not have time in busy spring to make the pool, then it can be made during summer and planted at any time from May to September. What I know of the cultivation of water plants in America was taught me by Wm. Tricker, author of the "Water Garden."

I have often thought that, where there is plenty of room and a suitable soil, in many cases it would pay the commercial florist to make some ponds for the cultivation of the nymphæa. If the flowers cut and sold did not yield 100 per cent profit, they would be a great attraction to bring visitors to his place. The so-called hardy nymphæas must have no frost touch their roots. The water above them may be solid ice for eighteen inches, but if there is three inches of water between the ice and the crowns of the plants they are all right. The tender or exotic species do splendidly in our warm summers, but must be taken up and the roots kept warm but moist during winter.

At the Pan-American.

In the several acres we had at the Pan-American Exposition they were planted at many different times during the previous summer. When fall came, word was sent me that the canals would be drained to make further improvements. This was sad news to me, as I thought of the fate of Henry A. Dreer's expensive exhibit and the great expense of making the pools; but we took courage and bought many wagon-loads of leaves and put on the soil at least a foot of dry leaves, and on those another foot of evergreen boughs. It was great expense removing all this stuff in the spring, but when the canals were again filled with water and our little bays and inlets containing the nymphæas were covered with a foot of water there soon appeared the green and bronze leaves and by midsummer they were a solid mass.

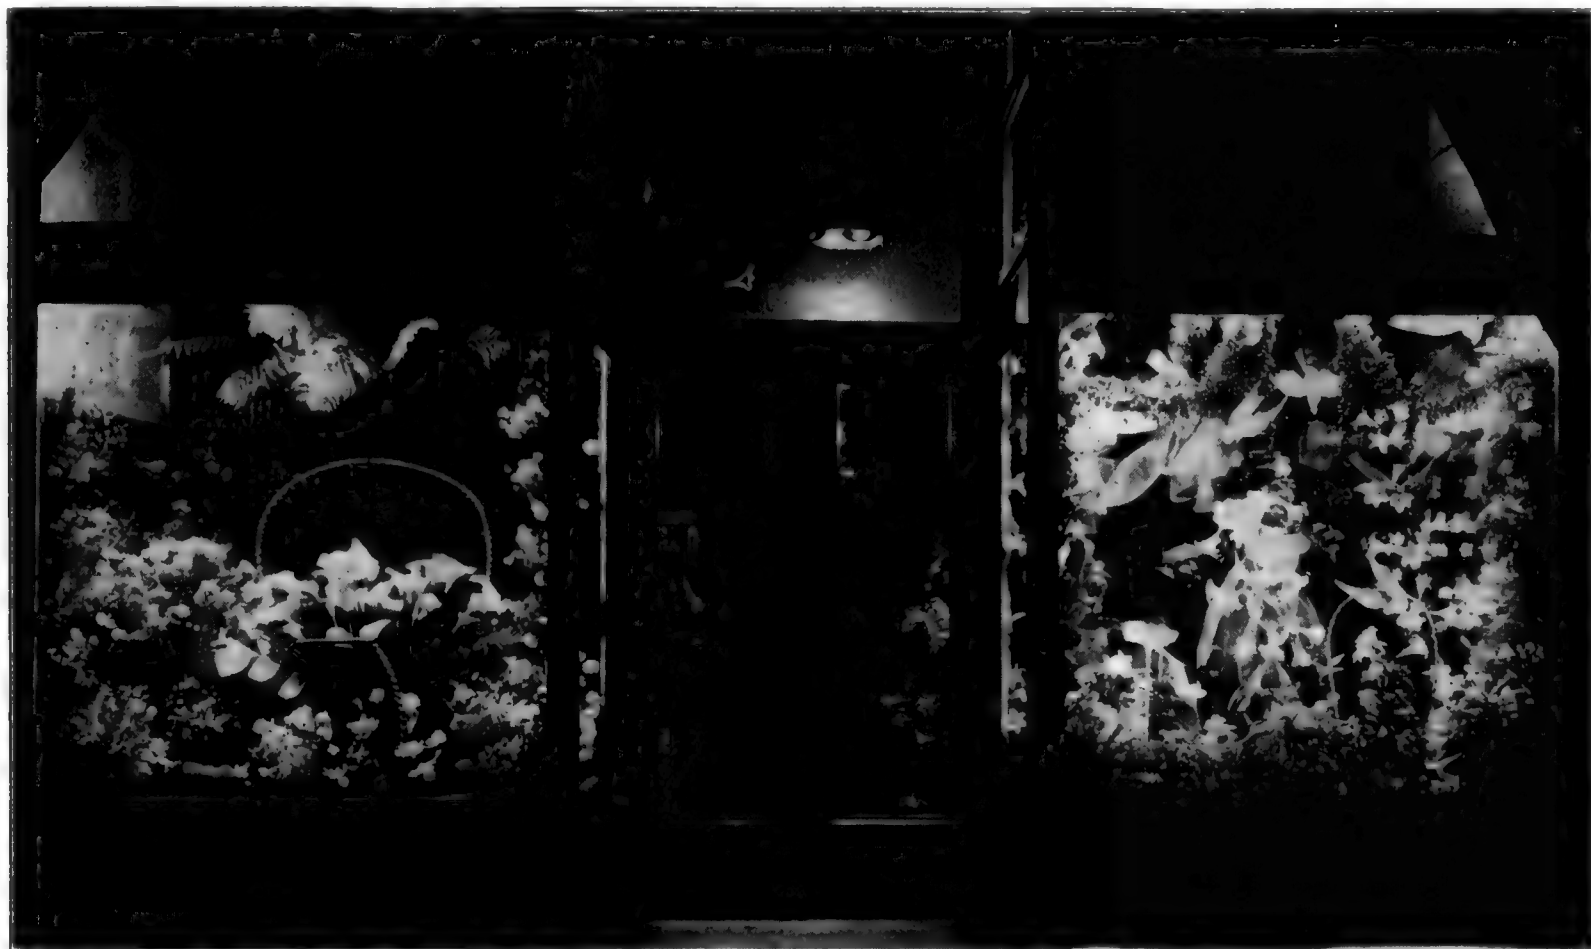

The great essential to grow nymphæas is nearly a foot of rich, heavy loam or clay. Plant at the start three to four feet apart, and during the summer let there be eighteen inches of water. The bays and quiet nooks of the rushing Niagara river are full of the common white nymphæa, N. tuberosa, and perhaps our people do not appreciate these lovely flowers as would the people of Colorado and other western states far from the grand sweep of majestic rivers.

powerful things in the world were the Mississippi river and the London Times. I differ from the immortal man. The Times is ponderously heavy and it takes the mind of a Herbert Spencer or Emerson to be moved by it, and the Mississippi river as seen at St. Louis is sluggish, dirty, slimy and terribly disappointing after an acquaintance with the Hudson or Niagara. Half a century before we saw the Mississippi we were familiar with the words of Dibden, the great song writer:

To the West, to the West,
To the land of the free,
Where the mighty Missouri rolls down to the sea;
Where a man is a man, if he's willing to toll,
And the humblest may gather the fruits of the soil.

All very beautiful and prophetic, and the old river makes up by its commerce for its pea-soup constitution.

The Best Nymphaeas.

Here are a few of the most free-growing and flowering of the hardy nymphaeas: N. Marliacea albida, large white; N. Marliacea chromatella, yellow; N. Marliacea rosea, fine pink; N. odorata, fragrant white; N. alba candidissima, strong, free white; N. Laydekeri lilacea, rosy lilac; N. odorata rosea, Cape Cod pond lily; N. odorata sulphurea, yellow, very fragrant, and many other beautiful hybrids.

Some of the tropical species and varieties are night blooming, but most of them remain open until 10 a. m. They are as easily grown as the hardy species, but must be lifted and stored in a medium temperature in winter and cannot be put into the ponds quite so early or until the water is warm. Some of the finest tender day-flowering sorts are: N. caerulea, large, blue flowers; pulcherrima, light blue, very large; N. Zanzibariensis, dark blue, magnificent; N. gracilis, the only white tender nymphaea; N. Mrs. C. W. Ward, deep rosy pink.

Where the lily pond is entirely for ornament, with no view to profit, then many smaller-growing aquatic plants can be planted near the margin of the ponds, but these are outside of the province of the commercial florist, and a selection can be made by referring to the catalogues of nurserymen who make a specialty of water plants.

Cosmos.

There is no more beautiful autumn flower than the graceful cosmos, but, alas, our northern frosts cut it down before it has developed its full beauty. Our best customers are always asking for cosmos when we have only frozen foliage to show them. If you think it is not profitable it can be made so by simply charging a good price, and if I were young again I would have lots of cosmos to sell during the month of October. I would sow it now.

Perhaps it should have been sown earlier by two weeks. Give the plants from their infancy the fullest light, to induce a strong growth. At the end of May make some rough boxes, say about two feet long, ten inches wide and five inches deep, and fill with good, fresh loam, moderately enriched. Plant half a dozen of the seedlings in each box, and after protection from cold winds or scorching sun for a few days, put the boxes outside within convenient reach of the hose and do not neglect them.

At the end of September, when if planted out they perish in a night, remove the boxes to the houses, where they will go on flowering for a month. There is no need of putting them on a bench. There are many places you can set these boxes, at the ends of houses, beneath the high gutters of modern houses, and many places which will suggest themselves to you if the microbes of the grey matter are working in health and activity.

This advice is not needed for a Baltimore florist, for dahlias flower there to the month of November. But it's a suggestion for florists of Dawson City and many points not so remote.

Eschscholzia.

Many of our people who travel are charmed with the California poppy. Poor California's building-covered acres have crumbled into dust, but the golden-cupped poppy will be up and smiling as usual very soon, regardless of calamity. The name of the California poppy is eschscholzia, and the rich yellow species is E. aurantiaca. It is the easiest to grow of all annuals. Sow a row in a shallow drill across the garden and you will pick flowers from June to frost.

Valley in Frames.

If you are lucky enough to have a bed of lily of the valley protected by a cold frame you should cover it with sash by the first of May. You will get them in flower a week before the uncovered and of infinitely better quality. Water copiously until the bells are turning white and shade two weeks before you expect them in flower, and you will get valley almost as large as the Ohio valley or the Yosemite!

Cyclamen.

I notice the cyclamens that were transplanted from seed flats to other flats eight weeks ago are crowding and have formed little corms almost as large as a crocus. They should now go into 3-inch pots. A fresh, sifted loam two parts with another of real leaf-mold and a fourth of well-rotted cow manure would be an ideal mixture for them. Don't be afraid to bury the bulb or corm with its top even with the surface of the soil. They will soon elevate themselves when they get hold of the new soil.

Cyclamens transplant readily as young plants. They want little shade, but are benefited by a light shading in the hottest hours of the day. While a cutting draught is not good for them, or any other plant, they want ventilation in abundance on all warm days. They should never be allowed to suffer for water and greatly enjoy a light syringing on all fine mornings. Whether you intend to grow them in a house or frame, there is time to think it over, because seed will likely be dear at any price.

It should be understood that this strain of sweet peas is not generally recommended for outdoor culture. One of the new types, a red one named Mrs. Wild, does finely, but speaking generally the colors are too delicate for our hot summer days. Mr. Zvolanek recommends that the white-seeded varieties be sown in sand and then transplanted, even when grown under glass, but personally I have had no trouble with germination.

These flowers are now a staple article in New York market, from December onward, and while there is ready call for all the white and light colors, the call for dark blue is only moderate until the end of March or so, after which time it sells as well as the others.

The illustration on the preceding page was taken in the houses of Robert D. Foote, of Morristown, N. J., R. Vince, gardener, on December 21. The seed was sown September 1, and the picture gives but a faint idea of the quantity of bloom showing at the time. It is the Christmas Pink variety, and struck me as being one of the most beautiful sights I ever saw.

Mr. Zvolanek says now he is merely crossing for size, as he already has all the colors and the stem is ample. Several plants had flowers with double standards, and if this could be fixed it will almost double the size of the flowers. I do not think that the end is yet, by any means, and that a few years more will show some grand things brought out in these winter flowering peas.

appropriated by the various growers, although there will be provided more than half as many more stands as in the old market. This extension is at the junction of Russell street with Wellington street, running down to the main entrance of the existing market in Wellington street. Our American friends who have paid a visit to London will no doubt be able to easily locate the position of the new portion.

In the cut flower market, trade has shown a considerable improvement, probably on account of quantities arriving being much less. It is really just between seasons, and good bulb bloom is rather scarce. It makes good business for outdoor stuff, and the Lincolnshire growers have cause to congratulate themselves.

The lily of the valley trade has not yet recovered from its recent long slump, although this week will probably see the last of the forced fresh crowns, when prices will rapidly advance. For a wonder London has been much lower for this line than most provincial markets.

I have noticed during the last year or so how colored foliage has been appreciated, both in London and elsewhere. Even the reddish tops of rose shoots have found a ready sale. Colored beech leaves, tinted ivy, hydrangea and different kinds of cupressus, etc., have all experienced a brisk demand at remunerative prices. Of course, the colored foliage of these hardy subjects, is only obtainable in the autumn, but tinted rose foliage may easily be obtained in the early spring, and would principal sorts grown. The Czar is still the very best for continuous bloom and sweet scent. It was thought La France would be a leading variety, but it is too big for market violet. Its immense size has occasioned the remark: "When is a violet not a violet? When it's as big as a pansy." If a violet is too big it loses its character and the public has not the same sentiment for these big florists' varieties. J. B.

CHICAGO'S VETERAN.

The many friends of Edgar Sanders will take pleasure in the accompanying portraits of Chicago's oldest florist, and his youngest grandson. The photograph was taken last summer, while his daughter, Mrs. William E. Spon, of Bayonne, N. J., and her son Francis were visiting at Chicago. The scene is Mr. Sanders' porch at 1639 Belmont avenue. To the craft it will be good news that Mr. Sanders is in health to enjoy the sunset of a long life full of kindly thought for others.

CHARCOAL SCREENINGS.

In the REVIEW of April 19 I note what Mr. Croydon says about hot-house grapes and the best way to feed them. At New Hamburg, N. They say that it saves the sourness caused by late feeding and is even better in some ways than the wood ashes that were formerly used. E. V. SIDELL.

LETTUCE.

If the last crop of the season is just about completed and those in the cold frame almost ready to cut, the conditions for a continuous supply will be all right. Where cold frames are not depended on so much, another crop in the greenhouse will have to be under way to keep up the supply to meet the first outdoor crop. Some of the larger growers do not trouble much with cold frames, but with us the cold frame crops are the most satisfactory of the season. True, the earlier crop for some time after planting requires a good deal of attention in regard to covering and protecting during cold spells, but once the warm spring weather sets in this trouble is reduced to a minimum and the plants seem to grow along without any trouble. We have

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

For a long time the various standholders in Covent Garden market have been hampered through insufficient room and many new growers have had to wait a long time before they could occupy a stand, there not being one vacant. To meet this want an extension has been in course of building for some time, and a portion is now so far completed as to be opened for use some few days ago. I am informed the whole of the new stands have been eagerly pay well. I have often heard the remark among experienced growers that it is difficult to obtain, but from my observation it consists of little more than getting the growths under glass and afterwards putting them outdoors, exposed to slight frosty nights.

Violets have been benefited to some extent by the prevailing fashion in colors. In some districts these are grown by the ten acres, and the growers have had good business. The Czar, Princess of Wales and Avelyn are the never had a case of disease in the frames. This in itself is a strong argument in favor of frame culture.

Plants intended for subsequent planting in the open ground should have attention in regard to hardening off before the time of setting out arrives. This time differs considerably with the locality. We can usually trust them outdoors after the first of May. Even then the temperature will sometimes run a little below the freezing point, but if not too severe a little frost will not do much harm, provided the plants are well hardened off. If protection can be given during cold nights they could be set in the open ground even earlier than this, but where large plantings are made, covering is hardly practicable. Two good varieties, the two best we have tried, are Boston Market and Big Boston. Hardiness is one of their strong points, but the quality and flavor are also there.

Radishes are another very satisfactory frame crop. We now are pulling from the frames and have made preparations for a continuous supply up to the time the outdoor crops can be relied on. A sowing has already been made in the open and are just breaking through the ground, but it is only a chance whether we get a satisfactory crop, as the earliest outdoor crop often is seriously checked by late frosts. We continue to sow every week, however, and catch the season as it comes.

TAR PAPER AND MUSHROOMS.

I noticed in a recent issue Mr. Lambert's letter referring to the use of tarred paper for roofing mushroom houses. May I give my experience in the use of tarred paper? I have two beds over my boiler room. The floor under, and the sides of the beds, are lined with tarred paper to prevent dripping into the room beneath. From one bed spawned January 25 I have gathered nearly a pound of mushrooms per square foot. I leave it to those who have had experience in spawning beds in winter to decide if this is not a fair crop for this season. I might also say that I have grown tons of mushrooms in houses that have been tarred inside.

NEWPORT HORTICULTURE.

Newport, R. I., has been the scene of some of the most pretentious landscape work done in this country in the past few years. Wadley & Smythe have done much work on the estates of millionaires, among their best things being the court shown in the accompanying illustration, photographed at the estate of Mrs. Richard Gambrill. This is a formal garden in front of a marble terrace, a reproduction of the famous garden at Hampton Court, London. The fountain is in the center of a sunken area, while the screen of native cedars in the distance separates the garden from the avenue. The color shown at the base of the screen is a border of anemones. The garden itself has a double terrace, with a depth of three feet ten inches. Statuary and specimen bay trees add much to the effectiveness.

With the Advertising Man

Once more I say, "The object of advertising is selling goods," and any idea or method that does this profitably is a form of good advertising.

Now, here is an idea that will sell goods for you at a handsome profit and at the same time will get rid of odds and ends of plants and flowers which might otherwise be a loss.

Offer to supply your customers with a box of flowers or plants each week, or every other week, at a stated price of 50 cents, 75 cents, or $1 and upwards, according to circumstances.

We find this very profitable, for it insures a definite amount of business, and in nine cases out of ten will use up odd lots of roses or carnations. If the people get tired of flowers, give them plants.

The most popular assortment seems to be mixed boxes containing violets, roses, a few carnations, etc., as it gives a greater variety.

We also make a practice of informing our customers in advance of higher prices at Easter and other holidays, and upon request discontinue their contract for two weeks previous to these holidays, so they will get something worth while on a holiday.

If you will think this matter over carefully you will see that it presents unlimited possibilities and you will be surprised, not only at what you can do for a stated amount, but at the number of people who will go in on this that would never think of coming near your place of business. I know that this idea will pay you because it pays us and is one of our most profitable sources of revenue.

BILLY VAN.

RICHMOND, IND.

The Palladium says that probably the largest business loser in this city as a result of the San Francisco disaster will be the E. G. Hill Co., as that firm had a large trade with the florists of the coast. Rose and carnation plants were seed will likely be dear at any price.

It should be understood that this strain of sweet peas is not generally recommended for outdoor culture. One of the new types, a red one named Mrs. Wild, does finely, but speaking generally the colors are too delicate for our hot summer days. Mr. Zvolanek recommends that the white-seeded varieties be sown in sand and then transplanted, even when grown under glass, but personally I have had no trouble with germination.

These flowers are now a staple article in New York market, from December onward, and while there is ready call for all the white and light colors, the call for dark blue is only moderate until the end of March or so, after which time it sells as well as the others.

The illustration on the preceding page was taken in the houses of Robert D. Foote, of Morristown, N. J., R. Vince, gardener, on December 21. The seed was sown September 1, and the picture gives but a faint idea of the quantity of bloom showing at the time. It is the Christmas Pink variety, and struck me as being one of the most beautiful sights I ever saw.

Mr. Zvolanek says now he is merely crossing for size, as he already has all the colors and the stem is ample. Several plants had flowers with double standards, and if this could be fixed it will almost double the size of the flowers. I do not think that the end is yet, by any means, and that a few years more will show some grand things brought out in these winter flowering peas.

appropriated by the various growers, although there will be provided more than half as many more stands as in the old market. This extension is at the junction of Russell street with Wellington street, running down to the main entrance of the existing market in Wellington street. Our American friends who have paid a visit to London will no doubt be able to easily locate the position of the new portion.

In the cut flower market, trade has shown a considerable improvement, probably on account of quantities arriving being much less. It is really just between seasons, and good bulb bloom is rather scarce. It makes good business for outdoor stuff, and the Lincolnshire growers have cause to congratulate themselves.

The lily of the valley trade has not yet recovered from its recent long slump, although this week will probably see the last of the forced fresh crowns, when prices will rapidly advance. For a wonder London has been much lower for this line than most provincial markets.

I have noticed during the last year or so how colored foliage has been appreciated, both in London and elsewhere. Even the reddish tops of rose shoots have found a ready sale. Colored beech leaves, tinted ivy, hydrangea and different kinds of cypressus, etc., have all experienced a brisk demand at remunerative prices. Of course, the colored foliage of these hardy subjects, is only obtainable in the autumn, but tinted rose foliage may easily be obtained in the early spring, and would principal sorts grown. The Czar is still the very best for continuous bloom and sweet scent. It was thought La France would be a leading variety, but it is too big for market violet. Its immense size has occasioned the remark: "When is a violet not a violet? When it's as big as a pansy." If a violet is too big it loses its character and the public has not the same sentiment for these big florists' varieties. J. B.

CHICAGO'S VETERAN.

The many friends of Edgar Sanders will take pleasure in the accompanying portraits of Chicago's oldest florist, and his youngest grandson. The photograph was taken last summer, while his daughter, Mrs. William E. Spon, of Bayonne, N. J., and her son Francis were visiting at Chicago. The scene is Mr. Sanders' porch at 1639 Belmont avenue. To the craft it will be good news that Mr. Sanders is in health to enjoy the sunset of a long life full of kindly thought for others.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Cucumbers in light supply, 75c to 90c doz.; No. 2, $3 to $4 box; lettuce firm at 25c to 65c doz.; mushrooms in light demand at 10c to 45c lb.; radishes $1.50 to $2 100 bunches; rhubarb, $2 to $4 100 bunches; tomatoes, 20c to 30c lb.; mint, 35c to 50c doz. bunches.

CHARCOAL SCREENINGS.

In the REVIEW of April 19 I note what Mr. Croydon says about hot-house grapes and the best way to feed them. At New Hamburg, N. Y., they are using charcoal screenings to advantage and as they have repeated a large order it must give satisfaction. They say that it saves the sourness caused by late feeding and is even better in some ways than the wood ashes that were formerly used. E. V. SIDELL.

LETTUCE.

If the last crop of the season is just about completed and those in the cold frame almost ready to cut, the conditions for a continuous supply will be all right. Where cold frames are not depended on so much, another crop in the greenhouse will have to be under way to keep up the supply to meet the first outdoor crop. Some of the larger growers do not trouble much with cold frames, but with us the cold frame crops are the most satisfactory of the season. True, the earlier crop for some time after planting requires a good deal of attention in regard to covering and protecting during cold spells, but once the warm spring weather sets in this trouble is reduced to a minimum and the plants seem to grow along without any trouble. We have

Chicago's Oldest Florist and His Youngest Grandson.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

For a long time the various standholders in Covent Garden market have been hampered through insufficient room and many new growers have had to wait a long time before they could occupy a stand, there not being one vacant. To meet this want an extension has been in course of building for some time, and a portion is now so far completed as to be opened for use some few days ago. I am informed the whole of the new stands have been eagerly pay well. I have often heard the remark among experienced growers that it is difficult to obtain, but from my observation it consists of little more than getting the growths under glass and afterwards putting them outdoors, exposed to slight frosty nights.

Violets have been benefited to some extent by the prevailing fashion in colors. In some districts these are grown by the ten acres, and the growers have had good business. The Czar, Princess of Wales and Avelyn are the never had a case of disease in the frames. This in itself is a strong argument in favor of frame culture.

Plants intended for subsequent planting in the open ground should have attention in regard to hardening off before the time of setting out arrives. This time differs considerably with the locality. We can usually trust them outdoors after the first of May. Even then the temperature will sometimes run a little below the freezing point, but if not too severe a little frost will not do much harm, provided the plants are well hardened off. If protection can be given during cold nights they could be set in the open ground even earlier than this, but where large plantings are made, covering is hardly practicable. Two good varieties, the two best we have tried, are Boston Market and Big Boston. Hardiness is one of their strong points, but the quality and flavor are also there.

Radishes are another very satisfactory frame crop. We now are pulling from the frames and have made preparations for a continuous supply up to the time the outdoor crops can be relied on. A sowing has already been made in the open and are just breaking through the ground, but it is only a chance whether we get a satisfactory crop, as the earliest outdoor crop often is seriously checked by late frosts. We continue to sow every week, however, and catch the season as it comes.

TAR PAPER AND MUSHROOMS.

I noticed in a recent issue Mr. Lambert's letter referring to the use of tarred paper for roofing mushroom houses. May I give my experience in the use of tarred paper? I have two beds over my boiler room. The floor under, and the sides of the beds, are lined with tarred paper to prevent dripping into the room beneath. From one bed spawned January 25 I have gathered nearly a pound of mushrooms per square foot. I leave it to those who have had experience in spawning beds in winter to decide if this is not a fair crop for this season. I might also say that I have grown tons of mushrooms in houses that have been tarred inside.

NEWPORT HORTICULTURE.

Newport, R. I., has been the scene of some of the most pretentious landscape work done in this country in the past few years. Wadley & Smythe have done much work on the estates of millionaires, among their best things being the court shown in the accompanying illustration, photographed at the estate of Mrs. Richard Gambrill. This is a formal garden in front of a marble terrace, a reproduction of the famous garden at Hampton Court, London. The fountain is in the center of a sunken area, while the screen of native cedars in the distance separates the garden from the avenue. The Palladium says that probably the largest business loser in this city as a result of the San Francisco disaster will be the E. G. Hill Co., as that firm had a large trade with the florists of the coast. Rose and carnation plants were brought here at wholesale from the local company, and shipped west to be grown for the retail business. California, in the vicinity of San Francisco, took a large percentage of the output of the local concern, and there will now be a noticeable decrease in the western business.

Mr. Hill said last night that in order to help the western people, accounts which are owed the local concern will be discontinued, so that the western firms may start over again free from debt.

BUFFALO.

Easter Aftermath.

Further knowledge of the Easter business confirms the figures reported last week, that the aggregate of business was at least ten per cent ahead of any previous year. A few said: "Oh, my business nearly doubled." Another said: "I did at least twenty per cent more than last year." These are exceptions. People who only started their houses or opened their store a year or two ago are where a substantial increase would naturally be expected. Firms of long standing, who had years ago apparently reached the zenith, could not look for such a relative increase. The result is most gratifying and we can congratulate ourselves that we are in such a healthy, prosperous business and conservative with all. It comes pretty near being like Portia's immortal plea for mercy. Our products are twice blessed. It blesses him who giveth and her that receiveth. It becomes the dude better than his cane, "It falleth on the gentle maid and maketh her heart melt toward you."

It will be noticed by the most illiterate that I have not stuck closely to the text of Shakespeare, but what matters; it's unpopular to be conventional.

I must again repeat that the demand for violets was the phenomenal feature of Easter.

In plants there is always room for novelties and you should endeavor to introduce something others do not grow. One florist said he could not sell daisies. If we could get Queen Alexandra in as good shape as we can three weeks later, it would be one of the best sellers, and we think it would not be much trouble to do that. We used to grow spiræas, the old Japonica, and 50 cents and 75 cents was all we could realize for them. We believe it was unprofitable at those figures. This year we put two clumps of the Gladstone variety into a 7-inch pot and sold many at $2.50 each. They looked worth it.

The Crimson Rambler, great as it was for several years, has had its day and you should at once produce Lady Gay rambler. Get dormant plants at once, pot them after cutting them back to within a few eyes and you will have a fuller, larger and much more free flowering plant next spring than any Crimson Rambler, either grown in the field or in pots.

Of all the varieties of azaleas we handled there was none which sold as well as John Llewelyn, a soft, beautiful Enchantress pink. It flowers in profusion the first spring after importing. I know nothing about its adaptability for Christmas flowering, but don't forget it when you give your order to the wholesale firm or the perpetually smiling drummer.

We have just enjoyed a visit from

W. T. Bell, of Franklin, Pa. Mr. Bell is a very successful florist in a city and locality where great deeds are not easy of achievement. Mr. Bell will only have contempt for fulsome praise of his character, but he is not an ordinary florist. He is a proficient botanist, entomologist, geologist, and several other ologists, and with all a philosopher. You may think he is reserved and cynical. He is the reverse when he meets the genial spirit. It is no flattery to Mr. Bell when I say that he is one of the few men I know familiarly who make me very careful of remarks made in their presence. Pity it is that such men do not take more interest in the councils of our National Society. W. S.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the past week has been fair. Some stores have made a large number of designs, but the most of them have had only a steady trade which is preferable to an Easter rush. The general opinion seems to be that Easter does not always bring the profits anticipated, when the extra expense, trouble, etc., is taken into consideration. The greenhouse man, of course, reaps the benefit if he is able to dispose of all he grows, but, on the other hand, if he is compelled to carry much stock over it eats into the profits materially. What we all want is a steady trade and a steady profit.

Stock is now back to a normal state and the growers are getting ready for their planting trade. Considerable stock is being grown.

St. Paul.

Otto Hiersekorn reports a good business and believes that he would be just as well off without any Easter rush. He is making ready for his plant trade. His greenhouse, which is attached to his store, will no doubt come in handy in the way of handling flowering stock.

Aug. S. Swanson has a fine display of his new rose, Minnetonka. He has a large number of them in pots, which appear to sell well. He reports a favorable Easter trade.

Vogt Bros. report a much better business in their new location.

L. L. May & Co. have had a good trade, having turned out considerable funeral work the past week. Their counter trade also has been good. Stock with them has been plentiful. Their Easter shipping trade was unusually heavy.

Holm & Olson disposed of considerable stock, but all dealers carried over a number of lilies.

We sympathize with S. D. Dysinger, whose wife died last Sunday at their home in Chicago.

Minneapolis.

Rice Bros. report a large wholesale business, their stock going mostly into the small towns, from which the demand seemed to be very heavy.

James Souden says Easter trade was fine and in their two stores they undoubtedly unloaded considerable stock. Business the past week was fair and stock plentiful.

The Rosary says that business has been very fair and that they have had no difficulty in getting plenty of stock.

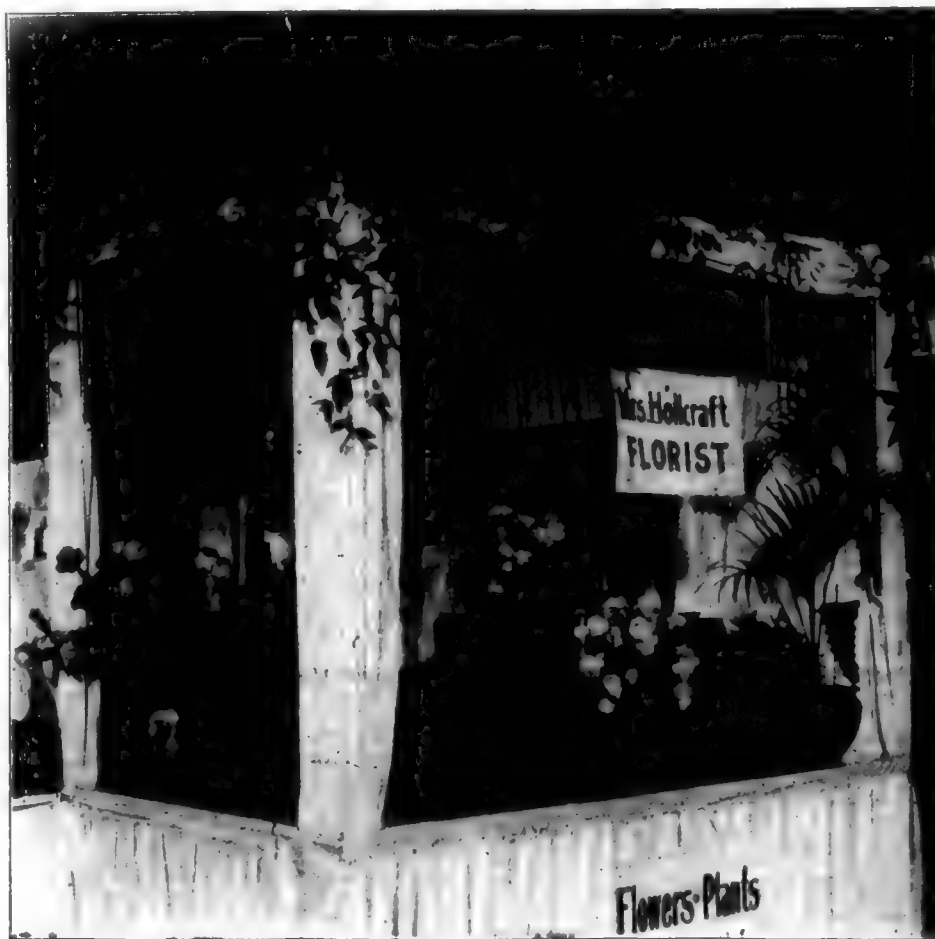

Ralph Latham has been doing very nicely. Being out of the high rent district is undoubtedly profitable, as his trade seems to have followed him.

A FLOWER BOOTH.

The accompanying illustration shows Mrs. M. E. Hollcraft's booth at the mid-winter fair held at Topeka, Kan. This was one of the handsomest booths at the fair and was always the center of an admiring group. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market has been depressed since the days immediately following Easter. The supply of cut flowers has increased, while the demand is weak and irregular. A good many flowers are sold at very uncertain prices. American Beauties and sweet peas are perhaps the strongest varieties in point of demand. While the prices on these flowers are low, they nearly all find a market, which is more than can be said of almost anything else, excepting possibly Easter lilies, which, owing to the weddings, are higher in price than is usual ten days after Easter. Violets are also in fair demand, with indications that they will last out the month. It is only fair to add to last week's Easter report that the average price realized for violets is hardly up to former years, due partly to the poor condition in which some of the flowers reached this city and partly to a rainy Easter morning.

Several new things are seen this week. The Leo Niessen Co. has gladioli, indoor-grown, of course, and southern lilacs. S. S. Pennock has Spanish iris, white, yellow and purple, while the Flower Market received its first shipments of Campernelles from Thos. J. Oberlin, of Sinking Springs, Pa.

Lynnwood.

The country place of P. A. B. Widener at Ogontz, Pa., covers sixty acres lying west of the York road and on both sides of Ashbourne avenue. On the north of this road are the mansion, stables, and immense tract of lawn. On the south are the gardens and greenhouses. Over all this domain William Kleinheinz rules.

The greenhouses, comprising 60,000 square feet of glass, are of more than ordinary interest, deserving special description. There are eleven of them, nearly half having been added to the plant last summer. All are well built, light and airy, filled with the finest stock. The houses devoted to cut flowers are filled with roses, carnations and sweet peas.

Of the roses, one whole house is devoted to American Beauties in solid beds, which have done well. One-half will be carried over. Another house is planted with tea and hybrid tea roses, Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate, Shellem's Seedling (now named Wm. R. Smith), a strong grower, but hardly free blooming enough in winter for cut flower purposes; Liberty, Richmond, Kaiserin and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, a rose now rarely seen, but considered by Mr. Kleinheinz as indispensable. It is free blooming, lasting, and of good size and substance. These roses, with the exception of Liberty, are planted on tile benches and have made excellent growth. Another house is devoted to hybrid roses in solid beds, one section being in full crop, while another was just finished. These plants were the picture of health. They have been in the beds seven years, are pruned, tied down and top-dressed each year and are now as vigorous and prolific as ever. The varieties included such old favorites as Merveille de Lyon, Mrs. John Laing, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Baroness Rothschild, Magna Charta, Ulrich Brunner, Capt. Christy and others.

The carnations, for which the place is famous, are still a sight, despite the mild weather of last week. The houses are so light that they are shaded at this season. The plants are strong and the flowers still of great size. Lady Bountiful, winner of the silver cup at Boston, is in fine form. Mrs. Lawson, White Lawson, Flamingo and Harlowarden are all in fine form. Mrs. M. A. Patten is so highly colored as to resemble Prosperity. The young stock is all potted and in thrifty condition.

A section of one house is devoted to sweet peas, the early varieties being nearly over and the later ones just coming into bloom, with large flowers borne on long stems. Chrysanthemums of all the best new and old varieties are now in 4-inch pots, making nice growth that promises results at the exhibition next fall. A block of gardenias in large pots is just coming into bloom.

The new palm house erected by Lord & Burnham Co. last summer is a very fine affair. It measures about 30x134, and is without a single roof support. The quantity of large palms used in decorating the mansion runs up into the hundreds each year, taxing the resources of this house to the utmost. Adiantum cuneatum is given considerable space, some of the specimens being very fine. Crotons are also grown in quantity.

Among the bedding plants the Golden Verschaffeltii coleus is grown in preference to Golden Bedder, which Mr. Kleinheinz believes too susceptible to mealy bug. Abutilon Savitzii is highly prized for its beautiful white foliage, despite the difficulty of propagating early. Easter plants are practically over so far as the greenhouses are concerned, but the remains of some fine primulas and spiræas were on the benches.

There is a wealth of orchids. One house is devoted entirely to these tropical beauties. Cattleyas are largely in evidence. Much of the stock was imported last September. All of it is in prime condition. C. Trianae is out of flower. One or two blooms of C. labiata were seen. C. Mossiae was a little more plentiful. C. Schroederæ was at its best, the full white flowers contrasting beautifully with the richer colors of the other varieties.

Three large fruit houses, running at right angles to the other greenhouses, were filled with grapes and other hot-house fruits just coming into bearing.

Mr. Kleinheinz has a private office neatly and substantially furnished. The paper is an exhilarating pattern of blue and white, the frieze of red and white, trophies of the bow and spear worthily won.

In conclusion let me say the place shows that money has been freely and wisely spent and that knowledge and ability are evidenced in every detail of the management.

Seven-fourteen Chestnut.

They are always busy in Dreer's seed store, but somehow they're never too busy to give a few ideas to the visitor. The rush is on now. Seeds, hardy roses, perennials and what not, are being distributed with speed and precision. The precision is always the same, but the speed varies a little with the thermometer. On the very warm days, when the temperature goes up, extra pressure must be put on to get the orders out on time. On the cooler days, when it is rainy and the rush slackens a little, ordinary speed will do to keep pace with the demand. They are always cheerful at Dreer's. Successful people generally are. They don't revile the department stores for selling roses at $1.25 a dozen, while their price is 40 cents each. They simply say that the buyer of department store roses at $1.25 a dozen usually fails to grasp the psychological moment for planting them, with the result that only three of the dozen live, so that the same buyer, buying three of Dreer's roses at 40 cents each, would make a profit of 5 cents, besides saving some labor and worry. The bright spirits at Dreer's, however, argue that even the buyer of department store roses will soon want something better, and sooner or later he will come to Dreer's for that something. Ergo: the department stores are good educators. Isn't that logic?

Various Notes.

George E. Carpenter, of Sixty and One-half street and Girard avenue, has a fine stock of spring plants in nice condition.

Chas. H. Netsch, of Buffalo, was a visitor in this city on last Monday and Tuesday.

Wm. Warner Harper has leased a three-acre lot near the Chestnut Hill station of the Pennsylvania railroad, which he is using as a store room for the Andorra Nurseries during the rush.

Visitors to the Whilldin Pottery Co. office and factory who may be unfortunate enough to call when the genial treasurer is in New York are certain of a cordial reception from H. P. Huston.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. successfully filled an order for cut flowers shipped to Great Falls, Mont., this month.

Chas. H. Grakelow is recovering from a painful accident to his ankle.

The Wm. Graham Co. has closed its store at 112 South Thirteenth street, concentrating the force at the principal store, 104 South Thirteenth street.

M. Rice & Co. received an order from California dated the day before the earthquake and fire. They also have three shipments on the way there.

Wm. J. Baker is handling some especially nice white and yellow daisies.

CUT IT OUT.

Advertisers are urged to cut out of their advertisements in the REVIEW any items of stock on which they are running low. Remember that the REVIEW is printed every Wednesday. Write so that your letter will be received on Tuesday, directing that items nearly sold out be omitted. Don't wait until you are completely sold out; orders will keep coming. Don't neglect it. You will be at no greater trouble to change your advertisement in the REVIEW than you will be to send back money—besides, you know how it would disappoint you to order stock and a week or so later, instead of getting the goods, have the money returned. Then, if the same stock is listed in the advertisement in the next REVIEW, what would you think? Cut it out!

BOSTON.

The Market.

As if in sympathy with the calamitous disaster at San Francisco, the market has gone to the bad with a vengeance since Easter. Prices have tumbled all around. Markets and commission houses are overloaded with flowers and growers in many cases have been very glad to accept almost anything in order to clear out. The horse show last week, with its attendant social activities, failed to arrest the slump at all, which, while not unexpected, is worse than we usually have right after Easter. The warm weather brought flowers in with a rush and there were altogether too many for the market to digest.

Roses have come down with a thud. Rose men are disinclined to express their feelings on the subject. Beauties, Brides, Maids, in fact, all varieties, have been a drug and prices have been cut in two. Carnations have varied from $1 to $3 per hundred, but lower prices have been accepted for a good many. Violets are less of a factor than they were and sell moderately well at an average of 50 cents. Singles are getting scarce, but one or two growers still have a fair supply of doubles. Sweet peas of good quality sell well and are not abundant. Bulbous stock, some of which is arriving from outdoors, is hard to move and much is wasted. Valley, callas, lilies, in fact, all other flowers, have suffered in the slump, which it is hoped may have seen its lowest point for a while.

A good number of nice rhododendrons, azaleas, spiræas and other pot plants come in, but do not meet with much call since Easter.

Various Notes.

William Sim picked over 200,000 single violets for the Easter market and could have sold more if he had had time to pick them. He tried a good number of Governor Herrick the past season. The only fault he finds with it is a lack of fragrance.

E. O. Orpet will address the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on May 15 on "The Making of a Gardener." Additions at the meeting on April 17 lifted the club membership to 319.

F. R. Pierson Co. has appointed Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, its New England agent for Winsor carnation. This fine variety will be distributed next season.

Bay State Nurseries, Blue Hill Nurseries, J. W. Manning and other local nurserymen are experiencing the most remarkable call for trees and shrubs in their history. The call for evergreens is unprecedented.

Prof. C. S. Sargent has returned, via Great Britain, from an extended tour in Central and South America. He visited several horticultural exhibitions in England just prior to sailing and saw remarkable displays of roses, orchids, narcissi, amaryllis and other flowers.

The recent warm weather has tempted some of the carnation men to plant out their young stock. It is hoped that cut worms will this season be less destructive.

Thomas Pegler continues to handle quantities of excellent double violets at the Park street market, grown by Oscar L. Dorr, of East Foxboro.

A. H. Hews & Co. report unprecedented business and are experiencing very great difficulty in trying to execute the ever-increasing volume of business.

Thomas Roland reports an excellent Easter trade in pink, white and blue hydrangeas, Crimson and Pink Ramblers, hybrid roses, Mahernia odorata, Canterbury bells, azaleas, bougainvilleas, genistas, acacias and lilacs. Prices were equal to those made in 1905.

W. W. Edgar did a record breaking trade in azaleas, lilies, genistas, rambler roses and other popular Easter plants.

Anderson & Williams did a big Easter business in Crimson Ramblers, of which they had an especially finely grown lot.

A school garden institute was held at Horticultural hall on April 21 to help teachers desiring to undertake school gardening. There was a full line of prominent speakers. W. N. CRAIG.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A week's splendid weather has forced shrubbery and trees into bud and peaches into bloom. Everything was quite spring-like until Sunday, which wound up with a storm and very heavy sleet almost large enough to be called hail. The bright weather during the week brought in flowers of all kinds, and especially the belated lilies. Many of them will be lost and none will bring the Easter price. The wholesale houses were filled with stock of all kinds and prices went tumbling, especially on Beauties, carnations and lilies.

The retailers, while they are nearly all boasting about their wonderful Easter business, are now not rushed except where there are some large decorations.

Various Notes.

David Geddis, of Homestead, donated 1,000 Lawson carnations for the benefit of the San Francisco fund. These were handled by a couple of the ministers of the town, who had a table in his store and realized about $75 on the stock.

Ernest Zieger, manager of C. T. Siebert's east end store, had a number of large decorations the past week.

Will Fitzsimmons is now with Mrs. E. A. Williams, starting just before Easter, and he says he is either a mascot or else got in wrong, as they have never had a rest since he started and most of it night and day. They are loaded with decorations.

The H. C. Frick greenhouses have been open to the public since before Easter and have been well patronized, especially on Sundays. This has now become a regular Easter feature and people look forward to it. Hoo-Hoo.

FERTILIZER FOR ASTERS.

In reply to William Scott's request that we state in the REVIEW the fertilizer we have used with such good success in growing asters, we would say that we have used barnyard manure to as large an extent as it has been possible to obtain it, but our main dependence has been upon commercial fertilizers, of which we use from 500 to 700 pounds per acre, applied with a grain drill before setting the plants. We use a brand known as "5-8-7." Translated into plain English this means that the fertilizer contains five parts ammonia, eight parts phosphoric acid and seven parts potash. It has given us very good results. WHITE BROS.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business steadily went down hill last week and Saturday night found the wholesalers with considerable stock to carry over, in spite of very moderate prices. Some of them were fortunate in cleaning up on Sunday but Monday found the market with plenty of stock and no very brisk demand. Roses continue to hold their own in better shape than carnations, but there are enough and to spare in most lines. Cuts are not heavy; it seems to be absence of demand. The report is that everyone through the country has plenty of stock.

Roses are of excellent quality and the general average of carnations is probably as good as this market ever saw. Prices on carnations have been weak ever since the day after Easter. Fancy stock may now be bought at the prices ordinary grades commanded a couple of weeks ago. In general the range is from $1 to $3, with the bulk of the sales at about $1.50 per hundred. Even then it is impossible to clean out. A few fine red, Prosperity, etc., still bring $4 per hundred.

The bulbous stock is very nearly done, except for the outdoor stuff, which is still coming in heavily. Poeticus is in large supply. Outdoor lilac is coming heavily and arbutus is also added to the list. Callas are good and belated Easter lilies are abundant and selling cheaply. Sweet peas are in demand. Some of excellent quality are seen. Valley has also stiffened in price because of spring weddings. Violets are very nearly at an end.

The Hudson river shipments shake badly and the color is usually very poor.

Smilax has been scarce for several weeks and now asparagus is pretty well cut out. There are plenty of ferns and all the jobbers are anxious to sell.

Easter Aftermath.

A summing up of the Easter business shows that the total of sales was very satisfactory. Those growers who took heed of experience and the good advice of the salesmen had their stock on the market early and are very well pleased with the aggregate sales and average prices. Those who brought in the bulk of their stock after the shipping demand had passed are complaining. It is not the first time that the early bird has caught the worm in this market and it is not likely to be the last time that the growers who hold their stock to the last minute pay the penalty.

Various Notes.

Julius A. Schnapp, who has had charge of Muir's store at Forty-seventh and Grand boulevard, is opening a new store for his own account at Forty-seventh and Ellis.

The announcement of the assignment of the Shaeffer Floral Co. created considerable stir. Five local wholesalers with aggregate claims of $3,500 sent an attorney to Kansas City and last Friday filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court against the Shaeffer Floral Co. Some of them hold notes with the personal endorsement of Chas. A. Shaeffer. It is stated that the liabilities approximate $6,000.

Mrs. J. Pieser, mother of the Pieser brothers, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., was at the Hotel Bristol, San Francisco, with her daughter, Mrs. H. J. Metz, at the time of the earthquake and fire. It was several days before word of their safety was received. Mrs. Pieser is nearly 80 years of age. They were to have started for home on the morning of the disaster. E. E. Pieser went to Fort Madison, Ia., and met them there Tuesday evening.

Mrs. E. L. Eaton has secured the lease on the large store at the south-east corner of Jackson boulevard and Plymouth place and will open a flower store there as soon after May 1 as the room can be fitted up. This will give three flower stores within 100 feet, the others being those of Fred Strail and Elizabeth Carlson. Miss Carlson has done very nicely in the few months since opening.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., reached home on Tuesday. He spent two very busy weeks in San Francisco, gathering up with much care orders for a large variety of stock which it is feared the buyers will not need as soon as they expected to. He started for home via Los Angeles a few days before the disaster.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., sent Bassett & Washburn twenty-five blooms of Winsor carnation, which attracted much attention at their store this week. The shade of pink is entirely new. Bassett & Washburn have a big lot of flowers from the Azores lily bulbs yet to market.

O. P. Bassett, Mrs. Bassett and Mrs. Andrews went to West Baden Monday evening.

another son at Tacoma. He was in San Francisco the Saturday before the disaster.

Otto Benthey sends word to the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. that by next week they can look for the largest crop of roses they have ever rejoiced in. Killarney promises a steadily heavy cut.

Weiland & Risch have begun work on a 75-foot chimney and a new boarding house which are to be a part of the season's additions to their plant.

Fred Weber is beginning to cut another spring crop of Beauties the equal of the famous one of last season.

Mrs. Wm. Dittmann, of New Castle, was in town last week on business connected with the addition now under way at their plant.

W. L. Kring, of Fairbury, was the guest of E. C. Amling over Sunday. He is of the firm of Kring Bros., carnation growers, and says that this has been their most successful season. Good stock and good prices have combined to give them twenty-five per cent more return per plant than they had to this date last year. They will rebuild a part of their range this summer.

Of the several local concerns that have increased their business largely the past season, it seems indisputable that Vaughan & Sperry have the best record. Everyone knows that their supplies have been growing steadily, and Mr. Sperry says the total of sales for Easter week was almost double those of a year ago. The regular business is almost in the same proportion.

Michael Fink, at the old Mulder place, 2211 Cottage Grove avenue, reports a very good Easter business, which very largely cut down his stock. He has had a good week following, having a large wedding decoration last Saturday.

Fred Strail has a neat store at 164 Adams street, in the Rand-McNally building. His other place is on Jackson boulevard, and a good trade has been done this spring.

Last year the George Wittbold Co. found that there were any number of small Dracaena indivisa all over the country, but not enough of the well-developed plants for large lawn vases, etc. This year they have provided a splendid stock in 6-inch and 7-inch pots.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The calm after the storm settled down last week upon the New York market. The catastrophe of the rainy Easter was soon forgotten. The million violets left over found the street and the refuse corner. One wholesaler showed me a few on Saturday a week old. The perfume was showing no signs of weakness, wherein it differed from the market. It is wonderful how the quality maintains this season in the violet shipments. They are just as blue and sweet as in the height of the season. Looks as if we might have violets this year as late as June.

Growers cannot blame their sales agents for the slump before Easter, but the weather man has no excuse, and he turned the close of the great yearly festival from beautiful visions to "weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth."

Last Saturday a big surplus of violets remained unsold. One house on Twenty-eighth street showed me at 9 o'clock twenty big boxes unopened. This may be fairly considered a criterion, and roses and carnations, too. All the ice-boxes were full of them.

Sunday was like last year, warm and sunny. Spring is not as far advanced, but the parks are green, the early shrubs are blooming and the robins are here to stay. Nurserymen in every direction are trying to catch up to the late season and seedsmen are busy night and day. Even so, it is impossible to keep pace with the growth of sentiment in favor of suburban life and the enormous increase in planting everywhere. The country is only now awakening to the possibilities in horticultural pleasures, and the nurserymen of today will be the millionaires of the coming generation. The supply even now does not keep pace with the demand. The sales of nursery stock around New York this spring have been enormous. The auctions are busy, prices are good and patrons many. Everything betokens prosperity.

Various Notes.

In the retail cut flower business, after the lull following Easter, the trade on Saturday was universally satisfactory. Many good wedding decorations are in prospect. Mr. Humphrey, of Thorley's, tells of several last week, one of the largest in his experience.

Leikens has the Sutherland-Foster wedding this week Wednesday, church and house, and in addition the Belmont hotel decoration permanently and a fine stand in this tallest and biggest of New York's caravansaries.

Siebrecht's windows are again filled with orchids from their own conservatories. Like all the big houses on the avenue, they report a satisfactory Easter, "as large as last year, notwithstanding the rain."

Young's windows are crowded with the firm's own hydrangeas, the best in the city, and a feature of their Easter business.

McConnell's looks spring-like with a wealth of golden bloom in tubs, the forsythia showing perfectly after its Easter forcing. Here, with nursery contracts, funeral work and decorations there seems to be a continuous pressure from the beginning to the end of the season.

Bowe is still crowded for room, his store gradually growing too small for his regular trade, not to mention transient or holiday demands.

Changes are contemplated on both Fifth avenue and Broadway in the near future, which to the majority are but conjectures, but nevertheless inevitable.

Mr. Grant, formerly with Small & Sons, is now doing some independent decorating for the bon-ton florists, and Arthur Merritt, of the new leucothoe wreath fame and a decorator during a generation, is also at times helping out the busy florists of Broadway and Fifth avenue, with his artistic creations and advice. There seems to be a field for just such utilities, and a profitable one for all concerned.

Another of the Thirtieth street wholesalers will soon float with the tide toward Twenty-eighth street, and already James McManus, the orchid king, has established headquarters at No. 42, with much better facilities than at the old stand.

The son of John J. Perkins, recently operated upon for replacement of the heart in its proper position, has passed through the operation successfully and is convalescing. Three inches of the rib was removed.

Max Limprecht was feeling the effects of the Easter strain in a bad attack of rheumatism last Saturday.

W. B. Reed, of Chambersburg, Pa., was a visitor last week.

Sigmund Geller reports the greatest Easter in his history. He is constantly adding to his branches, and now has about everything the florist can demand, except cut flowers, and these are on every side of him.

Chas. Millang sold every one of his 50,000 lilies Easter, and every plant in his conservatory. He has fully recovered his health again, and his "horse" department is a profitable adjunct.

Jack Gunther had his little joke on one of the big retailers last week, when his colored lieutenant was sent for some flesh-colored sweet peas and Jack sent him a lot of dark purple ones and claimed he had filled the order according to sample.

Jos. Fenrich is doing duty as a juror very philosophically, being such a novelty that he enjoys it.

J. K. Allen was slightly indisposed toward the end of last week. With good weather Sunday he says it would have been the greatest Easter of his nineteen years' experience.

Carrillo & Baldwin, the new orchid firm, have everything completed at their place in Secaucus, N. J., and are preparing for the arrival of a fine shipment of Cattleya gigas. They are both experts and the field is wide and the orchid growing constantly in popularity.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., looks well after his European trip and rejoices in the usual Easter clearing of everything salable in his greenhouses.

The eighth lecture of the American Institute series was given on Wednesday afternoon of this week by George T. Powell on "How to Make and Keep a Lawn." These lectures are not as well attended as they deserve to be.

The outing committee met last Friday and all arrangements are now complete for the best outing the club has ever enjoyed. Full particulars will be given at the next meeting, May 15, which will also be bedding plant night with some exhibits of novelties on the side.

Sander & Sons, of London, England, have established their New York office at 235 Broadway. Mr. Mellstrom is in charge. Mr. Sander, Jr., has returned to Europe.

Boddington's Harrisii are in great demand. The quality of the flowers from their "quality brand" this Easter tells the story. They remind their patrons of the early Easter of 1907.

Everybody in the wholesale section is felicitating genial Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit, on his appointment as park commissioner and predicting congressional honors for him in the no distant future.

Bees are buzzing already in the bonnets of some of the easterners as to the next president of the S. A. F. The younger element in the society holds the balance of power it seems and are surely acquitting themselves with honor. Gude, Breitmeyer and Kasting are a trio of presidents not soon to be forgotten. On whose shoulders will the mantle fall? Some think our own Twenty-eighth street will be able to answer the question.

J. T. Lovett, of Little Silver, N. J., reports a wonderful call for nursery stock this spring and the busiest season in his career. He has an enormous supply of herbaceous stock for the coming planting and about everything for the garden.

O. V. Zangen, the seedsman of Hoboken, has had a tremendous year and is busy night and day with seed shipments to all parts of the country.

Robert Simpson, president of the Rose Society, is installing one of Kroeschell Bros.' largest boilers. All the boiler men report business boiling, never better, and every house devoted to this department of the florists' trade is overwhelmed with orders. Building is progressing on every hand. It is hard to find any progressive florist who is not adding to his glass or contemplating it.

Flatbush avenue in Brooklyn has several progressive florists who all understand the art of window dressing.

We have an established reputation for filling orders when others fail servatory attached, and very roomy store. Albert J. Loretz, long with Weir, has a fine store of his own at 228 Flatbush avenue, where he made a great display for Easter. Mrs. Loretz is one of the best artists in the business and was at one time with LeMoult and Foley, the Bowery florists.

Thos. E. Langton is the pioneer of Flatbush avenue and has held the fort at 198-for a score of years. A fortunate turn of real estate on Long Island a while ago makes continuance in trade quite unnecessary save for the pleasure of it. Mr. Langton is at present trying to take a fall out of his old enemy, rheumatism. All the Brooklyn retailers report a very satisfactory Easter.

The plants handled by the big department stores at Easter and the hardy roses sold since that time surpass in numbers the wildest estimates. It is not uncommon for one of these stores to sell 50,000 roses. Prices range from 5 cents to 15 cents and some of the stock offered is a good argument against gardening; small, dry, useless stuff that is dead long before it reaches the hands of the buyer. But notwithstanding all this the trade in these imported plants and also the demand for local bushes grows each year and the total handled by these great distributors reaches into the millions.

The Brooklyn wholesalers, Hicks & Crawbuck, Inc., Bonnet & Blake and Wm. H. Kuebler all report a satisfactory Easter. The demand for all kinds of supplies at Hicks & Crawbuck's was far ahead of their anticipations. Their big store on Court street proves inadequate for their growing business. They are adding space and facilities.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Ever since Easter the business has been very slow with some, while with others it has been reported good. Small weddings and funeral work are about all that is being done. Large supplies of all kinds of stock are being shipped in. Roses are not so badly overstocked in the first grade, but other grades are in excess of the demand. Beauties are quite plentiful in all grades. Richmond and Killarney are the only scarcity in the rose line.

Carnations are greatly overstocked and have been since Friday, when good stock sold for $7.50 per thousand, especially in the colored sorts, white bringing a better price, as quite a lot of funeral work was put up the past week, especially for Mrs. W. J. Lemp, wife of the millionaire brewer, on Wednesday.

There are plenty of lilies, both callas and Harrisii, and all other bulbous stock. Violets are becoming scarce. Those that are coming in are very small and pale. Quite a good supply of sweet peas is coming in and it is about the only flower that is selling out clean. There is more mignonette than can be sold.

Plant trade continues good, both local and shipping. The plant corner at Union market is in full bloom and the florists who sell there report a good trade since the opening two weeks ago.

Various Notes.

J. William Patton, who has been with Frank M. Ellis the past year, left last week for Indianapolis to take charge of Wonderland park. "Pat," as he is better known among the trade, is wished well in his new undertaking.

Charles Juengel, Robt. Beyer and J. J. Beneke will act as judges during registration of voters in their wards this week Thursday.

William C. Smith has bought out the brokerage firm of Pilcher & Burrows and will conduct the business at the same place as W. C. Smith & Co. Mr. Smith formerly was in the employ of Frank M. Ellis and has a big following in the trade. He is a hale-fellow-well-met, and should continue successfully the business of the late firm, which had grown quite large. He is a nephew of Wm. Edlefsen and a brother-in-law of Mr. Hunkel, of Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee. Of the old firm, Mr. Pilcher will continue at his place in Kirkwood, as a grower, and Mr. Burrows has other interests in the city to take up his time.

A. Ringier, of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, was in the city this week. Mr. Ringier came from San Francisco, having escaped by a few days the great disaster which befell that city.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., on Friday was appointed city forester. Mr. Meyer for the last three years has been superintendent of parks. The office pays $2,400 per year. The office of superintendent of parks will be filled early this week, and it is said that George Ostertag will succeed Meyer, which would make a good appointment.

Cake Not Good for Florists.

A tragedy was narrowly averted at the Royal Greenhouse early Easter morning. The employees had been working very late Saturday night filling Easter orders. At 2 o'clock Sunday morning, on completing their duties, Mr. Stolper prepared a lunch for the men, including cake, which had been purchased during the afternoon. Two of the men, Lloyd and Gatehouse, did not eat of the cake, as they were too tired to eat and they retired on an improvised bed. Messrs. Stolper and Ueberheim had a room in the building, but Albert Senier went to the bathroom before retiring.

Soon Mr. Stolper was startled by the sound of breaking glass. On rushing into the room he found Senier convulsed in agony. Mr. Stolper had barely time to awaken the two men and tell them to help Senier when he, too, experienced the same symptoms. In a very few minutes Mr. Ueberheim, Gatehouse and Lloyd were aroused through the shouts of Mr. Stolper and went to his assistance. The only persons in a position to act were the men Gatehouse and Lloyd, who had not eaten of the cake. They immediately telephoned for a doctor, who on arriving some half hour later gave the men a powerful emetic, which had the desired effect, though the sufferers remained in a dazed state all forenoon, especially Senier.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The Easter trade was all that anyone could wish. Everything was sold at good prices and more could have been disposed of. The demand for plants was enormous and cut flowers of all kinds were a close second, while the amount of business done was far greater than at any other Easter.

The supply on Monday morning was so small that it was hardly worth while trying to do any business, but the demand was very brisk and has kept up all the week, with good prices. Outdoor bulbous stock is now coming in and prices will gradually drop.

The carnation growers are getting ready for field planting, and if the weather permits will start the first of the week, and will put out about twice the number of plants that were set out last year.

Easter trade was ahead of all previous years. In pot plants, lilies of course took the lead and were sold in large numbers. Azaleas came next in favor. Other plants selling well were Dorothy Perkins, Baby Rambler and hybrid roses, rhododendrons, Von Sion narcissi, tulips and violets. In cut flowers, carnations, violets, roses, bulbous stock and sweet peas were in greatest call in about the order named.

W. W. Hathaway, A. A. Read and Mrs. Moir all did a first-class trade. Department stores, as usual, did considerable selling, cutting prices to some extent, while street fakers disposed of a good many cut flowers. W. N. C.

THE way sweet peas are being cleaned

ing California seed crop a serious affair.

CHAS. P. GUELF, of the Jerome B. Rice
Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is at present making his headquarters at Columbus, O.

A WIRE from C. P. Braslan reports all seedsmen safe at San Jose and suburbs.
It is thought little damage has been done to seed crops.

EARLY varieties of sweet corn are in good demand and the supply of many of the most popular sorts seem to be pretty well closed out.

ONION sets have taken a jump the past few days. It was like the last wriggle of the pickerel landed last summer by the seedman holding the fishing record. A lively finish is a good thing.

If the onion set growers in the Chicago district wanted rain, they got it
April 25. It was so heavy some seed may have been washed out of the ground.

MAIL trade is reported dropping off.
There is a good spurt in the demand for onion seed, several large lots having been sent out the past week to localities that were reported overstocked a short time ago.

S. D. DYSINGER, manager of the seed department of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, lost his wife on April 22, after only a few days' illness. Mr. Dysinger has himself just recovered from an illness of many weeks.

FROM latest accounts three weeks of cold weather following a week of balmy temperature in early March have done considerable damage to bulb fields in Holland, besides retarding and shortening the blooming season.

SEEDING in the onion set district south of Chicago was finished early this week.
The weather has been favorable, but rain soon will be needed to bring the seed out. C. J. Hess says the acreage is somewhat smaller than last year.

THE onion set men are working overtime to get their seed into the ground.
Conditions for planting in the main are first-class at Chicago, but there come reports that the ground needs a light shower to make it work up properly.

CONSIDERABLE speculation as to what effect the California earthquake will have upon the seed growing interests is being indulged in throughout seed trade circles. Nothing definite is known about the matter and it is hoped that little if any harm has been caused by the growing crops.

SYMPATHY FROM LONDON.

August Rolker & Sons, New York, are in receipt of the following cable from Watkins & Simpson, the well-known London seedsmen:

Wish to express our deepest sympathy in appalling catastrophe to your countrymen.

Rolker & Sons write that "on behalf of their many American friends we acknowledged this spontaneous expression of sympathy with a few words of grateful thanks."

NOW COMES THE TEST.

Chairman Wadsworth, of the House Committee on Agriculture, on Monday reported the agricultural appropriation bill for passage. In explanation of the elimination of the congressional seed distribution the report says: "The item covering the congressional free distribution of vegetable and flower seed has been omitted from the bill. There is not, and never has been, any warrant of law for this expenditure, and the item simply has been tolerated in appropriation bills."

Now comes the test of strength. It is expected that before final action an amendment will be offered reinserting the provision for the seed distribution. It is hoped that enough sentiment has been created to defeat this.

The Department has let a number of contracts to seed growers for 1906 crops subject to the making of the usual appropriation.

THE SEEDSMEN OF FRISCO.

The disaster that has come upon San Francisco is so great that the fate of the comparatively few seed houses it numbered is of little consequence as compared to the extent of the general calamity, and yet, like the mother who is most anxious about her one boy out of the many thousands that may lie on a battle field, self-interest prompts a desire for particulars.

The principal seed stores of San Francisco are situated outside of the zone where the earthquake did most damage, but in the district devastated by the fire which was the principal cause of damage to property.

The Cox Seed Co. occupied a four-story corner building on Sansome street about a quarter of a mile nearer Market street than were C. C. Morse & Co., who recently acquired the business of E. J. Bowen, whose quarters for years had been on Sansome street. Within a block or two of Cox Seed Co., also on Sansome street, were Trumbull & Beebe, who had also been in that same location for some years. A new concern, the Pacific Seed Growers Co., of which T. A. Cox is president and J. B. Agnew manager, has also headquarters at the Cox address on Sansome street. The firm known formerly as Levin, Vincent & Co. is now styled Vincent, Levin & Co. and is owned by a restaurant man named I. Cuenin and is conducted by the old management under his direction. This seed house was near Sansome street and in the burned district.

C. H. Lilly Co., of Seattle, successors to Lilly, Bogardus & Co., had a branch store at 305 Market street, where they carried not only seeds, but a large stock of poultry supplies. The ferry building escaped and some surrounding structures; it is hoped good fortune may have extended the three blocks to Lilly's.

These were the principal seed stores of San Francisco and were all close together. They differ in many respects but all did a general seed business.

The Cox Seed Co. combined all the branches. They retailed, wholesaled, grew and jobbed. They carried nursery stock and bulbs, did a fancy trade and drew many market gardeners, issued a catalogue and catered to out-of-town customers as mail order seedsmen.

C. C. Morse & Co. last January issued their first catalogue for mail orders. They are well known growers of California seed products, are continuing the business established by E. J. Bowen, who included boxes and packages in his distribution of seeds to the stores along the Pacific coast. They also do a general retail trade locally and are jobbers, confining this part of their efforts to the Pacific coast and territory contiguous thereto. A wire has come that since the destruction of their San Francisco store they have returned to the old headquarters at Santa Clara and are still doing business.

Trumbull & Beebe were seedsmen, nursery men and florists, confining their efforts more particularly to the retail

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

On some sorts of mangel wurzel quotations are slightly cheaper, while others have made slight advance. To a careful observer, however, the signs are apparent that all varieties are likely to advance before the end of the season. Generally speaking, there was no surplus of any variety last season and most merchants and growers will hold over any surplus there may be this year rather than weaken the market by a lower price.

I have heard complaints lately in reference to sweet pea seed grown in California; that the climate of that country, or some other cause, induces sportiveness to rather a greater extent than is appreciated by many growers here.

The seed potato trade is nearing its close and reports are that through the whole season it has been characterized by a very dead and uninteresting sale. Eldorado, the true stock, is being offered as low as £4 per ton. It is surprising how many growers are going back to the old Up-to-Date. The Scotch trade for seed is growing. It has been repeatedly proved that a ton of Scotch-grown seed potatoes will produce two tons more

SEED CROPS IN FRANCE.

The season is over for wholesale business, but at the first of April we are still waiting for the orders of our retail customers. Weather is so wet that most farmers dare not put seeds in the earth. Peas have been sown only in small quantities, and it is probable that business will not be very brisk for pea growers next autumn.

The weather has also delayed the sowing of yearly seeds, and the transplanting of roots and bulbs for next season. Now, that it seems to turn out a bit better, we may have an idea of the harm done by rain to the plants, and of the prospect for 1906 crop. I am sorry to say it is not very bright.

Beets and mangels are now being transplanted, and unhappily we find that a good many plants have suffered from wet weather and following frosts. I may say about half are rotten and absolutely lost. With regard to mangels, I must mention the great favor of the two giant white, half-sugar varieties, which reached a high price again this season. Apart from one or two good yellow varieties, farmers have planted mostly the two half-sugar varieties for seeds again, so that next autumn we may expect a large quantity of same. These are two excellent varieties of mangels, becoming very big and containing more sugar than any others, so that the feeding property for cattle is also far superior; consequently, I believe I am not mistaken in saying the favor of these varieties will continue.

Carrots have also been recently transplanted, but not in a good state; a lot of plants had been under water for some time. Cabbages, turnips and swedes have been mostly affected by continuous rain, which made the young plants very tender and therefore unable to stand the frosty weather which came lately. A large acreage had to be ploughed up, and a small crop is expected; the consequence is a rise of price for the present, and very likely high prices will be asked for all varieties when we come nearer to harvest time.

Leeks do not look so bad; only in some districts floods have destroyed all plantations, but I estimate the plantations will be over half the usual ones. If we recollect that leek seeds reached a good price last season, and seeds were pretty scarce, we shall soon deduce that they ought to keep up a good price next year.

Onions have been put in largely, owing to the big prices onion seeds reached last season. However, bulbs had too much rain to keep well, so that a good part became entirely unsound for planting, the more so that planting was delayed on account of the continuous unfavorable weather.

With regard to onions, the check and fall of price of the seeds in the middle of the season is worth mentioning. This no doubt is due to the lot of seeds coming from countries unknown, so to say, for production up to present time. When in London last autumn I had an opportunity of being offered a stock of Teneriffe onion seeds, which certainly looked good. I also saw some bulbs of the stocks offered. They looked very much like white Spanish in form and color, but had already shot up. It is true it was in a small close room, but my impression was that it would not keep so well as the old white Spanish, which I can still see here in good sound bulbs, with no trace of sprouting at all. However, in such scarce years, people will have to do with this, and other hot countries' seeds, as I understand tons of same have been sold this year, coming from Teneriffe and California.

This shows once more, that even in scarce years, seeds cannot run any more to such high prices as we used to see in past times. Prices will be checked by other centers of production, no matter if quality is sacrificed a bit.

Radishes will not be grown on a large scale in our district this year. Growers are tired of the bad crops that they have had some years running, and are asking for better prices. The result is that very little radish will be sown here for seeds. —Horticultural Advertiser.

rists' Association is progressing, the largest number of replies coming from Tennessee, Mississippi and Georgia. No doubt when started every state will join in.

President P. Chopin appointed for the committee of the next flower show the following members: Paul Abele, chairman; Jos. Steckler, secretary; J. A. Newsham, Robt. Lockerby, C. W. Eichling, Otto Werner, J. St. Mard, Geo. Mahn, Claude Ory and C. W. Panther.

R. Eichling made a few appropriate remarks about the importance of members exchanging ideas about the raising of plants and, following that idea, he gave his experience in growing a new variety of sweet pea, an improvement on Mont Blanc. The seed is offered by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., who say that it will flower in forty days. Mr. Eichling said that under our climate they have come to flower in thirty-five days, and judging from the flowers he exhibited we may say it is a good acquisition.

MADISON, N. J.

The April meeting of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was well attended. Morristown came down with a full delegation. Wm. Duckham's theme, "A Journey Abroad," was the drawing card. He gave us a very interesting story of his four months' trip. His account of the Edinburgh flower show was interesting from more than one point of view. The city itself, through which he was piloted by the veteran grower, Peter Barr, he declared, was the finest he ever saw. In this city of 280,000 population the paid admissions to the show were over 75,000. In chrysanthemums, he said, varieties which do only indifferently with us under the best culture, were better than anything he ever saw here, and some varieties that do best with us were only medium there. His conclusion was that climatic conditions as well as good culture have a great deal to do with producing good mums. He visited many private places of note in Scotland and England, the Kew Gardens and the great commercial places, and many interesting and instructive notes were taken. Some new things were added to his already noted collection by this trip. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the speaker.

The plant exhibition for this month consisted of a magnificent group of Spiraea Gladstone, put up by Otto Koch, florist at the State Hospital at Morris Plains. Judges Duckham, Herrington and Totty awarded it the society's certificate of merit.

Four new members were elected: A. J. Guttman, Summit; Wm. G. Badgely, Chatham; Robt. Tyson and Percy Herbert, Florham Park. Our flower show schedule is to be revised in committee for the next meeting. It was decided to hold the next show in Madison, November 1 and 2. E. R.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Albert C. Rott has gone to Denver to enter the employ of the Colfax Avenue Floral Co.

MEADVILLE, PA.—George W. Haas & Son say Easter trade was great. Lilies, hyacinths, carnations, azaleas and tulips were in heaviest demand; roses were not in it with these. Primroses sold well, and even geraniums; in fact, any plant in flower went. On Friday the weather was fine, on Saturday rainy, on Sunday cold.

THE BUILDING BOOM.

Early in the new year the manufacturers of greenhouse structural material awakened to the fact that a building boom was on. It was not long before they found the season's orders running considerably in excess of any previous year, a lead which has been steadily maintained. A little later the jobbers in window glass felt the effects of the building boom and shortly the dealers in greenhouse hardware began to feel it, especially those who handle full lines. Among these is Henion & Hubbell, who supply the steam fitting materials and heating specialties for a large number of the growers north of Chicago. They handle practically everything in the line of steam fitters' and plumbers' supplies and report that the season's inquiries are very much heavier than usual in this department. A great many of the larger greenhouse establishments are putting in steam instead of hot water heat. They are buying steam traps, pressure regulators and other accessories of up-to-date heating plants. The Henion & Hubbell Co. has a man especially to look after the greenhouse business in Cook county and also does a large mail order business in the same department. They find this business growing rapidly and intend to push it.

The Herendeen Mfg. Co., of Geneva, N. Y., is another firm which is feeling the effects of the building boom. The boiler is not wanted so early as the other material and the inquiries in this line are a little later in coming to hand. The Herendeen people issue a special greenhouse catalogue and have sold many hundreds of boilers to florists. They were awarded a certificate of merit for their exhibit at the S. A. F. convention at New York in 1900. They have several branch warehouses through the country, at all of which it is reported that the greenhouse business this season promises to be the heaviest on record.

One heating specialty in which the growers are taking much interest is the rocking grate. The device manufactured by the Martin Grate Co. was last season installed by most of the large growers around Chicago. Nearly every visitor takes occasion to look into the work-

BRADDOCK, PA.—The friends of Walter Garbett, manager of L. I. Neff's store here, surprised him at his home on the evening of April 17, his birthday anniversary.

PACIFIC COAST.

ON page 1637 is an illustration showing the Easter windows of Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore.

ON page 1635 will be found a map of San Francisco, showing the locations of nearly all the florists of the city and indicating the boundary of the district devastated by the earthquake and fire.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Easter was a record for this town. Stock sold out very clean and everyone seems satisfied. Only A. J. Woodward and Mrs. Flewin had Easter lilies but the supply was sufficient. These firms shipped lilies to many points in the northwest.

In most of the establishments tomatoes have taken the place of carnations. A. J. Woodward is growing 30,000 plants. I was permitted to view his Easter cut of carnations and they were great. Enchantress and Lady Bountiful were in glorious form.

The bedding season is now under way. There has been a brisk demand for annuals this week.

The severe frost in the middle of March has left traces of its severity in our gardens and there will be many gaps to fill up. E. A. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Easter Trade.

Now that we are thoroughly rested and have once more found our bearings, we look back with great satisfaction on an Easter trade pronounced by both wholesaler and retailer as being the best ever. The elements, which play an important part in the making of a successful Easter, were in perfect accord with the season. There was not one unpleasant feature.

We have five stores in the business district, vying with each other for first honors, and second to none in the large cities. To keep in touch with the times is our aim. The window decorations bear out this statement.

Never was the quality of the stock finer and never were we better prepared to supply a growing demand. Easter lilies were grand. The sales were nearly double those of a year ago. All other bulbous stock was off a week previous. Some good cinerarias, lilacs and spiraeas helped to make up the plant display, but they are not so popular here.

The variety of cut flowers was limited, but the quality was superb. Roses such as we now are cutting, perfect flowers on 3-foot stems, cannot be excelled anywhere. They are President Carnot, Test-out, Kaiserin, Golden Gate, Bride and Bridesmaid. American Beauty is not profitable with us, hence few are grown here.

The weather has become too warm for violets and the sweet pea supplanted them. Carnations were, as always, much in demand and, as the supply was ample, only a slight advance on regular prices was asked.

Both 1905 and 1906 have demonstrated that a late Easter calls for the single plant, rather than made-up effects, and that second grade stock cannot be disposed of at any price. A few small church decorations brought diversion, but not much revenue. The verdict is unanimous, everybody satisfied, and that is saying a good deal. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

As I write I hear the booming of dynamite discharged at short intervals in an effort to save by these extreme measures a portion of the city, a large part of which has been razed to the ground. Box after box of dynamite is being ineffectually used to stay the ravages of the flames following the earthquake, but block after block is licked up by the great tongues of fire.

At the least calculation half of the florists are completely burned out, and for the few that remain there seems to be little ahead that is cheering. Fully 100,000 people left the stricken city today and all the ferries and public conveyances are filled to their utmost capacity. Oakland received 100,000 refugees today and is the center of the relief work. That town also suffered from the earthquake shock, but happily was not visited by fire. Things in the cut flower line are absolutely at a standstill. Not one among the hundreds of growers in this vicinity has any place whatever to use his stock. It will be several days before it will be possible to get any summary of the situation. G.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Cut It Out.

We beg to call your attention to the fact that within the past few weeks we have written to a number of your advertisers for carnation cuttings, asking for varieties which they advertised, and in several cases have received the reply that they no longer had any of the stock advertised.

We are right up in the front line of "kickers" when we believe we are justified in being there, and we think that you cannot impress too strongly on your advertisers that one of the easiest ways of "knocking" their own business is to advertise what they have not got; or if they did have it at one time, not keeping the advertisement in accord with the stock on hand.

We are writing as we do simply because we know that such conditions will never be improved upon until the buyers of stock advertised show that they do not appreciate the good points of firms paying so little attention to their advertising departments.

We trust you will give a little space in your very much appreciated publication and try and impress on your advertisers the advisability of advertising only what they have for sale.

WM. HY. EVANS.

[The REVIEW for weeks has carried a paragraph headed "Cut It Out," urging advertisers to change their "copy" promptly as stocks run low. The REVIEW fully appreciates the injury done to advertising in general by advertisers who are careless in this regard.—Ed.]

QUEENS, N. Y.—C. W. Ward, president of the Cottage Gardens Co., states that with the close of the present season that firm will discontinue the active business of growing and selling rooted cuttings.

GREENSBURG, IND.—Ira Clark and his sister have bought out Mr. Draper, of Draper & Clark, and will do business as Ira Clark & Co. About a year ago they bought out Mr. Bentlage, who was proprietor of the Greensburg Floral Co., so they now run both places.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

PLANTERS of peach orchards show a growing tendency toward the closer pruning of the tops.

"THE PLUM CURCULIO" is the title of a bulletin of the Bureau of Entomology of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, which will interest the nursery trade.

L. B. SPENCER, C. E., has the contract for platting the town of Croydon, Utah, the name of which will be changed to Portland. A model town will be built.

THE nurserymen throughout Minnesota are possibly the busiest lot in the trade at the present time. Their spring packing is now on. L. L. May & Co. have about 150 men at their nurseries.

D. G. WIEGAND BRUSS, of the firm of Van der Weijden & Co., Boskoop, Holland, is in Chicago this week and reports bookings of nursery stock heavier than on any of his previous American tours.

MAX C. MEYER has retired from the Phoenix Nursery Co., Delavan, Wis., and is succeeded by A. P. Wilkins as manager, secretary and treasurer. H. C. Johnson continues as president, while Will Moore, who has been with the nursery for over fifteen years, is now a partner and will have supervision of the stock and grounds. Mr. Wilkins was proprietor prior to Meyer's connection with the business.

ON April 13 E. W. Kirkpatrick and C. C. Mayhew held a conference with Col. John G. Hunter, secretary of the Commercial Club of Dallas, Tex., with reference to the accommodations for the visitors to the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held in Dallas in June. The committee stated that it expects between 300 and 500 visitors from the northern and eastern states and a larger trade exhibition than ever before.

THE records of the Department of Agriculture show that the 1906 brood of seventeen-year locust may be expected to be especially numerous in central and southeastern Pennsylvania, southern Ohio, southern Indiana and Kentucky. When it appears in large numbers it naturally causes alarm, but the actual damage is usually confined to newly planted fruit trees, and a subsequent hard pruning will often save these from injury caused by the egg punctures.

BEST APPLES FOR MISSOURI.

Under date of April 10 L. A. Goodman, secretary of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, sent out the following:

In some parts of the state we learn that numbers of fruit tree agents are selling whole root and budded apple trees for 35 cents each, claiming that root-grafted trees are worthless. They are also selling what they claim are new varieties and little known varieties of apple trees, claiming that the old varieties are no more good.

We advise that you buy good No. 1 two-year-old apple trees, four to six feet high, from your home nursery or some nursery firm which you know is responsible. You can buy such trees for $5 or $6 per hundred. The best varieties for our state are:

Summer: Early Harvest, Red June, Benoni, Early Pennock, Sops of Wine, Duchess, Sweet Bough.

Fall: Lowell, Maiden Blush, Jeffries, Wealthy, Grime's Golden, Jonathan, Broadwell Sweet.

Winter: Gano, Ben Davis, Winesap, Black Twig, York, Huntsman, White Pippin, Ingram, Ladies' Sweet.

The semi-annual meeting of the society will be held at Moberly, June 12-14, 1906.

PIONEER NURSERYMEN GONE.

T. L. Goff, Chadron, Neb.

Theodore Lovell Goff, a leading nurseryman of Chadron, Neb., and one of the earliest settlers, died April 16. He leaves a wife, three daughters and one son.

J. C. Blair, Kansas City.

John C. Blair, 65 years of age, died April 17, at the home of George H. Johnson, 1010 Forest avenue. He was a partner in the firm of Blair & Kaufman, nurserymen, of Kansas City, and had been a resident of Kansas City for the past twenty-four years. He was unmarried.

Mr. Blair was born in Westchester county, Pa., in 1840. In 1867 he engaged in the nursery business at Lee's Summit with two brothers. In 1882 the partnership was dissolved and he removed to Kansas City and entered business as a partner of William Kaufman.

TENNESSEANS TO ORGANIZE.

The State Nurserymen's Association of Tennessee is to be organized at a meeting at Nashville May 2, when the State Horticultural Society also meets. A program for morning, afternoon and evening sessions has been prepared. Besides the routine work of organization, the following subjects will be discussed: "Tennessee's Nursery Interests," by J. C. Hale, Winchester; "Needs of Tennessee Nurseries," by C. O. Fowler, Clinton, and Thos. Brazelton, Winchester; "History of the Nursery Business in Tennessee," by W. W. Twitty, Blanche, and John Shadow, Winchester; "Our Relation to the American Association of Nurserymen," by A. I. Smith, Knoxville, and C. A. Cantrell, Keltonburg; "The Fruit Grower and the Nurserymen," by F. A. Pattie, Winchester; "Nursery Inspection in Tennessee," by G. M. Bentley, Knoxville; "Greenhouse Interests," by James Morton, Clarksville; "San Jose Scale," by A. H. Morgan, Knoxville.

DETROIT.

The Market.

A steady flow of business has kept the market pretty well cleaned up. Roses, carnations and in fact all flowers are very good.

The boys are all very glad that Easter with all its trials and tribulations is over, and before long we will find them head over heels in outdoor work.

Club Meeting.

Easter trade was thoroughly discussed at the Detroit Florists' Club's last meeting. The sale of potted plants was reported as having been exceptionally heavy. The lateness of Easter and the warm weather were given as the main reasons, it being easier to persuade people to buy plants when the trees commence to leaf than in wintry weather. In cut flowers, violets were of fine quality and sold very well. Sweet peas also found a ready market. Roses were very good, but the money made on violets was lost on roses and carnations, as neither of these sold well. Spring flowers sold fairly well, but the inclination toward buying blooming plants seems more noticeable each year.

During the evening the remark was made that the retailers are too extravagant in the use of boxes, fancy cords, foil, etc., one grower averring a tendency toward lowering the market price of cut flowers. Quite a discussion followed, during which the growers were shown that the retail man is just as anxious to keep down his expenses as anyone, but that competition and the demands of the better class of trade are responsible for this seeming extravagance.

Secretary J. F. Sullivan was instructed to write Mayor Codd congratulating him as well as the city of Detroit in having secured so capable a man as Philip Breitmeyer for park commissioner. The secretary was also instructed to write Mr. Breitmeyer on behalf of the club congratulating him on his appointment and the help of so able an assistant as Wm. Dilger.

J. Gooding and F. J. Wells, both of Mount Clemens, were elected members.

The entertainment committee was instructed to make a report at the next meeting in regard to the club's outing. Quite a freak in the shape of a carnation was exhibited by E. A. Kuhnke, of Toledo.

Various Notes.

Philip Breitmeyer was entertained by his friends Thursday evening and presented with a gold badge of office as park commissioner.

L. R. Taft, of Lansing, has been in town making arrangements for the state fair. H. S.

Some People have taken our advice as published in these columns recently and are buying My Maryland for trial. We reiterate here—if it succeeds with you as it does with us, it will prove the best white carnation you ever grew. Despite the variety's apparent failure in several places, we strongly advise all growers to give it a trial. We have been frank about its faults as developed in other places. We doubt if these will develop in many places.

Jessica we believe, will succeed generally and will prove to be the best red and white variegated ever disseminated. Few varieties show as strong constitution as this one does and it is a wonderful producer. Extra fine stock of both varieties ready now. R. C., $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Pot plants, $3.00 per 100 extra.

TORONTO.

The Easter Trade.

One of the most noticeable features of the Easter trade is the general increased demand for plants over cut flowers. One of the causes of this may be the advancing of prices by the wholesaler at Easter and Christmas, while plants maintain a more normal price at all seasons. The retail men are pushing the sale of plants on account of being able to make a larger margin of profit than they can on cut flowers at the holiday season. Many of the best retail men tell us that they cannot ask from their regular customers prices for cut flowers at holiday season that would give them anything like a reasonable margin.

We were treated this Easter to a wet Saturday, which very materially affected business, and consequently quantities of cut flowers were left over. It is the first holiday season that the wholesale men have had sufficient to go around and some to spare. In plants everything cleaned up well. Some very fine rhododendrons and azaleas were to be seen, together with quantities of spiraeas, lilies and other flowering plants.

Dunlop's stores were a magnificent show, with well grown plants from their own conservatories. S. Tidy & Son had the usual big stock of flowering plants, among which were special importations from the States. His large conservatory at the back of his store gives him an ideal place for display. J. S. Simmons had his store stocked with all varieties of plants and cut flowers. In the background of his window was an immense cross of bronze galax leaves finished at the base with lilies and doves.

Since Easter trade has been slack and stock is accumulating very fast. Especially do we notice this in roses and carnations. Bulbous stock is shortening in supply. Sweet peas are coming in quite plentifully.

We regret to report the serious illness of J. S. Simmons, who on April 17 suffered a nervous collapse. He had overtaxed his strength and is still very weak.

BALTIMORE.

The Easter Trade.

Easter trade was very satisfactory. Considerable more business was done than in previous years. Good roses were scarce, owing to several of the largest growers being off crop. Of carnations there were plenty to fill orders at the wholesale house, pink being in much greater demand than white. One noticeable feature about roses and carnations was that very little salted stock showed up. Very few good, home-grown violets could be had; the bulk were from out of town. Harrisii, callas and double tulips sold well, but a good many Harrisii were carried over on account of the very short stems. Plenty of good smilax and asparagus could be had.

A much larger assortment of blooming plants was grown this year, and many were handled through the Baltimore Florists' Exchange. The pot-plant display at the stores and markets was very attractive, although nothing very new was seen.

Various Notes.

Fred Bauer, of Govanstown, is sending in some fine lily of the valley out of frames.

Stevens Bros. are cutting some of the best Brides and Maids seen around Maryland.

Stran & Co. have almost completed three new houses, intended for carnations and pot plants.

J. J. Cummings is putting up five new houses for cut flowers. His usual large assortment of Easter plants was in fine condition.

Lehr Bros. have completed a new house for cut flowers. Their Easter stock was in good shape and found ready sale.

Mr. Rider is sending in about the finest Genevieve Lord carnations seen this season.

Mr. Akehurst, of White Marsh, is cutting some Bountiful and Flora Hill carnations that are about as fine as can be produced.

Visitors the past week included a quintet of Philadelphia drummers.

Easter Trade.

The weather Easter week was mild and, in spite of predictions to the contrary, there were plenty of flowers and plants to go around, although everything sold out close and the total of business was from fifteen to twenty per cent better than last year. The stores showed the largest increase, while the outside greenhouses did a business about equal to last year. Three dry goods stores had special lily and plant sales and had all the business they could handle. The craze for rose plants has waned; better plants were offered this year, with less demand.

Some of the florists were short of lilies, but Crabb & Hunter had an abundance. Henry Smith and the Grand Rapids Floral Co. were the only others having enough for their requirements.

Wm. Cunningham had plenty of other plants, but was short of lilies.

The Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. did a good cut flower and plant business, but was short on lilies.

The Park Floral Co. had to buy lilies.

Eli Cross had most of his lilies disposed of before Easter arrived and what few he had went quickly. He had a fine lot of Crimson Ramblers. A good share of them were shipped to Chicago, where a large quantity of Crabb & Hunter's plants also went.

James Schol's place is mostly violets and he had a large cut consigned to Chicago.

Miss Hartnett's father died Friday night and she was obliged to leave her store in charge of an assistant; still she reports a good Easter trade.

It was surprising the demand there was for violets, but it only goes to show the close hold it has on the affections of flower buyers.

Chas. Chadwick was well stocked with everything except bulbous flowers. His trade was far in excess of last year.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

Considering the great Easter trade, which is usually followed by a slump, business was remarkably good during the past week. Several of the decorators were, by the middle of the week, so busy with wedding and dinner decorations that their whole force was on the jump. If material for fine decorations is to be considered, this is the time to get married, as choice American Beauty and other roses, lilies and carnations are abundant. Spring blossoms of indifferent quality are being used to some extent, but are more of a nuisance than otherwise.

Various Notes.

Free seeds will come up in the House of Representatives some time between April 23 and 28, in connection with the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill.

Hon. John R. McLean, proprietor of the Washington Post, has tendered the use of Friendship, his country home, for a grand lawn fete to be held May 2, for the benefit of the people of San Francisco. The calamity which has fallen upon that stricken city is so dreadful that no apology is necessary for alluding to it here. President Roosevelt has dispatched Secretary Metcalf to the scene.

Gude Bros. Co. furnished an elaborate decoration April 18 for the wedding, at St. Thomas' church, of Miss Maud Ely to Lieut. Commander John H. Gibbons, naval attache of the American embassy at London. A great number of palms, flowering plants and cut roses were used in the decoration of the church. For the reception, the home of Mrs. Richard S. Ely, mother of the bride, was lavishly treated, the French style of decoration being closely followed.

On April 17, Z. D. Blakistone handsomely decorated the Pro-Cathedral church (P. E.) for the wedding of his sister, Miss Frances P. Blakistone, to Henry R. Rives, of New York.

Haslam's Insect Powder, an infallible insecticide. Destroys insects injurious to house and garden plants, shrubs, trees, vines, potatoes, melons, cabbage, currants, and vegetables and fruits of all kinds.

This preparation, though poisonous to insects, does not injure the foliage. It is used either by dusting or in water by spraying. Also destroys lice on fowls, cattle and dogs. Kills green fly on roses and other flowers, insects on quinces and pears. Insects that fly like flies, beetles and rose bugs are more difficult to contend against than are caterpillars or slugs. Look often and dust or sprinkle when necessary.

Put up in 1-lb. boxes at 25c; 5 boxes for $1.00. Special prices in bulk.
Haslam Chemical Co., 118 Cliff St., Scranton, Pa.

Sprinkle it freely about stables, kennels, cow sheds, pig sties, poultry houses, rabbit hutches, farm-yards, market places, factories, urinals, ash bins, etc. For disinfecting walls, ceilings, cattle trucks, and slaughter-houses, make the powder into a wash or milk by admixture with water and apply it in that form.

This is the purest and has the most strength of any lime made. Sure death to vermin and insects and superior to chloride of lime. No odor. Put up in bulk at 10c per lb.

FRAGRANT RHODODENDRONS.

Showy though a flower may be, the possession of a pleasing fragrance is a great additional recommendation, on which account some of the greenhouse varieties of rhododendron are appreciated above all others. The hybrids in most instances owe their perfume to the influence of Rhododendron Edgeworthi, a Himalayan species, which is rather more particular in its cultural requirements than many of the hybrids, as being naturally more or less of an epiphyte, it needs ample drainage and an open rooting medium, such as good fibrous peat and rough silver sand. Into this it should be firmly potted. Among the best of these sweet-scented rhododendrons for flowering in the greenhouse are: Countess of Derby, Countess of Sefton, Duchess of Sutherland, Fragrantissimum, Lady Alice Fitzwilliam, Mrs. James Shawe and Sesterianum. All these varieties flower in the spring, then grow and set their buds for another season, unlike the members of the tube-flowered, or Javanese section, which grow and flower more or less continuously throughout the year.—Gardeners' Magazine.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The serious aspects of the coal question upon the prospects of the florists' business was one of the principal topics discussed at the monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, in Swart's lodge hall April 16. In the absence of President J. F. Schellinger, the meeting was called to order by Vice-President William Hill. There was a good attendance and after a discussion of the Easter trade and conditions, reports were made on the Boston rose exhibition and there was a general discussion also of the ravages of the gypsy moth upon trees, plants and shrubs.

The hardships that were experienced by the florists during the big coal strike of 1903 were retold by the various members and it was stated that if there should be any increase over the present prices of coal many of the smaller florists would be unable to make a profit next season.

The matter of excursions to some of the larger greenhouses of the state was discussed and a committee will be appointed to arrange several of these, also several outings during the summer.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

A week of fine weather has started the planting fever, the greenhouses are crowded with purchasers and stock is rapidly decreasing. Easter business increased more than one-half over last year. The growers who were fortunate enough to be able to keep their Harrisii lilies, sold out at good prices. The call was for cut flowers. Fancy baskets and trimmed pot plants are as yet unknown here, but the same pleasing feature is enacted on Easter as at Christmas, that of placing offerings on the graves of friends. Here in the south people never forget those gone before.

Landscape work has received an impetus this year. More of that class of work has been done than ever before, and, judging by the inquiries from all over this section of the state and the two territories, there will be a great deal of work done next fall.

Carnations and roses are in the fields and doing well. A couple more weeks will find all bedding stock planted.

Carnations in the houses are taking a spurt and some large cuts are being made. Mums are looking well and will

The Market.

Barring a couple of days immediately following Easter, we have no kick coming as to business since the holiday. There has been considerable life to the demand and the supply has been very good. Prices have been holding up and altogether we have every reason to be satisfied. There also has been a very great improvement in the weather.

Both roses and carnations are equal to the demand and the quality is first-class. Violets are about over for this year. Bulbous stock is beginning to slacken up and its days are numbered. The exception will be callas and Harrisii. They are in good supply and selling well at good prices.

Smilax continues to be scarce, but there is a good supply of all other kinds of greens. Ferns are holding out very nicely this year and it will not be very long till the new crop begins to come in from the south.

Various Notes.

P. J. Olinger has been very much worried over the illness of his two children. They have been very low, but it is believed that the worst is over.

Mr. Griswold, of Toledo, has accepted a position with the Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar, of which Chas. Jones is the proprietor.

Park Superintendent J. W. Rodgers and Miss Martha C. Meyer were married April 18 at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers are now on a trip through the east and incidentally looking over the park systems of the larger cities.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club rooms Saturday evening, but owing to the season of the year there were few of the members present. There was no special business, but several subjects of general interest were discussed. The healthy state of the treasury was gratifying to all of the members. The next regular meeting will be held May 12. At this meeting the nomination of officers for the ensuing year will be in order. A topic of general interest will be our annual outing. Ben George stated that it is his intention to invite the society to meet at his place in July. All of those who were fortunate enough to have accepted his invitation last year will hail this information with delight.

Easter Trade.

Easter business was the most satisfactory in our experience. The weather was ideal, which alone was needed for the record-breaking trade that was enjoyed by everyone. The sales increased more on blooming plants than on cut stock, the prices not being any higher on account of it. Lilies were by far the most popular plants and every store was well stocked with them, also with hydrangeas, azaleas, Crimson Ramblers, etc. Azaleas and hydrangeas did not appear to be as popular as formerly and some of the stores report having some left. Quite a few Baby Ramblers were seen and sold well. Spiræas were good.

In cut flowers, while there was a very good market, no remarkable rise in prices occurred. Roses did not move very freely. Carnations were most sought after. The prices were not prohibitive, ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen, and all were sold. Best Beauties did not move as freely as was expected and did not make over $12 to $15 retail. A good medium grade, however, was in demand. Richmond and Liberty sold well, while Bride, Maid and Chateaufort made no advance at all and there was plenty to satisfy the demand. Violets were a little scarce, the best stock retailing for $2 per hundred. Sweet peas were snapped up quickly, the best selling at $1.50 per hundred.

Church decorations were not exceptional. St. John's Episcopal and Trinity had the most elaborate displays.

Various Notes.

N. A. Benson is to build a new house 50x125 for carnations.

The city gave away 25,000 trees for planting on Arbor day. They were much sought after.

The Florists' Bowling League closed its season a week ago with an exciting finish, there being three teams tied for first place. Team No. 4 won out, with only ten pins to spare. The league was a success and much interest was shown through the season. Nearly $100 is in the treasury for prizes.

The Park Floral Co. had ten wagons loaded with plants, and one automobile with cut flowers, ready to start out at eight o'clock Easter morning.

The Market.

We have settled down from the great rush of Easter to a good steady trade. All seem very well satisfied with the business of the past week, agreeing that it has been more than was expected. Prices have gone back to what they were previous to Easter. Carnations are still in very large supply, but as everybody seems to want them the growers and dealers have both worked them off very well indeed. There are still large quantities of bulbous stock, and it begins to go slowly. Roses are, as always, in good demand. In the whole we are having a very satisfactory business. I must especially mention the funeral orders of the past week, as they have been very much in evidence, both in number and size.

Florists' Club.

Last Thursday evening our club devoted its regular session to bowling, in which a great deal of interest is being taken. It looks as if we would be able to send a very good team to Dayton this summer.

The penny packets of seeds prepared by the club have about all been distributed to the school children.

The next meeting will be Tuesday evening, May 1.

Various Notes.

Graff Bros. have largely increased their retail business lately. This firm feels that the demand for cut flowers is increasing very rapidly in this city. Mr. Graff thinks a third more flowers are being sold than a year ago. There is no question but that the chrysanthemum show of last autumn helped the trade wonderfully. ZERO.

Easter trade was very good. Palm Sunday there were hundreds of visitors at J. R. Hellenthal's greenhouses to see his large display of Easter stock. His 230 ramblers were well flowered and well shaped plants, as Mr. Hellenthal finds it pays to grow some large plants; there is always a good demand for good stock to sell at $2 to $4.50. Longiflorum lilies were extra good this season; perfect foliage, large flowers and plants a good size, three feet and over. Hydrangeas were exceptionally fine, with six to eleven heads of bloom. They brought $2 to $5 per plant. A fine lot of red peonies came in just right and made a very attractive window display in his store on South High street. Baby Rambler and hybrid roses were in good shape. Ulrich Brunner, Magna Charta, Baroness Rothschild and Frau Karl Druschki sold readily at 75 cents to $1.25 per plant. Bulbous stock was all very good. Every salable plant cleaned up by Saturday night.

Mr. Hellenthal has planned to build a carnation house this season 30x140 feet, to meet the demand of his increasing trade. That will give him 30,000 square feet of glass. C. M. J.

August Jahn says he had a very good trade.

R. E. Noftz was very well satisfied with his first Easter trade. He had the cream of the violet trade.

The J. V. Spare Dry Goods Co. tried to give the florists a rub on lilies, azaleas and spiræas, selling them very cheap. It is the only store which ever did anything of the kind and naturally the florists are incensed. They and August Jahn, who is next door, are having a run on hardy rose bushes.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Iowa Seed Co. has bought the business of the Morris-Blair Floral Co., 308 Seventh street. Under the management of the Iowa Seed Co. every facility will be provided to give Des Moines a flower store to meet every possible requirement. In addition to the greenhouses purchased from the Morris-Blair Co., the Iowa Seed Co. has twenty-four greenhouses of its own to draw from. This makes it the largest operating floral company in central Iowa. It is the intention to make the Seventh street store one of the most inviting and best establishments in this city.

Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., opened the first down-town cut flower store in Des Moines twenty-two years ago. Few men are better known in the business than Mr. Page. Under his guidance the Iowa Seed Co. has grown to such proportions as to attain an international reputation.

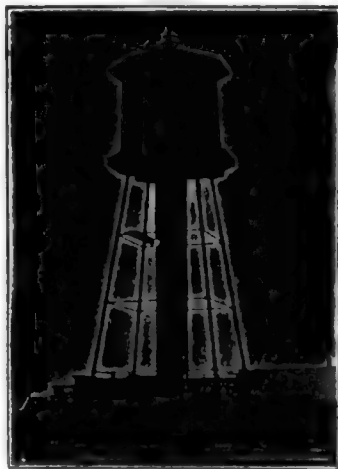

PEOPLÉ who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

is not a matter of mere installation of a boiler, and laying of pipe—it's the accurate, practical knowledge of plant requirements and heat engineering. 60 years of boiler test is one thing, and the laying of pipe another.

THE FIRE PICTURE.

The photograph reproduced on this page was taken for the REVIEW on Friday afternoon, April 20. It shows the burning city of San Francisco as it appeared to the refugees gathered at the top of Telegraph Hill, where the correspondent stood. The district shown was completely swept by the fire, the houses in this section of the city being all of frame construction, as indeed were most of the residences in the city. San Francisco had no such building regulations as have most American cities, prohibiting the erection of wood structures in the closely built sections.

THE FLORISTS' PREDICAMENT.

Last Week's Report Complete.

Supplementing my report published last week, which gave full details of the losses sustained by the florists of San Francisco, it only can be said that the flower stores to escape were those of the Park Floral Co., Anderson & Co. and Serveau Bros. These are far removed from the business center, and as a consequence they are still in existence. The combined losses of the retailers will amount to from $750,000 to $850,000. None of the nurseries in town is damaged to any extent. Sievers & Co. were on the edge of the burned area, but escaped completely. Chas. Abraham and F. Ludemann were well outside of the stricken territory.

All the seedsmen in town were completely wiped off the map except Vincent, Levin & Co., of 621 Sansome street. The losses to the other houses, the Cox Seed Co., C. C. Morse & Co., Trumbull & Beebe, Thos. Meherin and the Lilly Co., will easily foot up to at least $250,000, making a loss of over $1,000,000 to the wholesale and retail florists and seedsmen.

Florists Have Gone.

There is not a vestige of a green leaf to be seen in San Francisco, except a few palms around City Hall square, and with the disappearance of green goods the florists likewise have taken to flight. Some of them barely escaped with their lives, and a few of the more fortunate saved their books and personal belongings. The town has decreased in population from the 400,000 of a week ago to about 150,000 at present. At least 100,000 are quartered in Oakland and vicinity, and about fifty florists and assistants are over there, many of them with their families.

The Future.

It is too soon to venture predictions as to what will be done in the matter of re-establishing permanent flower stores in town. Already many of the largest general stores have opened offices in Oakland and will continue to direct business from there until they can be accommodated with quarters at home. But this is not practicable for the florist, as it is plainly shown that at this time the public is not buying flowers to any extent, and Oakland already has all the stores that can be supported, even with an extra hundred thousand refugees on hand.

I have seen probably twenty of the unfortunate retailers, and all of them are completely at sea regarding their intentions in the future. The suddenness of the blow and the awful experience passed through has left everyone in a dazed condition, and none knows where he stands.

Where the Grower Stands.

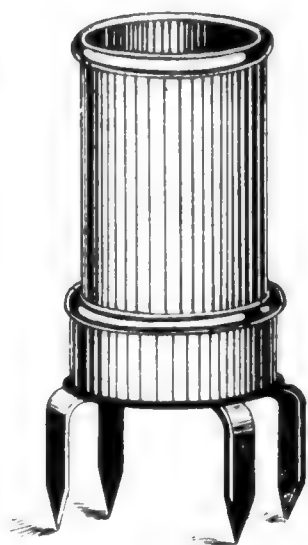

From conversations I have had with the growers I think there is probably due about $50,000 altogether to them from the retailers for Easter goods. This represents quite an item in the year's receipts and it is probable that a considerable portion of it will never be paid, being that both the retailers and, in a majority of cases, all their customers are burned out. The chances are not very bright for a speedy settling of accounts.

The all-absorbing questions with the wholesale growers at present are: How far shall I keep up the cultivation of my plant? Will it pay me to hire the necessary help to keep it in operation? Shall I continue to carry a big lot of young stock for fall replanting? Would it not be cheaper to let my carnations and roses die and close up the houses? Shall I cancel my fall order for bulbs? I wonder how long it will be before I can sell anything?

In the meanwhile hundreds of thousands of the finest stock ever grown is daily consigned to the rubbish heap, and greatly to the credit of both wholesalers and retailers, they have gone long distances in many instances and donated wagon-loads of flowers of all descriptions to the suffering in the various hospitals.

The Burning of San Francisco, Photographed for the Review, Friday, April 20.

An Unparalleled Situation.

Such a condition of affairs has probably never before been experienced in the utter demoralization of trade in such a large area of country, and signs for any improvement for a long time to come are at present not apparent. The public has absolutely no use for flowers. Everyone is interested in getting a place to sleep, and it will be a long time before anything in the way of luxuries is aimed at.

All the undertakers in San Francisco are burned out, all the public halls, most of the churches. Over 250,000 people have left the town and are located in various parts of the state, so that the chances for funeral work are very slim. Most of the hearses and carriages have gone to the flames. Funerals are conducted very quietly. There are but few caskets in town, and the friends are so widely distributed when a death occurs that there is no chance for the florist.

Quantities and Prices.

A low estimate of the carnations that should be marketed at this time is about a million blooms per week, and about half a million rose buds in the same length of time. It is safe to say that not over five per cent are shipped to outside points, and when this was done direct from the wholesalers there has been little change. The retail dealers have in many instances turned their out-of-town regular customers over to the growers, and in this way the stores in other localities will not be inconvenienced.

Quotations of various flowers are not worth making. The finest carnations ever seen can be had at 50 cents per hundred, and American Beauties with 4-foot stems at a few cents per dozen. Other stock is sold by the basket, and it is only a waste of time to pretend to quote on it.

How long this condition of affairs will last, or how it will turn in a few weeks, I am at a loss to conjecture. Some of the growers are trying to get a market for their goods in other towns, but large cities are scarce on this coast, and the chances are not very bright to use much stock in that way.

However, something brighter may loom up in the future to relieve the conditions somewhat, but at the present writing they are at the lowest point ever reached in this locality. G.

FIRST AND BEST.

The REVIEW, containing the very full and splendid description of the losses of the brother florists in that sadly stricken California city of San Francisco, as well as other points, came to hand in due season Thursday afternoon. I glory in the enterprise that has brought about such things in so short a time.

The catastrophe makes our trouble in 1871, in the burning of Chicago, look small, although as I read from day to day the accounts in the daily papers, many of the experiences there given were similar to those with us. The feeding of the hungry was one of those things that I, as a public officer at the time, had a hand in, in the early stages of the work.

I was also, you may be sure, glad to find that our old friend, Mr. Grant, although shaken, is all right. What an experience in one's lifetime.

EDGAR SANDERS.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Popular Nephrolepis.

Everyone must have noticed the wonderful popularity of the nephrolepis fern the past winter. Most of the large growers were sold out long before Easter. The grower of bedding plants will have his benches too full for another three or four weeks, but as soon as any can be spared, four or five inches of good, fresh loam should be put on them and the young ferns planted out one foot apart. I believe four inches of soil is quite as good as six inches, and that saves a lot of labor and material. A third of well-decayed animal manure should be mixed with the soil.

There are now so many varieties of nephrolepis that it is venturesome to say much about the merits of any particular variety.

Bostoniensis was a great improvement on old N. exaltata, and a well grown Boston will fill the bill with most people.

Scottii is a most valuable variety and makes such a compact plant, even when quite small, that it sells the best of all, and you should have a large proportion of your stock of Scottii.

The still more beautiful forms, Pier-soni and Elegantissima, and still later

Barrowsii, and now Whitmani, are beautiful as specimen plants, and as they are only sports or variations of the Boston form there is no reason why they should be more difficult to grow or less useful plants for the dwelling house.

The Bagpipe Fern.

Whitmani is the latest and seems to us the most beautiful of these many different forms, yet I would say let the great majority of your stock be the old Bostoniensis and Scottii. If the latter is well grown, you will have not only a beautiful fern, but you will notice at break of day that it resembles a full-dressed Scottish warrior clad in kilts with filibeg and tartan plaid. The bagpipes are not visible because when in full blast it is seldom that either the animal or vegetable kingdom can stand the bagpipes. They tried to introduce the pipes into Illinois, but it was a failure. To be appreciated a hilly country is required, the music being on one side of the hill and the audience on the other. After this brief allusion to the prehistoric windbag of old Scotia, I will repeat, grow all you can of this most useful class of ferns. It will pay you better than chrysanthemums.

Herbaceous Plants.

Many florists are asked to supply shrubs and herbaceous plants. Now is the time to transplant both. All of the latter move with safety now. While I am a great believer in division of labor, and more and more under our civilization is it the order of the day, yet there are many cases where our good customers have been sadly deceived by the ignorant tree peddler and his colored pictures, and they turn to the resident florist for their wants or advice. I have little to say about herbaceous plants, except that the spot where they are planted should be dug deeply and plenty of manure worked in.

Planting Deciduous Stock.

Deciduous shrubs transplant with safety any time before they are in full leaf, but much better before the leaf buds have started. All shrubs and trees have lost more or less roots in transplanting and must be pruned in proportion to the loss of roots, so that the inactive or mutilated roots will have to supply less sap. Generally the smaller the shrub the less pruning is necessary. Your customers are likely to make a face and think you are committing murder when they see you using the knife freely, but tell them, with the look of a sage and an air of authority, that it is the salvation of the shrub, and long before fall the growth will have far outstripped the shrub that was unpruned.

Hardy Roses.

Thousands of hybrid perpetual roses are planted every spring, and the great majority are disappointing. Florists or tree peddlers tell their customers, "Oh, yes, ma'm, they will flower this summer." This is deception. They will have a few abortive flowers at the ends of the shoots and make no wood to flower the next year. Tell your customers not to expect flowers the first year, and that they must be cut back to within a few eyes when first planted. Then they will make strong growth and next year will give an abundance of splendid blooms, and for years to come, if properly pruned.

Pruning Shrubs.

You will just now daily be asked to send a man "to prune my shrubs," and difficult it is to get a man who knows the difference between those which should be pruned now and those which should not be pruned until after they have flowered.

An instance of the ignorance of this was called to my attention in the shrubbery surrounding one of our large public schools in the case of a lot of forsythia, the beautiful early-flowering yellow blossom. If that is cut back hard in early spring, or before flowering time, you get no flowers. Broadly the rule is this: Shrubs that set their flower buds the previous summer, like the lilac, the forsythia, cydonia, tamarix and all our fruit trees, must not be touched until they have flowered. Then prune and they make a growth and form flower buds for the following year. The hybrid roses, Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, the althaea and many others flower only on the current year's growth, and these should be cut back before growth starts in the spring.

It would be a long chapter to tell you about all the different flowering shrubs, but just notice which flower on last year's wood and those which flower on the growth made the present summer, and you will have learned a whole lot.

Sweet Peas.

With all our phenomenally mild winter we are not more advanced than after a severe winter. Winter not only lingers in the lap of spring, but has one arm tightly around her waist, as much as to say, "I love you, dear spring; do stop and coo with me a little while."

And this reminds me that I hope you sowed sweet peas just as soon as the ground was dry and workable. A little frost does not hurt sweet peas. As soon as they are up put brush on both sides of the row. There is nothing equal to brush. Spread two inches of stable litter on the ground between the rows. It will not only be a fertilizer, but it answers other purposes. You will not tread the ground down to a hard surface while picking the flowers, and you can soak the ground without baking it, and the two great essentials in making sweet peas pay is to keep them well watered and keep the flowers constantly picked.

With all annual plants, including our great cereals, flowering and fruit bearing is the final function of existence, and when that is accomplished they perform the final duty of life, which is death.

MR. SIM'S CANDYTUFT.

Referring to Mr. Scott's note on candytuft in the April 12 issue, I think candytuft might be profitably grown in winter in a house by itself, but not in a house where other plants are grown, as there is no other plant, to my knowledge, that requires the same treatment.

To have candytuft in bloom through the winter, I think that the middle of August would be the best time to sow the seed. I have always found that the seed does best in a solid bed.

I have had the best results by transplanting the seedlings while very small, with just the seed leaves, into a solid bed, and then potting into 2½-inch pots before they get much headway, as they are hard to transplant unless done at just the right time, and they should be grown as cool as possible at that stage. When well filled with roots they can be planted out on a bench or solid bed. I would prefer a bench for winter. They stand quite a warm temperature while making growth. When they show color they can be grown quite cool again. They require a very light house. They will not do anything in a poor house.

As far as variety goes, I have been unable to see any difference between The Empress, Giant White, hyacinth-flowered, etc., such as are offered by seedsmen. Buy any of these varieties and grow them separate, and you will not find any difference between them.

To get a good forcing candytuft requires very careful selection, and this does not pay at the price the seed is offered. You will find that some will bloom quite early and others will be four months later in blooming; but with carefully selected seed, almost every plant will come along about the same time.

I have always grown a lot of candytuft for Memorial day trade, and have never found any trouble in selling an enormous lot of it. I have never any trouble in timing the whole crop to a day.

The variety which I have grown I obtained originally in some seed of Empress from a Boston seedsman. I have not tried to sell the seed because a dollar's worth to another grower in any other vicinity would make it not worth while to grow. In other words, I can sell all I can grow at a fair price. With competition it would have to be cut about half, making it unprofitable all around. At the time I sent Mr. Scott the plants he mentions in the issue of April 12, I had in mind the idea of sending it out, and wanted the expression of some growers as to its merits.

FORCING ETHERIZED PLANTS.

During the past winter C. I. Lewis and J. E. Hewett have been carrying on experiments in the horticultural department at Cornell University to determine the efficiency of ether as a forcing agent. Ether was tested by the Connecticut Experiment Station in the forcing of rhubarb last year, and gave such promising results that it was decided to test many other varieties of plants.

Bulbs, shrubs and herbaceous plants were tested. Some of the points to be determined by these experiments were: How long to expose the plants to the action of the ether to obtain the best results; what plants can be successfully etherized, and the use of ether in the commercial forcing of the rhubarb and asparagus for the early markets.

The plants for forcing should be obtained in the fall, and should be placed in a room where the temperature is as near freezing as possible. Just before it is time to etherize them, they should be taken out and placed in a warm room for a few hours, in order that they may be as dry as possible.

Such bulbs as narcissi, tulips, hyacinths, Easter lilies and others, which are in demand for cut flowers in the winter, were tested. It was found that the Easter lily bloomed three weeks before the plants which were not treated with ether. The daffodils were in full bloom before the unetherized plants showed the buds.

Of the shrubs, the lilac gave the most favorable results, as the plants exposed to the ether bloomed a week or ten days before those which were untreated. The Japanese quince and the deutzias did not give very marked results in favor of the etherization, showing that there is a difference in the value of the treatment according to the kind of plant, some plants responding much more readily to the treatment than others.

The Golden Glow and the aquilegias were scarcely affected by the treatment, but the spiræas showed a remarkable effect. Some of the spiræas exposed to the ether came into bloom three weeks before the ones forced by ordinary method.

It will be of especial interest to the market gardeners to know that etherized

An Unparalleled Situation.

Such a condition of affairs has probably never before been experienced in the utter demoralization of trade in such a large area of country, and signs for any improvement for a long time to come are at present not apparent. The public has absolutely no use for flowers. Everyone is interested in getting a place to sleep, and it will be a long time before anything in the way of luxuries is aimed at.

All the undertakers in San Francisco are burned out, all the public halls, most of the churches. Over 250,000 people have left the town and are located in various parts of the state, so that the chances for funeral work are very slim. Most of the hearses and carriages have gone to the flames. Funerals are conducted very quietly. There are but few caskets in town, and the friends are so widely distributed when a death occurs that there is no chance for the florist.

Quantities and Prices.

A low estimate of the carnations that should be marketed at this time is about a million blooms per week, and about half a million rose buds in the same length of time. It is safe to say that not over five per cent are shipped to outside points, and when this was done direct from the wholesalers there has been little change. The retail dealers have in many instances turned their out-of-town regular customers over to the growers, and in this way the stores in other localities will not be inconvenienced.

Quotations of various flowers are not worth making. The finest carnations ever seen can be had at 50 cents per hundred, and American Beauties with 4-foot stems at a few cents per dozen. Other stock is sold by the basket, and it is only a waste of time to pretend to quote on it.

How long this condition of affairs will last, or how it will turn in a few weeks, I am at a loss to conjecture. Some of the growers are trying to get a market for their goods in other towns, but large cities are scarce on this coast, and the chances are not very bright to use much stock in that way.

However, something brighter may loom up in the future to relieve the conditions somewhat, but at the present writing they are at the lowest point ever reached in this locality. G.

FIRST AND BEST.

The REVIEW, containing the very full and splendid description of the losses of the brother florists in that sadly stricken California city of San Francisco, as well as other points, came to hand in due season Thursday afternoon. I glory in the enterprise that has brought about such things in so short a time.

The catastrophe makes our trouble in 1871, in the burning of Chicago, look small, although as I read from day to day the accounts in the daily papers, many of the experiences there given were similar to those with us. The feeding of the hungry was one of those things that I, as a public officer at the time, had a hand in, in the early stages of the work.

I was also, you may be sure, glad to find that our old friend, Mr. Grant, although shaken, is all right. What an experience in one's lifetime.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Popular Nephrolepis.

Everyone must have noticed the wonderful popularity of the nephrolepis fern the past winter. Most of the large growers were sold out long before Easter. The grower of bedding plants will have his benches too full for another three or four weeks, but as soon as any can be spared, four or five inches of good, fresh loam should be put on them and the young ferns planted out one foot apart. I believe four inches of soil is quite as good as six inches, and that saves a lot of labor and material. A third of well-decayed animal manure should be mixed with the soil.

There are now so many varieties of nephrolepis that it is venturesome to say much about the merits of any particular variety.

Bostoniensis was a great improvement on old N. exaltata, and a well grown Boston will fill the bill with most people.

Scottii is a most valuable variety and makes such a compact plant, even when quite small, that it sells the best of all, and you should have a large proportion of your stock of Scottii.

The still more beautiful forms, Pier-soni and Elegantissima, and still later

Barrowsii, and now Whitmani, are beautiful as specimen plants, and as they are only sports or variations of the Boston form there is no reason why they should be more difficult to grow or less useful plants for the dwelling house.

The Bagpipe Fern.

Whitmani is the latest and seems to us the most beautiful of these many different forms, yet I would say let the great majority of your stock be the old Bostoniensis and Scottii. FORCING ETHERIZED PLANTS.

During the past winter C. I. Lewis and J. E. Hewett have been carrying on experiments in the horticultural department at Cornell University to determine the efficiency of ether as a forcing agent. Ether was tested by the Connecticut Experiment Station in the forcing of rhubarb last year, and gave such promising results that it was decided to test many other varieties of plants.

Bulbs, shrubs and herbaceous plants were tested. Some of the points to be determined by these experiments were: How long to expose the plants to the action of the ether to obtain the best results; what plants can be successfully etherized, and the use of ether in the commercial forcing of the rhubarb and asparagus for the early markets.

The plants for forcing should be obtained in the fall, and should be placed in a room where the temperature is as near freezing as possible. Just before it is time to etherize them, they should be taken out and placed in a warm room for a few hours, in order that they may be as dry as possible.

Such bulbs as narcissi, tulips, hyacinths, Easter lilies and others, which are in demand for cut flowers in the winter, were tested. It was found that the Easter lily bloomed three weeks before the plants which were not treated with ether. The daffodils were in full bloom before the unetherized plants showed the buds.

Of the shrubs, the lilac gave the most favorable results, as the plants exposed to the ether bloomed a week or ten days before those which were untreated. The Japanese quince and the deutzias did not give very marked results in favor of the etherization, showing that there is a difference in the value of the treatment according to the kind of plant, some plants responding much more readily to the treatment than others.

The Golden Glow and the aquilegias were scarcely affected by the treatment, but the spiraeas showed a remarkable effect. Some of the spiraeas exposed to the ether came into bloom three weeks before the ones forced by ordinary method.

It will be of especial interest to the market gardeners to know that etherized

rhubarb was ready to cut five days earlier than the other, and what is still more important, the etherized product gave a much larger proportion of salable stalks, making the treatment from a commercial viewpoint doubly valuable.

It is not difficult to treat the plants with the ether, the chief care being to construct a suitable box. The one used at Cornell was an air-tight, galvanized iron box three feet three inches by two feet six inches. The box was fitted with two trays, which made it possible to have three tiers of plants undergoing the exposure at once.

The trays should be made of heavy wire mesh, in order that the ether may penetrate equally to every part of the plant at once. In exposing such plants as the Golden Glow and aquilegia to the ether as much dirt as possible should be shaken from the roots, in order to give the ether free access to the roots.

The cover fits down over the box for about five inches, resting on a flange of thick felt, which renders it air-tight. When all the provisions are complete, the ether is poured on a small ball of felt, which is dropped in the box; the cover is clamped down and the plants left from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

When the plants are taken from the box they should be thoroughly aired before they are placed in the forcing house.

The subject of the etherization of plants is only just begun, as these are almost the first experiments that have been made in this country. It promises, however to open an entirely new field in the realm of horticulture, and especially in the florists' and the market gardeners' line.

The specimens grow with increased rapidity, and the flowers are in many cases more perfect and attain a fuller maturity than those grown by the ordinary method. At the same time the plant has the other and most valuable advantage to the man who is growing for commercial purposes, that he is enabled to be from one to three weeks ahead of the season.

several days without rain without injury, but if you have the water service close it will pay you to run a pipe out to the field and water them a few times until they get a good hold.

Every evening before quitting time have one of the men go through the day's planting with the hand cultivator to loosen up the soil where it has been tramped down.

Don't dump out too many plants ahead of the planters, and when they are dumped out keep them out of the sun and draught until you are ready to plant them. It will surprise you how rapidly they will dry out when out of the pots. Be sure they are not dry when you dump them.

Be sure the plants are clear of insects, too, because if they are infested with spider or aphids when you plant them out the chances are you will have trouble before the summer is over, and these pests are harder to fight out in the field than in the house. If there is disease, pick off all the affected leaves as you dump them; they will stand more chance of getting rid of it then.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Planting in the Field.

After this job is once begun, it should be put through just as quickly as possible, and the work done properly. If you plant out only a few thousand and only one or two men work at it, it means merely to stick to it and work as rapidly as you can. But if you plant out an acre or more and several men work on the job, then you want to inaugurate some system under which each one will have his part to perform, and in the performing of which he can work as rapidly as he is capable of doing without interfering with any of the others. If your force is divided properly, none will have to wait for the others. One man should dump out as many plants as two can plant and these three, with a boy to drop the plants along the line and another boy to wheel the trays full of plants out to the field, ought to set out a good batch each day.

As I have said before, we have a one-horse hillside plow, and each day plow and harrow as much as we expect to plant that day, which gives us freshly turned soil to set the plants in. We get more and better work, and it is better for the plants. How close you plant will depend largely on how much ground you have and how you wish to cultivate them. Those who have large farms and set out many thousands of plants and intend to cultivate with horsepower, of course must set their rows two to three feet apart, but most growers plant closer than that and use hand cultivators, which we think is the most satisfactory.

There are several ways of planting, and each has its advocates. One way is to plant in rows sixteen inches apart and eight inches apart in the row. These can be cultivated only one way and will have to be hoed between the plants. The other way is to use a marker with teeth twelve inches apart. You plant in rows across the field lengthwise, but before you begin planting you draw this marker across the width of several rows so the plants will be set in straight rows across the field crosswise as well as lengthwise. The rows to be twelve inches apart, too. This method enables you to cultivate both ways and has some advantages in that respect. An acre of ground planted in this way will hold 43,081 plants.

When setting the plants use a trowel and be sure the soil is pulverized. Set each plant just deep enough so the ball is covered with soil, and after pressing well, cover again with loose soil to prevent the soil from baking and from drying out. Of course you use a line to plant by. If the plants are from pots and are planted properly, they will stand

CARNATION BEDS.

We are to grow carnations near London, for the Covent Garden market and for stock. We are to plant a house 300 feet long with the American varieties and want to know if they would do planted on raised drainage composed of climbers about a foot thick. This would come much cheaper to us than erecting benches.

ANXIOUS.

Some six years ago we made our first experiments with this kind of beds and we found them so satisfactory that we now grow all our carnations on beds constructed as I shall explain. In making our experiments we constructed one bed 5x175 in a house which had three raised benches. We planted this bed with the same varieties that were planted on the raised bench just across the walk. We did not keep count of the number of blooms cut, nor the grading, but the appearance of the plants all through the season was such as to leave no doubt as to which style would give us the best results. As fast as the raised benches needed replacing we took them out and put in these beds, which we now use exclusively. Many large growers have adopted them in the last few years and each season adds new converts to this style of bed.

It has been argued that these beds will not give as heavy cuts as the raised bench during winter, but we do not find it so. We find that, as with the raised bench, the midwinter cut depends largely on the way the plants get away after planting in the fall. After the plants become established their natural tendency is to shoot up and bloom and it will take no longer for them to throw the bud on these beds than on the bench. The old idea that the plants are benefited by having air under the roots is disproven, in my estimation. The harm done the plants during warm weather outweighs all the good that could possibly result from it. The only good feature you can find in the raised bench is in the fact that being shallow facilitates drying out during dark, damp weather. That is what primarily led up to the adoption of that kind of bench. Certainly it is a great improvement over the still older method of solid bed without drainage, for certain crops at least.

Right here let me remind you that I know of no class who are greater imitators than the growers of flowers and plants. You go to a successful grower's place and see a fine lot of stock and straightway you conclude that his method of culture is the only correct one, and when you get home you do your very best to imitate him and to duplicate his success. If he plants on solid beds you will tear out your benches and plant on solid beds. If his houses are built with the short span to the south, your next houses will be built the same way. If he taboos commercial fertilizers you will cut them out too.

A wise grower many years ago found that the frequent syringing that was necessary to keep his roses free from spider had a tendency to keep his roses too wet and he conceived the idea that a raised bench which would allow evaporation at top and bottom would facilitate drying out the soil. It worked wonders, as we all know, and so because it worked well on the roses, he adopted it altogether. Other growers seeing his success, of course followed suit. That was going from one extreme to the other, which is so often done in trying to improve upon methods of growing. While it did improve the roses most wonderfully, I do not know how much it may have helped to improve carnations. But as they syringed carnations more frequently those days than we do now, it may have helped them some also. However, in cases where little or no water reaches the soil except what is intended, there can be no benefit from this more rapid evaporation. Every plant of this character likes good drainage that will allow all excessive moisture to drain off and when you provide that, you have produced the ideal condition.

It is not necessary that the soil become dry and require water every so often, so long as it does not become excessively moist. When you water, you water that which needs it to keep the soil in such condition as you know is ideal, not because it is so many days or hours since you watered last. Whether a day or a week or two weeks pass between watering matters not, so long as there has been no excessive dryness. In fact you will find that the less frequently you find it necessary to water, the more evenly the soil will keep, and the better the plants will like it. During the past winter we have had a good example.

Last summer we built a new house over plants that were set right in the ground, which was laid out in beds five feet wide. These plants were not moved at all and without any extra drainage except a well drained sandy loam, they have bloomed freely all winter, and there was no let-up during the winter months. Our very finest blooms were cut from these plants. To facilitate the work, however, we will put in beds this summer, as we have in the other houses.

The cost of construction is very much lower on this style of beds than on the raised beds, which is still more noticeable when you consider the greater permanency of these beds. This, however, should hardly be taken into consideration. It is the style of bed that will produce the largest number and the highest grade of blooms that you want to put in. If we were not convinced that with these beds we secure at least as large cuts and at least as high a grade of blooms, we certainly would not have made the change. It would not take long to lose more than the difference in the cost of construction.

I do not know whether the differences in the climate in England will have any effect on these beds, but I hardly think it would. It is not many years since carnations were grown entirely in pots in England, and no doubt you will find the average grower over there prejudiced against this style of beds, just as they were here. In constructing these beds you can use your own judgment as to material, etc. If you are sure you will like them and want to build to last, then build your sides of concrete six inches wide at the base and two inches at the top. Make the side next to the walk straight up and down and let the inside of the wall flare. This will last a lifetime, but is not so satisfactory in some respects as the way we shall construct our beds this summer. We propose to use uprights made of 1-inch pipe, set four feet apart in concrete, and 1-inch pecky cypress boards for the sides. These uprights will last as long as the house, or longer, and the cypress will last many years, and there will be the advantage of being able to nail to the boards anything you find necessary in the way of supports, etc. Wood posts should not be used unless you use cedar or some equally lasting material. If you raise the sides to eighteen inches you will find that about right for working after planting. Leave four inches of space for soil above the cinders. I would also advise you to put the large clinkers at the bottom and cover with finer cinders or a layer of sand. You will see the wisdom in this when you change the soil. If the cinders are dry, be sure you wet them thoroughly before putting on the soil.

Finally, I would say that a 300-foot house is rather a large batch to experiment with, and I would be inclined to raise a part of the beds and see which turned out best. Then you would know positively what you were about in the future. It is always well to look before you leap.

rhubarb was ready to cut five days earlier than the other, and what is still more important, the etherized product gave a much larger proportion of salable stalks, making the treatment from a commercial viewpoint doubly valuable.

It is not difficult to treat the plants with the ether, the chief care being to construct a suitable box. The one used at Cornell was an air-tight, galvanized iron box three feet three inches by two feet six inches. The box was fitted with two trays, which made it possible to have three tiers of plants undergoing the exposure at once.

The trays should be made of heavy wire mesh, in order that the ether may penetrate equally to every part of the plant at once. In exposing such plants as the Golden Glow and aquilegia to the ether as much dirt as possible should be shaken from the roots, in order to give the ether free access to the roots.

The cover fits down over the box for about five inches, resting on a flange of thick felt, which renders it air-tight. When all the provisions are complete, the ether is poured on a small ball of felt, which is dropped in the box; the cover is clamped down and the plants left from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

When the plants are taken from the box they should be thoroughly aired before they are placed in the forcing house.

The subject of the etherization of plants is only just begun, as these are almost the first experiments that have been made in this country. It promises, however to open an entirely new field in the realm of horticulture, and especially in the florists' and the market gardeners' line.

The specimens grow with increased rapidity, and the flowers are in many cases more perfect and attain a fuller maturity than those grown by the ordinary method. At the same time the plant has the other and most valuable advantage to the man who is growing for commercial purposes, that he is enabled to be from one to three weeks ahead of the season.

several days without rain without injury, but if you have the water service close it will pay you to run a pipe out to the field and water them a few times until they get a good hold.

Every evening before quitting time have one of the men go through the day's planting with the hand cultivator to loosen up the soil where it has been tramped down.

Don't dump out too many plants ahead of the planters, and when they are dumped out keep them out of the sun and draught until you are ready to plant them. It will surprise you how rapidly they will dry out when out of the pots. Be sure they are not dry when you dump them.

Be sure the plants are clear of insects, too, because if they are infested with spider or aphid when you plant them out the chances are you will have trouble before the summer is over, and these pests are harder to fight out in the field than in the house. If there is disease, pick off all the affected leaves as you dump them; they will stand more chance of getting rid of it then.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Planting in the Field.

After this job is once begun, it should be put through just as quickly as possible, and the work done properly. If you plant out only a few thousand and only one or two men work at it, it means merely to stick to it and work as rapidly as you can. But if you plant out an acre or more and several men work on the job, then you want to inaugurate some system under which each one will have his part to perform, and in the performing of which he can work as rapidly as he is capable of doing without interfering with any of the others. If your force is divided properly, none will have to wait for the others. One man should dump out as many plants as two can plant and these three, with a boy to drop the plants along the line and another boy to wheel the trays full of plants out to the field, ought to set out a good batch each day.

As I have said before, we have a one-horse hillside plow, and each day plow and harrow as much as we expect to plant that day, which gives us freshly turned soil to set the plants in. We get more and better work, and it is better for the plants. How close you plant will depend largely on how much ground you have and how you wish to cultivate them. Those who have large farms and set out many thousands of plants and intend to cultivate with horsepower, of course must set their rows two to three feet apart, but most growers plant closer than that and use hand cultivators, which we think is the most satisfactory.

There are several ways of planting, and each has its advocates. One way is to plant in rows sixteen inches apart and eight inches apart in the row. These can be cultivated only one way and will have to be hoed between the plants. The other way is to use a marker with teeth twelve inches apart. You plant in rows across the field lengthwise, but before you begin planting you draw this marker across the width of several rows so the plants will be set in straight rows across the field crosswise as well as lengthwise. The rows to be twelve inches apart, too. This method enables you to cultivate both ways and has some advantages in that respect. An acre of ground planted in this way will hold 43,081 plants.

When setting the plants use a trowel and be sure the soil is pulverized. Set each plant just deep enough so the ball is covered with soil, and after pressing well, cover again with loose soil to prevent the soil from baking and from drying out. Of course you use a line to plant by. If the plants are from pots and are planted properly, they will stand

CARNATION BEDS.

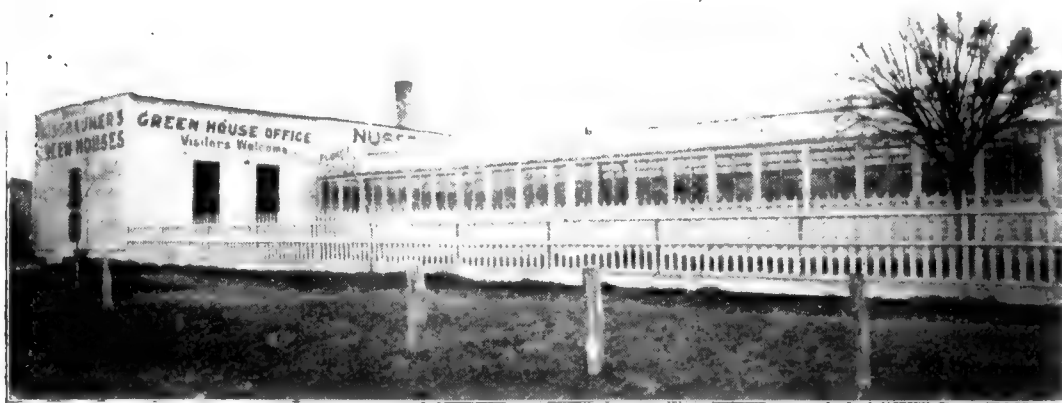

We are to grow carnations near London, for the Covent Garden market and for stock. We are to plant a house 300 feet long with the American varieties and want to know if they would do planted on raised drainage composed of climbers about a foot thick. This would come much cheaper to us than erecting benches.

ANXIOUS.

Some six years ago we made our first experiments with this kind of beds and we found them so satisfactory that we now grow all our carnations on beds constructed as I shall explain. In making our experiments we constructed one bed 5x175 in a house which had three raised benches. We planted this bed with the same varieties that were planted on the raised bench just across the walk. We did not keep count of the number of blooms cut, nor the grading, but the appearance of the plants all through the season was such as to leave no doubt as to which style would give us the best results. As fast as the raised benches needed replacing we took them out and Carnation House of J. J. Nussbaumer, San Angelo, Tex.

It has been argued that these beds will not give as heavy cuts as the raised bench during winter, but we do not find it so. We find that, as with the raised bench, the midwinter cut depends largely on the way the plants get away after planting in the fall. After the plants become established their natural tendency is to shoot up and bloom and it will take no longer for them to throw the bud on these beds than on the bench. The old idea that the plants are benefited by having air under the roots is disproven, in my estimation. The harm done the plants during warm weather outweighs all the good that could possibly result from it. The only good feature you can find in the raised bench is in the fact that being shallow facilitates drying out during dark, damp weather. That is what primarily led up to the adoption of that kind of bench. Certainly it is a great improvement over the still older method of solid bed without drainage, for certain crops at least.

Right here let me remind you that I know of no class who are greater imitators than the growers of flowers and plants. You go to a successful grower's place and see a fine lot of stock and straightway you conclude that his method of culture is the only correct one, and when you get home you do your very best to imitate him and to duplicate his success. If he plants on solid beds you will tear out your benches and plant on solid beds. If his houses are built with the short span to the south, your next houses will be built the same way. If he taboos commercial fertilizers you will cut them out too.

A wise grower many years ago found that the frequent syringing that was necessary to keep his roses free from spider had a tendency to keep his roses too wet and he conceived the idea that a raised bench which would allow evaporation at top and bottom would facilitate drying out the soil. It worked wonders, as we all know, and so because it worked well on the roses, he adopted it altogether. Other growers seeing his success, of course followed suit. That was going from one extreme to the other, which is so often done in trying to improve upon methods of growing. While it did improve the roses most wonderfully, I do not know how much it may have helped to improve carnations. But as they syringed carnations more frequently those days than we do now, it may have helped them some also. However, in cases where little or no water reaches the soil except what is intended, there can be no benefit from this more rapid evaporation. Every plant of this character likes good drainage that will allow all excessive moisture to drain off and when you provide that, you have produced the ideal condition.

It is not necessary that the soil become dry and require water every so often, so long as it does not become excessively moist. When you water, you water that which needs it to keep the soil in such condition as you know is ideal, not because it is so many days or hours since you watered last. Whether a day or a week or two weeks pass between watering matters not, so long as there has been no excessive dryness. In fact you will find that the less frequently you find it necessary to water, the more evenly the soil will keep, and the better the plants will like it. During the past winter we have had a good example.

Last summer we built a new house over plants that were set right in the ground, which was laid out in beds five feet wide. These plants were not moved at all and without any extra drainage except a well drained sandy loam, they have bloomed freely all winter, and there was no let-up during the winter months. Our very finest blooms were cut from these plants. To facilitate the work, however, we will put in beds this summer, as we have in the other houses.

The cost of construction is very much lower on this style of beds than on the raised beds, which is still more noticeable when you consider the greater permanency of these beds. This, however, should hardly be taken into consideration. It is the style of bed that will produce the largest number and the highest grade of blooms that you want to put in. If we were not convinced that with these beds we secure at least as large cuts and at least as high a grade of blooms, we certainly would not have made the change. It would not take long to lose more than the difference in the cost of construction.

I do not know whether the differences in the climate in England will have any effect on these beds, but I hardly think it would. It is not many years since carnations were grown entirely in pots in England, and no doubt you will find the average grower over there prejudiced against this style of beds, just as they were here. In constructing these beds you can use your own judgment as to material, etc. If you are sure you will like them and want to build to last, then build your sides of concrete six inches wide at the base and two inches at the top. Make the side next to the walk straight up and down and let the inside of the wall flare. This will last a lifetime, but is not so satisfactory in some respects as the way we shall construct our beds this summer. We propose to use uprights made of 1-inch pipe, set four feet apart in concrete, and 1-inch pecky cypress boards for the sides. These uprights will last as long as the house, or longer, and the cypress will last many years, and there will be the advantage of being able to nail to the boards anything you find necessary in the way of supports, etc. Wood posts should not be used unless you use cedar or some equally lasting material. west, especially in Oklahoma and Texas. These are the localities in which the most rapid business advance has been made in all lines in the past few years and the greenhouse men are just beginning to reap the rewards which always come as soon as a community has become settled down after the stress of pioneer work. When wealth comes the florist always gets his share.

Very much greenhouse building is going on in the southwest. Most of the establishments are small as yet, but sure to expand rapidly. One of the places which will serve as a model is that of J. J. Nussbaumer, at San Angelo, Tex. In this issue are reproductions of photographs showing three views of his houses. One picture shows a view from the street, another the interior and one of the houses devoted to carnations, with space under the gutter and at the ends occupied by baskets of Sprengeri and odd lots of miscellaneous stock. The third picture shows a few of the frames along the rear of the houses, which add not a little to the capacity of the establishment, for it is possible to bring along here much stock and have it ready to go on the benches in good shape when space is available after a busy season like Easter.

Mr. Nussbaumer finds it pays him well to keep his place in spick and span order. Neatness is his watchword and his place will compare favorably with any of its size in older communities. Mr. Nussbaumer is a native of Illinois and knew the business as followed north before he removed to Texas. He feels that development has only just begun in the business in his locality.

RICHMOND.

Those growers who found themselves with surpluses of young stock of Richmond rose report that since the recent cut in prices the sale of stock has become very brisk. Prices are now at about the bottom and likely to go up again very soon. Every rose grower who had not already tried Richmond are now buying and the moderate price will have served the purpose of giving a good rose a wider distribution than would have otherwise been possible for it, and a more general distribution than probably any other rose ever received in its second year.

Not all the growers who hold young stock of Richmond have been willing to cut the price in two. There is one lot in particular, of 20,000 plants, which is being held in anticipation that after the bargain sales are over there will be a steady demand at more profitable prices.

GASSER'S KAISERIN.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the establishment of the J. M. Gasser Co., of Cleveland, O. The greenhouses are located at Rocky River, and the one shown is a 300-foot house of Kaiserin. These were planted early last February, using dormant plants. They were started into growth the latter part of February and the entire house broke simultaneously. The photograph was taken April 17, at which time the plants were just beginning to give a crop which for quantity and quality will exceed anything in the previous experience of the Gasser establishment, where good crops are a rule and where quality is usually of the best. Not only are the buds large and perfect, but the foliage on the plants is a matter for congratulation with the grower.

The Gasser Co. is one of the most progressive firms in a state which is rapidly becoming one of the most important in our trade. Ohio shows a very great increase in the extent of greenhouse glass, in the money invested, in the business transacted, and in all matters relating to the expansion of our industry. The Gasser Co. is not in any particular behind those newer to the business. Their plant is modern in every respect and nothing is left undone which would in any way facilitate the economical production of the best grade of stock. At the store in Cleveland both retail and wholesale trade is done, the latter end of the business having recently increased very materially.

PRUNING RAMBLER ROSES.

No rival class of roses has achieved anything like the popularity of the climbing, hardy multifloras, commonly known as ramblers. Crimson Rambler is everywhere highly prized, and the beautiful new Philadelphia Rambler will soon bloom in thousands of homes throughout the land. Wherever seen it is admired for the brilliancy and lasting quality of its countless perfect blossoms. Coming ten days before Crimson Rambler, it does not compete with that treasure, but is appreciated for its own special merits. There are yellow, white and pink-flowered ramblers, but though useful where variety of effect is sought, they are scarcely all that can be desired in substance and finish of blossom.

ROSES

ANTS ON ROSES.

I would like to learn how to destroy black ants. They are making ravages in my carnation and rose beds in the greenhouse. I have a bed of American Beauty roses, but the ants seem to get the best of them; they stick on the rose buds and eat them all up. I looked all through the house, but could find no ants' nest. Please tell me some way to get rid of them. A. D.

Black ants, though frequently numerous in rose and carnation houses, seldom cause much damage. In this case they seem to have acquired some very bad habits and should be banished at once.

Their nests are usually in the crevices of the walls and are difficult to find and reach by any destructive agent.

Corrosive sublimate and sweet oil mixed and used as a paint along the edges of the sideboards, on the walls and anywhere the ants are in the habit of traveling will banish them. A liberal use of kerosene emulsion, gasoline or turpentine will also cause them to vacate. RIBES.

BEST FORCING ROSES.

What are the best six or eight roses when grafted for florists' forcing purposes? J. & P.

This inquiry is not sufficiently explicit, as it is not stated whether the roses are to be forced on the benches for cut flowers or in pots for spring sales. Assuming that forcing on benches is intended, then the commonly grown varieties are Bride, Bridesmaid, Liberty, Richmond, Chatenay, Golden Gate and American Beauty. To this list might be added Killarney, Wellesley and one or two others not so generally grown. Of these many growers advocate the use of grafted plants in the case of Bride,

EXCHANGE OF ROSE STOCK.

Referring to C. L. Washburn's proposal to exchange rose plants with growers in other parts of the country, with a view to studying the effect upon constitution and productiveness, A. Farenwald, Hillside, Pa., writes Mr. Washburn in part as follows:

"Your suggestion about changing plants with growers wide apart is good. Without doubt it will have a good influence on the vigor of our rose plants.

"Since I started for myself I have been in the habit of buying all my plants each year. That is for eight years now, mostly Beauties and Liberties, and my success with them I believe is partly due to this change.

"I do not myself propagate, at least not enough to replant all my benches. If I happen to have a bad corner on a bench somewhere, I have used it for such a purpose, but most of my stock is bought.

"Liberties in the past have done remarkably with me, so well that I have planted nearly all that sort. I have this year only one house of Beauties, but Richmond seems to have taken a strong hold on the buyer, and I am about to put up some glass to hold 10,000 plants.

"If I were growing Brides or kindred varieties, I would gladly exchange stock with you, but my Liberties and Beauties I will leave in this year, so I will have nothing but Richmond in young plants, and of them I have your stock and they are doing splendidly, beating all others I bought from around here, and they will without doubt continue fine."

House of Kaiserin Roses at the Establishment of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland.

The question of pruning these tall and rapid growing roses has been much debated, and many experiments have been tried. At last we have learned what to do—or rather what not to do—as the best treatment is to let them pretty much alone, says W. Van Fleet in the Rural New Yorker. Let them grow at will, only directing, and training the canes enough to secure reasonably secure attachments to the trellis or other support. They scarcely need pruning for several years after planting, except to cut out any weak or useless canes and nip off winter-killed wood after growth has started in spring. It is a great mistake to cut out the old canes yearly in the manner of blackberries and raspberries. Rose canes normally live several years and the ramblers often produce the finest clusters of bloom on growths two or three years old.

After the third year the vitality of the canes diminishes; they become twiggy and the bark turns light in color. They should then neatly be cut away at the base or just above a plump bud or promising new sprout. Interfering branches and twiggy growths as well as weak wood generally should be cleared away and the end of the younger canes slightly shortened, but as a rule the natural growth should be little disturbed. By trifling management new canes can be started each year after the third season to replace the failing ones.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOT SPRING FOR HEATER.

Could one use water at 150 to 160 degrees to heat a greenhouse? How much extra piping would it take? Would a windy climate be detrimental to stock grown in the house?

I know of a hot spring where the water is at the heat mentioned and can probably get the use of it. Coal is $7.50 per ton here in Oregon. There is another hot spring where the water is almost boiling. The wind there blows incessantly and blows almost hard enough to blow a greenhouse in. R. C. E.

Yes, water at 160 degrees can be successfully used to heat a greenhouse. Several years ago I was interested in a similar problem in South Dakota, where the warm flow from an artesian well was used for a similar purpose. In Alaska hot springs are taken advantage of for forcing vegetables. The only way in which I can answer the question in regard to the amount of piping necessary is to answer a definite question. That is, compute the piping necessary for a house of some particular size. One problem which you will have to consider is how to secure a circulation of the warm water through the houses. A plan for utilizing water of low heat is to cause it to flow slowly through a broad open trough constructed of boards or metal, the trough to be about as wide as the benches and to flow entirely around three sides of the house if possible. This scheme may be cheaper than piping. L. C. C.

VACUUM STEAM HEATING.

The business man today is confronted with problems of which the business man of fifty years ago knew practically nothing. Competition grows keener each day with the result that the successful man spends half of his time in studying the two great problems, how to decrease the cost of production and how to decrease the expense or waste necessary in the proper conduct of his business. One of the greatest sources of expense to the florist is the proposition of properly heating his greenhouses. His boiler, like the insatiable monster of old, stands with angry maw continually calling for more and more fuel, until it seems to the man who is paying the bill that practically all the profit he is supposed to make in his business is being turned over to the coal men. But progress is the watchword of the American people and while the florist is busily engaged in endeavoring to perfect the foliage and flowers of the plants under his care, manufacturers of heating appliances are also busy in the effort to so perfect methods of heating as to give the user the maximum result with the least expenditure for fuel.

While it is a fact that all users of heating apparatuses are interested in any appliance that will tend to eliminate the unnecessary waste of fuel, the florist is much more vitally interested in this direction, because the cost of fuel is such a very large item in his expense account. There is no question but what the strong trend in modern low pressure steam heating for many classes of buildings is toward the vacuum system. It has long been a recognized fact by heating engineers that the ideal system of low pressure steam heating is one in which the apparatus is so constructed that the same can be operated either under pressure or under vacuum at the will of the operator.

It is a commonly accepted fact that water boils and generates steam at 212 degrees, but it is not so generally known that the real boiling point of water when pressure is entirely removed from the same is 98 degrees Fahrenheit. The reason why water does not boil until it reaches a temperature of 212 degrees is because the air which surrounds the earth's surface exerts a pressure, at the sea level, of 14.7 pounds. If we remove this pressure by exhausting the air from a vessel containing water and then seal this vessel we can boil the water contained in the same at a temperature of 98 degrees, and this water will give off vapor or steam while boiling exactly the same as water does when boiling in an open vessel at a temperature of 212 degrees. As we increase the pressure we also raise the point at which water boils.

It is a well known fact that it is possible to practically exhaust the air from a vessel by filling that vessel with steam, then sealing the same and allowing the steam to condense. Steam occupies a space 1,700 times greater than the water from which it emanates; consequently when steam, filling a vessel, is condensed to water, as the water occupies a space 1,700 times less than the steam, the space occupied by the steam will be left a void or vacuum, provided the air is prevented from returning into this space. This phenomenon has long been a recognized fact by leading heating engineers, but the difficulty has been to find a practical device which would permit the air to be expelled from the system, automatically preventing the emission of steam when the apparatus was operated under pressure, and then automatically preventing the ingress of air to the apparatus when steam pressure was reduced below that of atmosphere.

The one great objection to the ordi-

short time became stone cold and the compartments in which they are placed become more or less chilly, according to the condition of the outside temperature.

By the use of the vacuum system this condition is entirely changed. If the job is made tight in other respects, the appliances will freely vent the coils of all air when pressure on the boiler registers one pound or over, automatically closing when steam reaches the valves, and when pressure goes off, by automatically preventing the ingress of air to the system, the coils in connection with the boiler keep warm for hours after pressure is off.

The economy resultant in the use of the vacuum system is because of the ability to control the temperature of the heating coils to just the temperature required to combat the outside temperature. The greater the difference between the temperature of the steam in the heating coils and the temperature of the air in the room being heated, the greater the condensation, and consequently the greater the demand for fuel to supply the called for steam to take the place of the condensed steam. If, for instance, the temperature of the steam in the heating coils in one case is 227 degrees (five pounds pressure) and the maintained temperature in the heated room is 70 degrees, it stands to reason that there will be a much greater room, 70 degrees. In one case there is a difference of 157 degrees between the two extremes, while in the other case there is a difference of 121 degrees.

To give an idea of the saving in fuel a test was made of the Norwall system of vacuum steam heating on a small plant using gas as fuel. The following table shows the consumption of gas per hour under pressure and vacuum, the temperature of the room in which radiators were placed being maintained at 70 degrees during the test.

In coils.	Gas used.	Vacuum.
212 degrees, 60	feet per hour.....	0 in.
201 degrees, 50	feet per hour.....	6 in.
190 degrees, 39	feet per hour.....	10 1/2 in.
180 degrees, 29 1/2	feet per hour.....	14 1/2 in.
172 degrees, 27 1/2	feet per hour.....	17 in.
157 degrees, 24	feet per hour.....	21 in.

The economy shown in the above table between the use of sixty feet of gas per hour and the use of twenty-four feet of gas per hour, the temperature of the room still being maintained at 70 degrees, is occasioned by the fact that when the consumption of sixty feet of gas per hour was necessary to maintain 70 degrees in the room, the outside temperature was sufficiently cold to demand the use of this amount of fuel. When twenty-four feet of gas per hour with 157 degrees of heat in the heating coils was sufficient to maintain 70 degrees in the room, the outside temperature had moderated to such a degree as to render the use of any greater amount of fuel an unnecessary waste. The economy, therefore, to be derived from the use of the vacuum system is the curtailment or absolute prevention of the waste of fuel resultant in overheating.

The ability to control temperatures within the apparatus to suit the variable conditions of outside temperature must of necessity mean economy in the operation of the plant, both from the standpoint of fuel and the standpoint of labor in the care of the apparatus.

THE RIBBON BUSINESS.

The florists of America use a million dollars' worth of ribbons every year. It is the estimate of Oscar Lion, head of Lion & Co., New York, who ought to know. Mr. Lion has been in the ribbon business for seventeen years. He started as a boy in a ribbon house and did errands for $2.50 a week. By 1899 he had progressed from alpha to omega in the ribbon business and in that year organized the firm of Lion & Wertheimer, which came to enjoy a large patronage from florists. Realizing the possibilities for an exclusive florists' ribbon house, a few months ago he organized the firm of Lion & Co., with headquarters on Spring street. The mills are at Paterson, N. J., equipped with the most modern facilities for making such ribbons as the florists' business requires. In making his estimate that a million dollars is not less than the value of the ribbons the florists use each year, Mr. Lion remarks that it is the purpose of his house to merit, and eventually secure, the major part of this business.

ELECTRIC LETTUCES.

facts and its fiction so that a reader may easily mistake one for the other, we find the following:

There is reason to expect that before long new and improved kinds of lettuce will be on the market. The Government Plant Bureau has been engaged recently in crossing some of the cultivated varieties—a thing hitherto supposed to be impossible—the most important object in view being to secure types that are specially adapted for growing under glass.

What is wanted is lettuce that will ripen quickly, head readily and be proof against diseases. Already a number of new types of superior excellence have been obtained and "field trials" have been made of some of them, the best plants being picked out for the purpose of propagation. Hitherto gardeners have been obliged to depend altogether upon such selection for the improvement of their lettuces, but the opportunity of breeding them will open up new possibilities.

It is an interesting and rather curious fact that lettuce is the only electric crop, so to speak, that is commercially successful. For a number of years past, lettuces have been grown by the help of electric light, which is made to supplement the sunshine of short winter days so effectively as to render possible the raising of three or four crops under glass during the cold season.

TOMATOES.

With the brighter days and more drying atmosphere a much more plentiful supply of water will be needed to keep the plants in a healthy, growing condition. Not only is more moisture at the roots needed, but more atmospheric moisture is also necessary. The amount of atmospheric moisture must be judiciously regulated. In this the weather conditions must be taken into consideration. On bright, warm days it would be hard to overcharge the atmosphere, as it would be necessary to have a good deal of air on the houses to keep the temperature sufficiently low, but the moisture should be so applied that it will be pretty well dried out before the time the house has to be shut down, so as not to have too humid an atmosphere over night. On dull, cloudy days little sprinkling of the passageways or benches will be needed. On such days there is usually sufficient humidity in the air so that it is unnecessary to create any artificially in the house.

On the other hand, an atmosphere overcharged with moisture is productive of fungous diseases, which often prove quite troublesome to the grower of tomatoes indoors. A disease known as spot is the most prevalent, more so in the late spring and early summer months than through the winter. This is undoubtedly a fungus, which breaks out in yellow spots, usually on the older leaves, and if not checked will soon spread and destroy the whole leaf. The regulation of atmospheric moisture, as I have stated above, is one of the best preventive measures, and a dusting with lime and sulphur mixed in about equal portions and applied when the foliage is dry is good for preventing the spread of the disease. We have tried Bordeaux mixture with fair success, but it leaves the plants unsightly and we have not found it any more efficacious in preventing the spread of the disease than the lime and sulphur.

With the Advertising Man

It is time to commence the spring bedding business. What are you doing to get your share?

Yes, I know you are growing the stock, but what about selling it?

Get busy with your handbills, sending them out every Friday.

Now, follow up this advertising by going to every house in town, or in your neighborhood if the town is too large a field. Work evenings if you have to, but get after the orders.

I want to impress on you the necessity of getting at it now—today—or the other fellow will get ahead of you.

Don't stop because someone turned you down, or because Mrs. Smith only wants six tomato plants. Take her order and its "dollars to doughnuts" that before you are ready to deliver this small order she will want something more.

And remember, you can never tell who is going to make a good customer, for people buy plants and flowers spasmodically and it pays to humor them.

While you are at it, see if you can't get three or four signboards about 6x8 feet, in prominent locations around town.

You can make them yourself, and have a sign painter do the painting.

I want to impress upon you the advisability of systematic advertising, no matter whether you spend much or little.

Form a plan and then stick to it.

this pressure by exhausting the air from a vessel containing water and then seal this vessel we can boil the water contained in the same at a temperature of 98 degrees, and this water will give off vapor or steam while boiling exactly the same as water does when boiling in an open vessel at a temperature of 212 degrees. As we increase the pressure we also raise the point at which water boils.

It is a well known fact that it is possible to practically exhaust the air from a vessel by filling that vessel with steam, then sealing the same and allowing the steam to condense. Steam occupies a space 1,700 times greater than the water from which it emanates; consequently when steam, filling a vessel, is condensed to water, as the water occupies a space 1,700 times less than the steam, the space occupied by the steam will be left a void or vacuum, provided the air is prevented from returning into this space. This phenomenon has long been a recognized fact by leading heating engineers, but the difficulty has been to find a practical device which would permit the air to be expelled from the system, automatically preventing the emission of steam when the apparatus was operated under pressure, and then automatically preventing the ingress of air to the apparatus when steam pressure was reduced below that of atmosphere.

The one great objection to the ordi-

short time became stone cold and the compartments in which they are placed become more or less chilly, according to the condition of the outside temperature.

By the use of the vacuum system this condition is entirely changed. If the job is made tight in other respects, the appliances will freely vent the coils of all air when pressure on the boiler registers one pound or over, automatically closing when steam reaches the valves, and when pressure goes off, by automatically preventing the ingress of air to the system, the coils in connection with the boiler keep warm for hours after pressure is off.

The economy resultant in the use of the vacuum system is because of the ability to control the temperature of the heating coils to just the temperature required to combat the outside temperature. The greater the difference between the temperature of the steam in the heating coils and the temperature of the air in the room being heated, the greater the condensation, and consequently the greater the demand for fuel to supply the called for steam to take the place of the condensed steam. If, for instance, the temperature of the steam in the heating coils in one case is 227 degrees (five pounds pressure) and the maintained temperature in the heated room is 70 degrees, it stands to reason that there will be a much greater room, 70 degrees. In one case there is a difference of 157 degrees between the two extremes, while in the other case there is a difference of 121 degrees.

To give an idea of the saving in fuel a test was made of the Norwall system of vacuum steam heating on a small plant using gas as fuel. The following table shows the consumption of gas per hour under pressure and vacuum, the temperature of the room in which radiators were placed being maintained at 70 degrees during the test.

In coils.	Gas used.	Vacuum.
212 degrees, 60	feet per hour.....	0 in.
201 degrees, 50	feet per hour.....	6 in.
190 degrees, 39	feet per hour.....	10 1/2 in.
180 degrees, 29 1/2	feet per hour.....	14 1/2 in.
172 degrees, 27 1/2	feet per hour.....	17 in.
157 degrees, 24	feet per hour.....	21 in.

The economy shown in the above table between the use of sixty feet of gas per hour and the use of twenty-four feet of gas per hour, the temperature of the room still being maintained at 70 degrees, is occasioned by the fact that when the consumption of sixty feet of gas per hour was necessary to maintain 70 degrees in the room, the outside temperature was sufficiently cold to demand the use of this amount of fuel. When twenty-four feet of gas per hour with 157 degrees of heat in the heating coils was sufficient to maintain 70 degrees in the room, the outside temperature had moderated to such a degree as to render the use of any greater amount of fuel an unnecessary waste. The economy, therefore, to be derived from the use of the vacuum system is the curtailment or absolute prevention of the waste of fuel resultant in overheating.

The ability to control temperatures within the apparatus to suit the variable conditions of outside temperature must of necessity mean economy in the operation of the plant, both from the standpoint of fuel and the standpoint of labor in the care of the apparatus.

THE RIBBON BUSINESS.

The florists of America use a million dollars' worth of ribbons every year. It is the estimate of Oscar Lion, head of Lion & Co., New York, who ought to know. Mr. Lion has been in the ribbon business for seventeen years. He started as a boy in a ribbon house and did errands for $2.50 a week. By 1899 he had progressed from alpha to omega in the ribbon business and in that year organized the firm of Lion & Wertheimer, which came to enjoy a large patronage from florists. Realizing the possibilities for an exclusive florists' ribbon house, a few months ago he organized the firm of Lion & Co., with headquarters on Spring street. The mills are at Paterson, N. J., equipped with the most modern facilities for making such ribbons as the florists' business requires. In making his estimate that a million dollars is not less than the value of the ribbons the florists use each year, Mr. Lion remarks that it is the purpose of his house to merit, and eventually secure, the major part of this business.

facts and its fiction so that a reader may easily mistake one for the other, we find the following:

There is reason to expect that before long new and improved kinds of lettuce will be on the market. The Government Plant Bureau has been engaged recently in crossing some of the cultivated varieties—a thing hitherto supposed to be impossible—the most important object in view being to secure types that are specially adapted for growing under glass.

What is wanted is lettuce that will ripen quickly, head readily and be proof against diseases. Already a number of new types of superior excellence have been obtained and "field trials" have been made of some of them, the best plants being picked out for the purpose of propagation. Hitherto gardeners have been obliged to depend altogether upon such selection for the improvement of their lettuces, but the opportunity of breeding them will open up new possibilities.

It is an interesting and rather curious fact that lettuce is the only electric crop, so to speak, that is commercially successful. For a number of years past, lettuces have been grown by the help of electric light, which is made to supplement the sunshine of short winter days so effectively as to render possible the raising of three or four crops under glass during the cold season.

CUT IT OUT.

Advertisers are urged to cut out of their advertisements in the REVIEW any items of stock on which they are running low. Remember that the REVIEW is printed every Wednesday. Write so that your letter will be received on Tuesday, directing that items nearly sold out be omitted. Don't wait until you are completely sold out; orders will keep coming. Don't neglect it. You will be at no greater trouble to change your advertisement in the REVIEW than you will be to send back money—besides, you know how it would disappoint you to order stock and a week or so later, instead of getting the goods, have the money returned. Then, if the same stock is listed in the advertisement in the next REVIEW, what would you think? Cut it out!

ZONAL GERANIUMS.

Will you kindly tell me what causes my zonal geraniums to turn red? Having had the time, we potted them into 2½-inch pots from sand, then into 3-inch. They are now in 3½-inch pots and seem to be at a standstill. The foliage is turning red instead of being a healthy green color. The soil is old sod with a little sand and one part dried cow manure to four parts of soil. We soak them when we water, but we first let them get a little dry. The plants are not crowded. Jean Viaud and S. A. Nutt seem mostly to be affected. They were shifted as needed. C. U.

Your treatment of the plants, also the soil could not be improved upon, unless something has happened that you do not state. We have often seen the leaves of some varieties of geraniums turn red and never thought it a sign of ill health. A sudden drop in temperature will produce it. Your treatment, as you state it, is about ideal, and if you keep them steadily at 45 to 50 degrees night temperature and with plenty of fresh air and sunlight they will be sure to grow out of it and assume their normal coloring. W. S.

WINDOW BOXES.

The National Council of Horticulture says the use of window boxes is not to be recommended extensively except in crowded down-town districts, apartment houses and hotels, where they are effective in relieving the monotony of otherwise bare windows and verandas. Where it is possible, however, to grow the hardy types of climbers in the ground they will be found far superior to boxes planted in the window or on the veranda.

A window box is usually eight inches to a foot in depth and the same in width, the length varying. It should never be less than six inches deep. It should be made of seven-eighths-inch lumber and should conform in shape to the window or veranda to which it is attached.

It is important to see that the box has good drainage. Holes of good size should be drilled in the bottom about eighteen inches apart and these covered with some loose material before putting in the soil. Use rather light soil, and preferably that which has been made open with plenty of cow manure. Heavy clay soil has a tendency to become hard and unfit for plants if allowed to become at all dry.

Two excellent fertilizers for window boxes are bone meal and bone shavings, especially the latter, which should be placed in the bottom of the box and thoroughly mixed with the soil. It will fit the plants later in the season when they most need it.

INFORMATION WANTED.

What is the best length, breadth and height for a proposed rose house to be about 28x250, with two feet of glass on both north and south walls? There is to be a lean-to on the north side ten feet wide. Heating is by a battery of steam boilers at the middle of the house on the north. How is it best to pipe the house when it will, on account of water, be impracticable to place the boiler below the return? The house to be built contemplates a corridor through the center for convenience of heating and ready access to this and similar but detached houses to be built in future.

Can concrete be used to advantage in the construction of walls, and how united with cast-iron gutters? How should the roof be supported and at what angle should the glass be pitched to get the best light at 9 a. m. winter and summer? Would there be enough water shed from such a house, if properly piped, to supply the necessities of plants grown therein?

The desire of the writer is to obtain such general or expert opinions as will enable him to build a first-class, up-to-date range of glass for rose and carnation culture. Also to get an intelligent idea as to arrangement of benches, division walls, heating and all details connected therewith. Is cypress construction or all iron construction, or the two modes combined best? Glass is 16x22. The house must be piped so as to produce a temperature of 65 degrees with 20 degrees below zero outside.

Mason City, Ia. A. L. WHEELER.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I enclose a leaf of one of my plants, with which I am having a good deal of trouble. The name of the variety is Bruanti. I would like to have you examine this geranium leaf, as it crumples in its growth. Let me know what is the cause and what the remedy. T. F.

We have received so many similar queries and been unable to give any specific advice on the subject that we were delighted to get what we think is a little light on the subject. We have been troubled, like other geranium growers, with occasional leaf disease and have had to discard some varieties on that account. We always believed that it was produced by improper conditions, especially too much water and insufficient air and sunlight. We have noticed it lately on a quantity of ivy-leaved varieties. They were for two months in a warm but light house and growing vigorously. The young man in charge moved them to a cooler house, on a shaded bench, and cut them back at least half their growth, so that evaporation from their foliage is much less than it was. A very intelligent German gardener was looking around with me yesterday, and noticing the trouble, remarked that when he saw a zonal geranium troubled with this unhealthy foliage he put it beneath the bench for two weeks and let it get dust dry, and on restoring it to the bench and giving it water the first leaf it made was healthy. Where you had a large quantity affected that would be a rather crude method, but it simply means that a thorough drying out is what is wanted. The geranium is a succulent plant, charged at all times with plenty of sap, and if oversupplied with water at the roots will suffer with functional disorder, and that, I believe, is the cause of the trouble. Sunlight, air and watering only when dry is the preventive. W. S.

The Great Central Market.

Business was decidedly quiet at the middle of last week, but on Friday there was a good clean-up. It was accomplished by moderate quotations to the buyers of large lots for special Saturday sales. Saturday saw the market with less stock and better prices than at any time in the past fortnight. On Monday the receipts were again considerably beyond the requirements. Tuesday was a wet day, and we hear no reports of anybody being injured in a rush to get stock. The accumulation promises again to be considerable until the week-end sales afford another chance to move the surplus.

It is notable that with the greatly increased cuts the quality of stock averages probably better than this market ever has known. Carnations have not increased in proportion to rose crops. Beauties are ahead of the demand and the best stock in good lots is bringing considerably reduced figures. Brides and Maids for the first time in months are in supply greater than the requirements, and the buyers make the price. It would be a critical purchaser who could not be pleased in any one of the wholesale houses. Fine crops of Liberty and Richmond are on and Chatenay is also superb. Kaiserin is beginning to be a factor.

Carnations are not so much in the way as last week. There are still more than are needed for the legitimate demand and prices are low. The clean-up on Friday showed many sales from $7.50 to $12.50 per thousand. There are many more violets than the market has use for; quality poor. On Saturday Hudson river stock was sold on the street at 10 cents per bunch of fifty. Sweet peas are fine and sell well. They have displaced violets in popular favor.

The greatest glut is in belated Easter lilies. These are sold with much difficulty and those houses handling them in quantity are never cleaned up. Callas are in but little better state. Bulbous stock is pretty well out of the way. Lilac is in large supply and sells well.

Smilax and asparagus are the only items short of the demand. Other greens are plentiful. It looks as though the new crop of ferns would find the wholesalers still carrying many cases of cold storage stock. The loss on much of the stock coming from storage is from one-third to three-fourths.

Various Notes.

Winandy Bros. are building seven houses at Rogers Park for Engel Bros., a new firm of growers. The houses are each 23x160, short span to the south.

Mike Rocklin, long with E. H. Hunt's, leaves Saturday night to go to Kalamazoo, where he is a partner in the retail store of Fisher & Rocklin.

Wietor Bros. report a big business in chrysanthemum cuttings.

John Mangel has been taking advantage of the interest the society editors show in the greenhouses of Miss Nina Howard by displaying a sign "Sweet Glencoe violets."

John Schoepfle has made preparations for a big spring season. He has a lot of stock, pansies, etc., in frames.

The John C. Moninger Co. reports that there is no let-up in the call for greenhouse material. For more than three months they have booked orders at the rate of one a day, and many of the orders are for whole ranges of glass, one of the first being for over 85,000 square feet. Although some of the orders are from the extreme east, by far the larger portion are in the southwest, where our trade is at present having its greatest development.

Fred Strail has closed up his place on Jackson boulevard and concentrated his business at 164 Adams.

Max Ringier, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has been quite ill the past week.

E. Bruecker has moved a block east on Monroe street to the stand occupied by Harry Rowe for the past couple of years. Mr. Rowe moved across the street a couple of months ago, to a store in the Palmer House, and finds that the change stimulated his trade not a little.

Moving day saw no changes among the wholesalers.

The Chicago Rose Co. is making a big outdoor display of trees, shrubs, rose plants, etc., and is doing a considerable retail business in this class of stock. Next year the retail seed and nursery departments will be considerably extended.

The George Wittbold Co. reports a very great increase in the amount of early outdoor work. They have a much larger stock of geraniums than last year.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is getting in stock literally by the car-load.

On April 27 there was a meeting of the officers and trustees of the Florists' Club at the office of the Benthley-Coatsworth Co., at which a call was formu-

A. I. Simmons has closed his branch store in Hyde Park.

A. L. Randall has been absent from business for a couple of days this week, suffering with a severe cold.

At Peter Reinberg's the benches and gutters are up and they are now setting the bars on eleven new rose houses.

Chas. Schneider, the Central Floral Co., is moving from Wabash avenue to 168 State street. This is directly across the street from the stand in Central Music hall so long occupied by this firm during the time Andrew Miller was identified with it.

George Reinberg has had some phenomenal crops of Beauties the past year or two, but is just now breaking all records with the size of his cut.

John Sterrett, recently with C. W. McKellar, is now salesman for the Chicago Rose Co.

Edgar Sanders is entertaining his daughter, Mrs. Edward Smith, who arrived from New York on Monday.

L. Baumann reports his safe arrival at Hamburg, Germany, April 29. He will spend several weeks buying supplies.

The wholesalers have been called upon for donations of flowers to several San Francisco benefits. For the lake front tent affair last Thursday Peter Reinberg put up forty fancy boxes and gave a large quantity of loose flowers. Bassett & Washburn also helped out and at the same time sent a couple of boxes of stock to a customer at St. Louis who was giving for the same purpose. This latter lot realized over $200, the flowers being sold by actresses at the entrance to the theater. No change was the rule, and Bassett & Washburn's best stock never brought better prices.

The carnation growers have begun field planting and several have already nearly completed the task.

Last Thursday Walter Hoyt, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth, lost his son, aged seventeen months.

Fritz Bahr and his foreman, Knox, at Highland Park, have adopted a family of five orphans. They were attracted to the children's plight by a story in the newspapers. They have raised over $600 and bought the family a little home at Winnetka. The father was formerly employed by the Albert Dickinson Co.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is still handling very good plants of Crimson Rambler roses.

L. Coatsworth spent the past week at New Castle. Good progress is being made on the new greenhouses.

The J. A. Budlong rose crops are not now at their heaviest, but the quality averages rather better than at any time all season, and they have been cutting good stock regularly.

Klehm's Nurseries is beginning to send a heavy crop of Liberties to Kennicott Bros. Co. This house had the first two dozen peonies April 30.

C. W. McKellar reports orchids coming in crop with everything else.

E. F. Winterston Co. reports satisfactory business the last week. They are still handling very large quantities of the Arendt Bulb Co.'s outdoor spring stock.

C. S. Ford was in town on Monday and Tuesday.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

After the storm of the first of the week, which has now become a habit of the weather, real spring conditions prevail. The trees are "opening their thousand leaves," the gardens are ablaze with magnolia and forsythia bloom, and all nature is alive again. The seedsmen and the nurserymen rejoice, and with good cause, for no such season in volume of business has ever been experienced. The plant market, and the auctions, too, are booming.

But with the wholesalers in the cut flower market this spring time is "the winter of their discontent." Values retrograde rapidly. Violets are out of the running. Their glory has departed. They have had a checkered year and a new basis of prices has been established, but, even so, the growers have made money, lots of it, and building goes on as enterprisingly as ever in the Rhinebeck region. What are a million violets lost by reason of rain at Easter, compared with the million dollars lost by the florists of San Francisco?

The tendency of everything last week was toward lower prices. Roses did not escape. Beauties fell to $15 per hundred for the best, and so on down to summer rates; Brides and Maids to $4, and all the specialties, Richmond, Killarney, Chatenay, Liberty, etc., joined the procession.

Lilies are abundant and lower. Bulbous stock is plentiful; southern is coming in a flood. Arbutus is now the popular street flower. Lilac—there is no limit to it; the south must be covered with it, judging by the shipments. Some lilac reaches New York that is "found" by the searchers in the country places. This stock is all velvet to the fortunate handler.

Business will doubtless progress on the present level until Decoration day. Plantsmen are preparing for this with greater variety and quantity than ever before. The Flatbush growers find this day the best of all the year. I hear Davy Mellis, with his big range, is ready for double the usual demand. His Crimson Ramblers at Easter were fine.

Various Notes.

When it is completed John Scott will have one of the finest plants on Long Island. The enterprising president will not rest until he has 100,000 square feet. Scottii is as much in demand as ever. There is never enough of it.

The club will meet Monday, May 14, and many matters of interest will be considered, a fine exhibit arranged and final reports given as to the outing.

Night and day work continues at Bodington's. Over 300,000 cannas have been sold by this house this season. Harry Bunyard has fully recovered from the severe cut that nearly put his hand out of commission.

Jos. Fenrich is now handling Anton Schultheis' fine valley and gardenias. Miss Levitt, of Fenrich's staff, has removed her residence to the seashore for the summer.

The W. F. McCord Co., of Tarrytown, reports a big business, especially in the nursery line. Mr. McCord closed a large contract on Saturday in Westchester county.

The sixth annual exhibition of the Specialty work by the private gardeners is well illustrated at Alfred Marshall's, in Mamaroneck, where Wm. Lynes is gardener. Here the U-bar greenhouses are used. Aristocrat tomato, forty-eight plants to a bench 5x21 and with the use of one and one-half bushels of chicken manure, yielded an average of fifty tomatoes to the plant, eight bushels altogether, realizing 20 cents a pound. Mr. Lynes was formerly with the Sloan estate, where the old style of greenhouses remain. He says the U-bar construction is far ahead. He has grown cucumbers here twenty-seven and one-half inches long, weighing four pounds. From 400 rose plants, Brides, Maids, Mrs. J. P. Morgan and Cloth of Gold, December 28 to April 14 he cut 10,000 blooms. The plants are still yielding bountifully.

Lord & Burnham Co., in speaking of the greenhouse gutter, says the florists for years have wanted a gutter with enlarged water area to take care of all drip and condensation, starting the water running quickly and casting the proper shade. W. A. Burnham has worked out the problem in the new V-shaped gutter, cast-iron, with sides partly rounded. Under the gutter at the central point is suspended a U-bar, which takes all drip and condensation. The curb of the gutter being of the same radius as the pitch of the roof bar, if the condensation follows the roof bar it follows the gutter to its lowest point and so reaches the drip gutter. Posts are placed every eight feet three and three-quarter inches. The pipes used for supports are 2-inch. The water and condensation from the gutter are let down inside alternate posts. This gutter shows at its best in ridge and furrow houses, where condensation has always been a serious question.

Try it a few Saturdays and see your eyes open.

On May 8 the Belmont Hotel opens. Already Mr. Leikens has it supplied with many immense bays, palms and ficus. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The showerless April has brought in quantities of cherry and other outdoor blossoms, much appreciated for decorative work, varying the effects made for so long with greenhouse-grown flowers. The warm weather which we have experienced has railroaded all the staple varieties of cut flowers to such an extent that it is impossible to move the surplus, especially of poorer grades, at any figures. Most of the good stock that reaches the market can be disposed of, but prices are low and variable. Beauties are in heavy supply and command fair prices. Sweet peas still sell well, especially the better grades. But violets are over, and nearly all the bulbous stock has disappeared, barring a few nice single daffodils. Carnations are in heavy supply.

The Key to Success.

The Floral Exchange has fully 175,000 square feet of glass at Edgely, Pa., three miles beyond Bristol on the New York branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. They are now erecting a new house 64x250 feet, to be planted with grafted Richmond. This is the third house of this style on the place, the first having been built five years ago. It was 54x350. The other, built in 1903, was 63x310. These houses are distinctly Edgely houses, as opposed to the ridge and furrow range style, or the sharp pitch house usually built for cut flowers. The idea is to economize building material, the management believing that gutters shade, while ridges and furrows waste glass. The pitch is unusually flat, the sides are high, and the ridge necessarily is of great height in houses of such breadth. I refrain from giving figures, wishing merely to convey a general idea of the style of house believed in at Edgely.

The roses in these houses are all planted out in the ground, which is generally plowed, sometimes dug, before the house is built. They are allowed to remain for a number of years. One bed of Brides, in particular, that are five years old, would compare favorably with almost any bed of one-year-old plants. The idea in growing is to keep the plants steadily at it all the year around, thinning out light wood and turning the heavier shoots, as occasion requires, but never drying off or resting the plants to any extent. The figures on the score card in the houses show an excellent cut, which, while smaller in winter than in the other months of the year, would certainly compare favorably with that of many of our growers.

There are 70,000 rose plants grown at Edgely, about 8,500 each of American Beauty and Queen of Edgely, 17,000 each Bride and Bridesmaid, 6,000 each Ivory and Golden Gate, 3,000 Chateaufort, and there will be 11,000 Richmonds. Most of them are now in pots, ready for planting. Besides these there are a few Killarney and Sweetheart, a tiny rose brought from California by the president of the company. The cut of this vast place is distributed by two commission houses each in Philadelphia

Here is a dollar for another year.

THE WEEKLY
FLORISTS' REVIEW

Every florist ought to read it, and doubtless most of them do, for every issue will put you in mind of something you ought to do.

and New York, and one each in Boston and Pittsburg, besides the orders sent direct by the retailers to the place.

The heading of this note was suggested by the thorough business-like system evidenced in every detail of the rose-growing at Edgely, a system, which, if practiced by more of our growers, would undoubtedly place their business on a more substantial footing. A few ideas of this system may be gleaned from the fact that with the exception of Beauty and Edgely, no roses are grown on own roots, simply because a careful comparison of the books proves that the grafted plants yield better returns. It was very difficult for the manager to realize this, as the own-root plants looked well and produced heavy canes in the spring and summer. It was further proved that the cost of replanting and cleaning the houses was so great that it was better to leave the house in for almost an indefinite period rather than incur this expense. Therefore benches had to go, though there are still some on the place, and ground beds are favored. It is further believed that the practice of disbudding may be easily overdone, and at Edgely they allow the plants to bloom pretty much when they want to, after they have attained a certain height, finding that in this way they get better returns. I do not mean that these instances would apply on other places, but simply call attention to the fact that at Edgely the management has tested every detail of the work and decided what is best there.

The place is heated by four large and one small marine boiler fed with buckwheat coal. It is enriched by a wonderful tank system of various fertilizers, fermented with steam and sent through the water pipes. A new cooling room, large and convenient, has been installed, which is invaluable. Adjoining it is a commodious packing room.

It is generally known that the Floral Exchange had about 50,000 square feet of glass prior to 1897, in which year it was incorporated. D. Fuerstenberg is president, Henry C. Geiger secretary and Harry Simpson manager. The place is full of interest and evidently one of the most prosperous near this city.

The Market.

Conditions show some improvement over a week ago. Receipts of several staples have materially decreased and this has relieved the congestion to some extent. Roses sell a little better all around, principally owing to reduced supply. There is no particular advance in price, however. Carnations are doing a little better and vary from $1.50 to $3 per hundred, with a few fancies at $4. These are still of very good quality, due to the absence of any very warm weather yet. Violets are getting scarce. Such as arrive are getting smaller. They average 50 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are not abundant and still sell at 75 cents per hundred.

The supply of indoor bulbous stock is very much reduced and the present week will see about an end of forced or retarded tulips and narcissi. Prices on these are a little stiffer. Quite a number of outdoor narcissi are now arriving and some tulips also. Callas and Easter lilies are not in much demand. Marguerites, if of good quality, sell well, and Spanish iris meets with a fair sale. There is a moderate call for asparagus and adiantum.

Club Banquet.

Ideal weather favored the banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Horticultural hall on April 25. Over 300 members, with many lady friends, were present. A reception was held by the officers of the club and their wives prior to the banquet. The tables were set in the main exhibition hall and were beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers, the gift of a number of the members as well as some of the retail florists. The stage of the lecture hall, where dancing later was enjoyed, was banked with choice flowering plants and palms and presented a very pleasing appearance.

The banquet menu was one of the best ever served at any florists' gathering in Boston and was a great credit to the club. One short address of welcome from President Wheeler was the only speech of the evening ere he introduced the entertainers, who included

F. B. Cannell, base soloist; the Brookline male quartet, a ladies' mandolin club, and Miss Elizabeth Pooler, who proved inimitable as a reader and was enthusiastically applauded. An immediate adjournment to the dancing hall was made at the close of the entertainment, and Parvers' orchestra provided splendid music for those who desired to trip the light fantastic. Everyone voted the evening a most delightful one, and many wishes were expressed that the club would soon arrange for another banquet.

Much of the success of the evening is due to President Wheeler, who put much hard work upon the arrangements at a very busy season. He had an excellent corps of willing assistants, to whom much praise also should be given. The reception committee consisted of F. E. Palmer, chairman; Messrs. Wilfred Wheeler, O. Lumsden, Peter Miller, H. E. Tyler, R. S. Edgar and Duncan Finlayson. The decorating committee were David Lumsden, chairman; William Sim and Duncan Finlayson. John W. Foote has almost recovered from his recent sickness. He has practically decided to locate at Reading, Mass.

The Public Gardens in Boston are now at their gayest with fine displays of tulips, hyacinths and narcissi.

ENCLOSED is another dollar for the REVIEW. We cannot afford to do without it.—CALLA CUT FLOWER Co., Calla, O.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

It is many months since prices were as low on roses, carnations, callas and other stock as they were the past week. The extremely warm weather toward the end of the week was hard on the growers. This rushed the crop at a rapid rate, and even if business had been good all the cut could not have been disposed of.

Bulbous stock is not nearly so plentiful. Valley is holding its own as to price and demand. Lilies are too many, especially callas. A lot of 400 was sold the past week at $16. There is no settled price on any of the stock in large lots.

Brides, Maids and Beauties are in great abundance at all the wholesale houses. All the choice stock is sold to the up-town florists at a fair price and the other grades are disposed of among the down-town florists, who at present are having a war of cheap prices. Lilac has been coming from the south, and sold well at first. Violets are over for this season.

The plantmen all report a busy week, and will start bedding this week, with plenty of orders ahead to keep them busy the whole month of May and part of June.

All the help in the retail seed houses is working overtime. The mail order demand is especially heavy.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Butterfield and Miss Butterfield, wife and daughter of S. S. Butterfield, of New York, passed through St. Louis on Thursday of last week on their way home.

Henry Ostertag spent Sunday in Chicago with friends. He will open his new down-town store at Sixth and Locust streets, in a few weeks. This is right around the corner from Siegle & Burk, in the Equitable building. He is figuring on the finest arranged place down town.

Miss Ruth Gould, of the Princess Beggar Co., at the Olympic, sold cut flowers in the theater entrance for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. The flowers were donated by C. Young & Sons Co. and the Riessen Floral Co. The proceeds netted over $200 in one afternoon.

Fred Foster, Ellison, Alex Siegle, St. Louis Palm Co. and Siegle & Burk had a flower war the past week, each trying to undersell the other. They extended the war to the wholesale houses each morning to see who could buy the cheapest in big lots.

The tulip beds at Shaw's Garden and at the different city parks were in full bloom the past week, and attracted great crowds.

April 25 George Ostertag was appointed superintendent of public parks by Park Commissioner Aull. Mr. Ostertag was formerly in the wholesale business here, being the partner of S. Monut, also in the retail business in 1889. He was landscape engineer at Golden Gate park, San Francisco, under Mayor Pond. The many friends of Mr. Ostertag congratulate the department on the appointment.

PRIMULA KEWENSIS.

This fine new primula is a decided acquisition for supplying decorative plants during winter and spring, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine. Seed of P. Kewensis is now offered, but as P. Kewensis is easily increased by division, it seems hardly necessary to raise it from seed. A stock of this primula may soon be worked up from a few plants. Each plant will have several growths or crowns, and these are separated with a sharp knife, and there are a few roots attached to each; these will, if placed in small pots, soon grow into nice plants. For two or three weeks after division they should be kept moderately close, with a little warmth and moisture. After making new roots, they may be removed to a cool frame, as they succeed best under cool treatment.

The bright yellow flowers of P. Kewensis make the plant extremely useful for winter and for association with Chinese primulas. The perfume of P. Kewensis reminds one of the cowslip. The flowers last well when cut, while their length of spike gives them an advantage for cutting over the varieties of P. Sinensis.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Large supplies of daffodils are coming in daily from Holland.

A very heavy trade has been done, probably heavier than ever before, in ivy trail for Easter decorations, the dark green selling the best.

This month has seen the arrival of a number of Dutch bulb representatives. The advance in price of all lines of forcing tulips is a surprise, and what is even more surprising is reports that many travelers are booking increased orders.

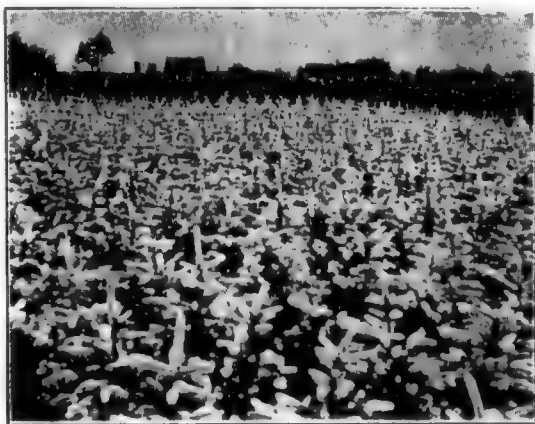

Speaking of valley, I had occasion recently to have very forcibly demonstrated to me the evils of using a sample grown on black, peaty soil. In looking through a grower's houses I was shown a batch of 190,000 that had been grown on black peat and were seventy-five per cent a dead failure. The numerous fibrous roots having rotted quite away before the bells opened, it was only the fact of having an exceptionally strong top root that carried them through any growth at all. Last season being wet in the growing districts, the sample in question carried too much moisture and was not sufficiently matured to be forced successfully. Had it been a dry year, it would probably have been as successful as a light sand grown sample. Many growers avoid black peat samples entirely, but in my experience it is fairly good when the season is a dry one; but generally speaking, growers will lose nothing by avoiding such samples absolutely.

Arum lilies for a long time have been out of favor on our markets, but lately a considerable improvement in this line has taken place, since the advent of the improved variety, the Godfrey. This is perhaps on account of the more refined form and even size of this sort in comparison to the old Æthiopica. Swanley, in Kent, is a great district for them, one firm having a number of houses devoted to their culture. J. B.

WHOLESALE at Minneapolis and St. Paul say that filling in orders have not yet begun to come in, which shows that the retail garden seed trade has hardly begun in the northwest.

MORTON, PA.—On the Smedley tract William Fowler, of Philadelphia, is erecting what is reported to be the largest rose house in Chester county.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906

THE seed imports at New York last week were: Clover, 302 bags, value, $7,382; miscellaneous, value, $3,826.

It is evident that the average congressman does not care much for the influence of the seedsmen in his home district.

CHICAGO.—A much needed rain has given the onion set fields a seasonable appearance and put at rest the minds of the growers for the time being.

LATEST reports from California state that the damage to crops from rains, fogs and other disturbing influences is greater than previous advices indicated.

THE trade in pickling cucumber seed is now on a boom. The pickle men report that their operations during the coming year will be fully up to averages.

SWEET corn for canners' needs seems to be in very good supply. The planting season for this article will be at its height within three weeks, but no shortage of seed is looked for.

THE Cox Seed Co. has established temporary headquarters at 108 Cole street, San Francisco, and resumed business. Wm. A. Cox, president, states that they have ample capital to protect all their contracts.

COUNTER trade is now at its height. Reports generally are to the effect that the year will average ahead of last year in cash receipts. Market garden trade is reported much in advance of last year at all the principal centers.

THE big general mail order houses show by their re-orders to wholesalers that their catalogue trade is holding up much better than is mail trade with the catalogue seed houses. In the course of a few seasons these general mail order houses are sure to have an important position in the seed trade.

THE pea and bean growers report that everything in the way of arrangements for the coming year's crop has been completed. The weather and soil conditions for pea planting have been excellent and good stands are expected in all western localities. Beans will not be planted for some time yet.

FREE SEEDS PERPETUATED.

Unless a miracle intervenes the 1907 congressional free distribution of 38,000,000 packets of common garden and flower seeds will be made according to precedent and the most promising prospect of stopping the practice will have come to naught.

On Tuesday, May 1, when the agricultural appropriation bill was up for consideration in the House, a motion to reinsert the provision for the free distribution of seeds, omitted in committee, was carried by a vote of 153 to 58, only about half the members being present. Later the seed advocates were lined up in an attempt to prevent the rising of the committee of the whole and were defeated 87 to 78.

The finish will come in the final passage of the bill, but with the provision for the seeds inserted by amendment there is hardly any chance but that the bill will pass and receive the approval of the Senate. Thus do our hopes go glimmering for, it is feared, not only another year but many years. It is too much to venture a suggestion that the President might veto the bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 2.—An amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill as reported by the committee to continue the distribution of seeds through congressmen was inserted by a vote of 153 to 58. The amendment as carried is practically the same as the present law under which the distribution is conducted. That is, it provides for the purchase, propagation, testing and distribution of valuable seeds, bulbs, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings and plants. The amount set aside for this work is $242,-

FRISCO SEEDSMEN'S LOSSES.

A telegram from C. C. Morse & Co., which was four days on the way, reached the REVIEW two days after last week's issue had gone to press. It was as follows:

All seed houses in San Francisco, including our own, destroyed by fire. We have temporarily opened at the old headquarters at Santa Clara. Will re-establish ourselves at San Francisco in due season. Damaged here not seriously; no loss of life in family or employees. Request customers to duplicate mail sent to San Francisco address.

This was followed by a letter from Lester L. Morse as follows:

"SANTA CLARA, April 24.—As a result of the earthquake on April 18 our property and houses in Santa Clara and San Jose were considerably damaged but not ruined, and while our San Francisco building withstood the earthquake without damage, it burned to the ground on Friday, April 20.

VETCH SEED DUTY FREE.

In the matter of a protest of the N. L. Willett Drug Co., of Augusta, Ga., against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs at Savannah, the United States General Appraisers on April 23 reversed their previous rulings and in the future the seed of vetch will be admitted free of duty.

The board reached the decision that the term "grass seeds" in paragraph 656, tariff act of 1897, is not used in its scientific botanical sense and restricted to plants of the order gramineae, or true grasses, but includes other herbage which serves for pasture or forage of cattle and which has come to be popularly or commercially known as grass.

Under this interpretation it follows that the seed of the vetch, one of the so-called "artificial grasses," which is a leguminous plant used extensively for pasture and forage purposes and classed with grasses and forage plants by the seed trade, is free of duty as "grass seed," under said paragraph 656, and is not dutiable as a seed not specially provided for, under paragraph 254.

The full text of the board's opinion was as follows:

The commodity subject of this protest is two varieties of vetch seed—Vicia villosa, otherwise known as the sand or winter vetch, and Vicia sativa, or common vetch. These were classified as seeds not specially provided for, under paragraph 254 of the tariff act of 1897, and assessed with duty at thirty per cent ad valorem. They are claimed to be free under paragraph 656 of the act, which exempts, among other things, "all flower and grass seeds" not specially provided for.

The single question to be determined is whether the seed of the vetch is grass seed within the meaning of paragraph 656. It is well understood that the botanical order gramineae, which comprises the true grasses, would not include this plant. It embraces such plants as timothy, red top, Johnson grass, corn, oats, barley, sugar cane, bamboo, etc., from which it will plainly appear that what are sometimes termed "artificial grasses," such as clover, alfalfa, sainfoin, spurry, and vetches, are not within the botanical classification of grasses. We think, however, that the law was framed with a view of placing on the free list such plants as are popularly known and commercially treated as grasses rather than those which are scientifically so known. It is very evident, as will hereafter appear, that the board has not been bound by the scientific botanical classification. The popular definition of the word "grass" would include such plants as vetches. The following is taken from the Standard Dictionary:

"Grass—In common usage, the green plants on which cattle and other beasts feed; any herbage that serves for pasture. This sense includes what are sometimes called the artificial grasses, food-plants for horses and cattle which are not real grasses, as clover in the United States and sainfoin in Europe, as well as some other plants, principally of the legume or bean family."

It would appear from the evidence in this case, and we think it is not disputed, that the vetch is a leguminous plant, allied to the clover and alfalfa, and of the same family as the pea and bean. The vetch is used for pasture and forage and for making hay. These, we think, are its only uses and are quite extensive in Georgia and some of the other southern states, and also in the northwestern part of the United States. It is especially adapted for growth upon lean or barren and light soils, and like the clover has the power of collecting nitrogen from the air and supplying it to the soil, thus strengthening the soil and making it more productive for all kinds of crops. The seed of this plant is not raised for commercial purposes in the United States. The evidence shows that many of the large dealers include vetch under the head of grasses in their catalogues, and of those dealers who do not so classify them, nearly all place them in the same classification with forage and pasture plants.

That the board has not so construed the provisions for grass seed in the tariff acts as to restrict them to seeds of plants botanically known as grasses is clear from its decisions. Thus sainfoin, which is in no way related to the true grasses, was held to be a grass in board decision in re Dingelstedt, G. A. 2566 (T. D. 14937). Spurry, which is a pink and not related to the true grasses, was held to be grass in the case of Henry Nungesser, G. A. 2597 (T. D. 15020). Clover, which, like the vetch, is a legume, was held to be grass in G. A. 2442 (T. D. 14720); also an appeal by Henry Nungesser. None of these plants is botanically grass, but being well-known forage plants, popularly and commercially classed as grasses, their seeds were very properly held to be grass seeds by the board. For the same reason we think that vetch seed should be classified as grass seed within the meaning of the statute.

We are not unmindful that the board has hitherto denied free entry to vetch seed, holding it to be dutiable as a seed not specially provided for under said paragraph 254 (In re. Nungesser, G. A. 4602—T. D. 21762), but we are satisfied that that finding was based upon a record which was neither full nor correct, and while it warranted the finding at that time and upon that record we think it should be overruled.

That the term "grass seeds" is used in paragraph 656 in its popular or commercial sense rather than in its scientific sense may be said to be settled by the decision of the circuit court of appeals in Nordlinger v. United States (127 Fed. Rep., 683; T. D. 24976), where canary seed, which is botanically a grass seed, but not so known either popularly or commercially, was held not to be grass seed within the meaning of said provision.

We find that vetch seed is grass seed, as the term is used in paragraph 656, and sustain the protest, reversing the collector's decision.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The seed trade is now very active and good business is being done by retailers. The wholesale firms are slacking off somewhat.

Clovers and grasses show very little increase in quotations owing to available quantities and prices throughout are practically unchanged. Owing probably to some heavy Dutch offers Scarlet Runner beans are offered very cheaply for really fine colored samples, cheaper than for some time past, as low as 9 shillings per bushel in some instances being accepted.

Many of the speeches were facetious, and others accused congress of listening to the seed dealers rather than to the people.

A GARDENER'S FRIEND.

In times past the common toad was looked upon with horror. It was said to be poisonous, its ugly, weird-looking appearance being considered sufficient proof of its deadly character; yet it is perfectly harmless. That the toad is beneficial to the gardener is admitted by everyone who has observed its habits. From some extensive observations it has been found that eleven per cent of the toad's food is composed of insects and spiders beneficial or indirectly helpful to man, and eighty per cent of insects and other animals directly injurious to cultivated crops or in other ways obnoxious to man. The toad feeds on worms, snails and wood-lice, common greenhouse pests, and the many-legged insects which injure crops of the greenhouse, covered frame and open garden. It feeds to some extent on grasshoppers, crickets, caterpillars, and destroys large numbers of ants. It consumes a considerable number of beetles of various kinds, especially click beetles, the adults of the common wireworm, the cucumber beetle and cockroaches.

As a rule, the toad is nocturnal in its habits, although it will sometimes venture out during the daytime, when tempted by an abundance of food in its immediate vicinity, or more commonly when the air is full of moisture. The toad does not take dead or motionless food. Only living and moving insects, etc., are devoured; so long as they remain motionless they are safe, but immediately they commence to travel they are captured. The toad's tongue is its only organ for seizing food; the tongue is covered with a glutinous substance which adheres firmly to the food seized. So rapid is the motion of its tongue that a careful watch is necessary if one would see the animal feed. The toad is a gross feeder, and disposes of enormous quantities of food. In twenty-four hours the amount consumed by the toad equals four times the stomach capacity—that is to say, in the time mentioned the stomach is filled and emptied four times, so rapidly does the process of digestion proceed. Toads, although they may be ugly externally; may be reckoned among the best friends that the gardener has.—Gardeners' Magazine.

THE BIGGEST CHIMNEY.

The largest chimney on any greenhouse plant in the United States is at the establishment of Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill. It was built last summer as a necessary complement of the big centralized boiler plant which was created from several scattered plants which had hitherto been used for heating the various sections of the big establishment. After a thorough investigation of the subject Bassett & Washburn accepted the view of the Kroeschell Bros. Co. that a steel stack was preferable to brick. The Kroeschell Bros. Co. built the high pressure steam boilers in the big boiler room and they say that under ordinary conditions there would be no advantage in having a steel stack, except possibly the question of expense, since a brick stack costs considerably more than a steel stack. But the practical advantage of a steel stack in the case of Bassett & Washburn is that it requires considerably less space in area and therefore does not throw as large a shadow on the greenhouses. That is the greatest argument in favor of the steel stack for greenhouse purposes.

The stack was made eight and one-half feet in diameter at the top and with a total height of 125 feet. The lower portion of the stack was made of $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch material and the upper of $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch steel, with the center forty feet of $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch plate. The base was flared to sixteen feet in diameter, both for stability and appearance. That is worth stopping a moment to think about—sixteen feet across is as wide as a good sized room.

In order to carry the stack and to give sufficient weight to prevent overturning, a concrete base was placed, an excavation being made for same, and about 280 tons of concrete was put in. At the top of this was a cast-iron rim made sectionally of 2-inch metal with a wide flange. The stack was riveted to this and from there eight 2-inch anchor bolts extended down through the concrete footing. There was a large clean-out door at the bottom and a flue opening above.

The stack was lined for forty feet in height with fire brick, the weight of which was carried on double angle irons.

A ladder made of $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch rounds with $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch flat iron sides was constructed on the outside of the stack clear to the top.

Approximately thirty tons of steel were used in the construction of this stack. The stack was painted two coats of carbon paint. It will require re-painting every third year.

PLANTS USE FREE NITROGEN.

For some years past Thomas Jamieson, the director of the Agricultural Research Association, has devoted a considerable share of his attention to the investigation of the utilization of free nitrogen by plants. Mr. Jamieson says: "It has hitherto been held that plants are unable to absorb and utilize the nitrogen of the air, and as the two families of plants that are most largely cultivated—the cereals and grasses—have been found in practice to give much larger crops by the aid of nitrogenous salts, an enormous amount of money has hitherto been spent on these artificial supplies of nitrogen. It is satisfactorily proved that plants in general do absorb and utilize nitrogen from air, and that the cereals and grasses also do so, but to a less extent than others, and it now becomes obvious that by introducing as largely as possible into practice such plants as absorb nitrogen largely, and incorporating them with the soil, it may be possible to avoid the purchase of nitrogenous salts, and yet have as large, and even larger, crops than before."—Gardeners' Magazine.

FUMIGATING.

Even with the improved fumigants there is a risk of damaging the tender spring foliage. I know that under certain conditions, the most tender plants may be rid of all ordinary insect pests without any risk; yet I have frequently heard complaints that mischief has been done. Temperature is one of the most important matters to study; shut a house up while the sun is on it and cause the plants to sweat, and damage is sure to follow fumigation; or, when done early in the morning, the same thing may occur if the house is left closed too long. In the days when tobacco was used it was a general practice to damp the floor and other spaces to make the smoke hang; but with the liquid vaporizers now in

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

THE Maine Nursery Co. has been organized at Bangor, with $25,000 authorized capital stock. Officers: President, Felker L. Temple, of Bucksport; treasurer, Frank H. Damon, of Hampden.

WM. A. PETERSON, Chicago, sails from New York May 10, on the Amerika, for a four months' tour of Europe. His first visits will be to the principal peony growers during the blooming season. It will be the first time since his connection with the business that he has been absent from his own peony field during the flowering period. Mrs. Peterson will accompany him on his European trip.

THE DALLAS MEETING.

E. Albertson, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, writes: "The indications are very good for our meeting at Dallas June 13 to 15, and if present prospects are realized we will have one of the largest meetings ever held. From almost every section reports are coming in of parties intending to go, many more than we have had at this time in the past. We think most agreeable and pleasant arrangements for the trip will be made, so the entire trip will be a kind of grand reunion. We hope to leave St. Louis by special train with from 100 to 200 of our members, same to be joined by Kansas City and other delegations by the next morning, so we will have a good time all the way through. The Rock Island-Frisco System makes a rate of one fare plus $2 for the round trip from St. Louis, going via one route and returning another."

Secretary Geo. C. Seager says the Oriental hotel will be headquarters. Rates will be $2.50 per day and up, American plan. Members are advised to engage rooms in advance.

The following essays are announced: "Specific Requirements of New Varieties in California Fruit Growing," by Prof. Wickson, Berkeley, California; "The Importance and Best Methods of the Bud and Scion Supply in Propagating," by C. C. Mayhew, Texas; "Credits," by Geo. H. Josselyn, New York. The meetings are to be held at the Commercial club.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

April 28 A. E. DeMange bought Sidney Tuttle's interest in the Phoenix Nursery Company. The capital stock of the company is $200,000 and Mr. Tuttle owned one-half. He retains a nominal interest and at the reorganization meeting April 28 was elected vice-president. The stockholders elected as directors, W. E. Rossney, A. E. DeMange and Ralph C. DeMange and the officers chosen are: A. E. DeMange, president; Sidney Tuttle, vice-president, and W. E. Rossney, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Tuttle has been associated with the nursery for twenty-four years. Mr. Rossney, who came to Bloomington from Rochester, has been identified with the business for twenty-five years.

The Phoenix Nursery for a half century has been one of the foremost institutions of Bloomington and Normal. It was founded in 1852 by F. K. Phoenix, who conducted it until 1878, when it was bought by the Bloomington Nursery Co., and in 1890 the Phoenix Nursery Co. was organized and acquired the property. It has been for many years one of the most important nurseries west of Rochester. The nursery has 600 acres of land, employing from 100 to 125 hands during the busy season.

The business office of the company will be moved down town to the Unity block, adjoining Mr. DeMange's law offices. The company will at once proceed to the building of new and enlarged greenhouses of the most modern type at the packing grounds at Normal and the present city greenhouses will be removed and the land platted into city lots.

LEADING NURSERYMEN GONE.

A. W. Sampson, Red Bluff, Cal.

A. W. Sampson, the well-known nurseryman and horticulturist, who has been horticultural commissioner for several years, died April 18 at the home of his son in Corning. He was a sufferer with cancer of the tongue, and spent several months in an Oakland sanitarium.

S. R. Hess, Ephrata, Pa.

Samuel R. Hess, retired nurseryman, of Ephrata, Lancaster county, Pa., died April 22, of heart trouble. The deceased was 75 years of age and was a member of the old Mennonite church for many years. He is survived by a wife and six children.

George H. Ellwanger.

George Herman Ellwanger died April 23 at his home at Rochester, N. Y. Paralysis of the heart was the immediate cause of death. Mr. Ellwanger was born in Rochester, July 10, 1848. He was a man of extensive and varied literary accomplishments and was secretary of the Ellwanger & Barry corporation, of which his father, George Ellwanger, is president.

In the opinion of George Ellwanger, the father, "breadth of culture, variety of knowledge and experience, and contact with the world, especially with persons of culture, and correct moral principles, have always been the surest foundation for usefulness and success in life."

These teachings Mr. Ellwanger inculcated in the minds of his children, in whose interest his fortune was freely used. George Herman was sent to Europe to complete his education. He was a student in Vervay, Switzerland, and Angers, France, remaining abroad about four years.

After returning to Rochester, Mr. Ellwanger became editor-in-chief of the Evening Express. In 1873 he married Harriet Stillson, and his wife survives him with three children, Mrs. Boyd Watson, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Mrs. Alexander Otis and Miss Julia Ellwanger, of Rochester.

Mr. Ellwanger was an authority on horticulture, on which he wrote in nearly all of a dozen volumes of which he was author. One of his latest works was the revision of "The Rose," written by his brother, which Mr. Ellwanger brought down to date in 1893. His first publication of more than ordinary value was "The Garden Story, or Pleasures and Trials of an Amateur Gardener," which was placed on sale in 1889.

Mr. Ellwanger's literary accomplishments won from the University of Rochester the master of arts degree. He was a member of the Pundit Club, the Genesee Valley Club and the Country Club of Rochester. Mr. Ellwanger was interested in numerous local business enterprises aside from his participation in the affairs of Ellwanger & Barry, and was one of three commissioners of Mount Hope cemetery.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The general business has been pretty fair the past week, quite a number of weddings helping out in this line and the splendid weather also helped transient trade. Stock of all kinds is plentiful except smilax, and for some reason this is always scarce at this season of the year. One can scarcely understand why all the smilax growers allow this to happen every year at the same time. Beauties seem plentiful and cheap. Violets are still with us and the quality is very fair for the season.

Various Notes.

H. P. Joslin, of Ben Avon, is sending the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. some fine Trumpet narcissi from the field. Mr. Joslin is a specialist on hardy flowers and cuts very good stock all through the summer.

Most of the growers in this section will be busy the coming week planting carnations in the field.

The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. is planting its large new house, which is just finished, with carnations and at the same time is getting out the field stock.

M. C. Dunlevy, of Carnegie, Pa., is doing quite a business in decorations. He took this branch up just last fall and it has proven quite a success. Formerly Mr. Dunlevy devoted his whole time to the growing of carnations, bulbs, large and small fruits.

The fine weather Sunday crowded the parks and the visitors were well repaid, as the bulbs are just coming into bloom. The past week saw good lilies quoted at $30 per 1000. Growers will not get rich at that price.

If anyone knows of a good trout stream it would be charity to send the address to Phil Langhans. The fever is on him and the only cure will be a couple of days with the rod and line.

L. A. Smith, of Wheeling W. Va., was a visitor the past week, also a purchaser of a nice line of palms, ferns, etc., to replenish his decoration stock.

Hoo-Hoo.

SHERMAN, TEX.—The Texas Nursery Co. has ordered the material for a large addition to its present range of glass.

ALVIN, TEX.—It is stated that the season is rather early and that the annual harvest of cape jasmine buds will begin by May 15. The prospects are for a large crop of excellent quality.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business continues fair, though prices have dropped considerably since Easter. In wedding and house decorations, spring blossoms are being used to some extent, which temporarily affects the cut flower market. Throughout the stores and markets quite a sprinkling of apple-blossoms, purple and white lilacs, anemones and other seasonable outdoor stock may be seen, all of which is bound to cut into the rose and carnation sales. If the present dry and warm weather continues it will soon work mischief to greenhouse roses, carnations and violets. The week was fruitful of wedding decorations and others are in sight.

Various Notes.

H. C. Summers has had on exhibition at Z. D. Blackstone's store a large yellow daisy which beats anything that has yet been seen here in the daisy line. Some of the flowers are four inches across, with stems in proportion. It is a plant that well deserves attention. Mr. Summers calls it a sport; if so, it has beaten the parent out of sight.

George H. Cooke had a fine church decoration on April 26, for the wedding of Miss Zaidee Cobb to Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., of New York. Lilies and spring blossoms were largely used.

George Watson and Fred. Michell, of Philadelphia, were in the city during the week, but there is no evidence at hand to show that they got any free seeds.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—A. W. Blair & Co. have discontinued business and removed from town.

Some People have taken our advice as published in these columns recently and are buying My Maryland for trial. We reiterate here—if it succeeds with you as it does with us, it will prove the best white carnation you ever grew. Despite the variety's apparent failure in several places, we strongly advise all growers to give it a trial. We have been frank about its faults as developed in other places. We doubt if these will develop in many places.

Jessica we believe, will succeed generally and will prove to be the best red and white variegated ever disseminated. Few varieties show as strong constitution as this one does and it is a wonderful producer. Extra fine stock of both varieties ready now. R. O., $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Pot plants, $3.00 per 100 extra.

Send for our catalog, now ready.

Robert Craig Still Ahead

TABLE OF RETURNS per square foot of bench surface for blooms sold from September 1 until April 1. In this computation Robert Craig has not been credited with several thousand blooms used for exhibition purposes:

Robert Craig, 55 8-10 cents per sq. ft. Mrs. Patten.... 33 9-10 cents per sq. ft.
Enchantress, 47 1-10 cents per sq. ft. Lady Bountiful, 28 1-2 cents per sq. ft.

Thus our claim that Robert Craig is a first-class commercial carnation is proved by the results obtained in actual practical commercial cultivation.

Send your orders promptly as the Cottage Gardens will cease making a specialty of growing rooted cuttings for sale after the present shipping season and will devote its entire plant exclusively to growing cut flowers for the New York market.

ROSEHILL, N. Y.

Rosehill is to have one of the largest business concerns in the county, according to papers of incorporation filed in the county clerk's office April 25. The papers had previously been filed with the secretary of state. The corporation is to be known as the F. B. Mills Co., with an authorized capital stock of $300,000, of which $100,000 is preferred and $200,000 common.

The company will buy and sell seeds, deal in real estate, live stock, poultry, bulbs, flowers and trees, deal with the cultivation of land and establish a printing office for the publication of catalogues.

The preferred stock, the papers state, will draw seven per cent a year, and dividends will be declared on July 15 of each year. The stock will be divided into 12,000 shares at $25 a share. The company will start on $1,000 and then increase.

The directors for the first year are: George C. Mills, Frank C. Beebe, Howard J. Hardacre, all of Rosehill; C. Albert Weeks, of Skaneateles, and Lynn D. Langworthy, of Syracuse.

DOVER, DEL.

J. J. von Reider was doing business on leased land, but has recently bought property at the corner of American avenue and Division street, to which he has removed his greenhouses and other buildings and has a well ordered place. Easter trade in cut flowers was good and exceeded the demand for plants in pots, although all the lily plants were sold.

William Shaffer has been succeeded by James Hughes at the railroad greenhouses.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade the past week has not been good. Stock is abundant and can be bought for almost any old price. Select roses are retailed for $1.50 per dozen and ordinary stock for $1 per dozen. Some fancy carnations were sold the past week for 50 cents per dozen, and the Greeks have been offering them for 35 cents per dozen. Saturday has developed into a sales day, particularly with the department store trade, and large lots of cheap stock are turned over on very small margins, much to the annoyance of the legitimate florists.

Minneapolis.

The Whitted Floral Co. will soon move into its new store on Fifth street. They will have an ideal place, a great improvement over the present quarters. Rent is about doubled, but is not to be considered if the best is their aim. They already have a large trade and will undoubtedly add greatly to it in the new location.

Rice Bros. say they have stock to burn, and judging from the manner in which it has been coming into this market, there is more truth than poetry in their statement. Their demands being largely from the smaller towns, they feel the slump in trade before we feel it in the cities.

Powers Mercantile Co. reports a good business, the demand being particularly heavy in the packet seed line, bulbs, etc.

The New York Floral Co. is selling large numbers of carnations this fine weather, of course at the close price of 35 cents per dozen. The Nicollet hotel trade helps this firm materially.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. say business has been quiet, their principal demand being for funeral work.

Holm & Olson have not started to build as yet, but expect to begin operations in a short time. They have the glass on hand.

Chas. F. Vogt says trade is only fair in cut flowers, but he is experiencing a heavy demand for shrubs of all kinds.

The Ramaley Floral Co. says that business is quiet and is making preparation to handle plants. FELIX.

DENISON, TEX.—Confederate Memorial day is April 26. Each year larger quantities of flowers are being used.

BOBBINK & ATKINS

BROWALLIA SPECIOSA MAJOR.

This browallia has decided attractions over its congeners, chiefly on account of its more robust habit and its larger blue flowers, which are produced in great profusion. When massed by themselves, and upon different planes to form a bank, the whole presenting one mass of violet-blue flowers amid a setting of deep green, shining foliage, the effect is excellent, indeed.

The cultural requirements are of the most simple character. Cuttings inserted in March form roots readily. The plants are also easily raised from seeds, a method of propagation I prefer, as the seedlings grow with greater freedom and are not so addicted to flower during their early period of growth as those raised from cuttings. It is essential, whichever method of propagation be followed, to pinch the tips of the young growths several times during the plant's development in order to promote a bushy, instead of a scandent, growth.

After hardening the plants, they should be finally potted, using ordinary but fairly rich soil. Copious syringings of clear water should be afforded in order to keep down red spider, to which pest the plants are very liable.

They are useful for decorative work and remain for a considerable time in good condition. When used for decorative purposes, and in circumstances which do not permit of their being changed for a lengthened period, they may become somewhat thin and leggy through loss of foliage. However, they soon recover if placed in a warm atmosphere, but the growths should be shortened a few inches, and by the following spring they will again form useful and serviceable plants.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

BAKER CITY, ORE.—R. C. Eisele, of the Center Street Greenhouses, says spring business has been excellent and Easter the "best ever."

DENISON, TEX.—E. Farley says that to date business has been about double in 1906 what it was in 1905. He has had exceptional success with roses under glass, cutting fine stock all winter, with no mildew and no greenfly. He also grows a general stock.

DENISON, TEX.

Denison was visited by a hailstorm one night last week which was almost unparalleled in severity and which did much damage within a small district. The Munson nurseries and greenhouses were probably the heaviest sufferers. Will B. Munson roughly estimated the total damage at between $2,000 and $3,000. Of the 5,000 panes of glass at the greenhouses only three or four were found unbroken. The heavy hail beat the glass on the stock and cut and bruised the plants so severely that many were ruined. The handsome palms at the nursery were almost ruined, the hail stones tearing the leaves. Grapevines and tender buds on trees were badly torn.

The hail completely shattered every pane of glass in the two greenhouses at E. Farley's, 330 West Munson street. The hail and the total loss of plants and houses is estimated to reach about $500.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Bright, warm weather is making things hum. We are in the rush of work incident to planting out. Everything is being planted, tender as well as hardy stock, and better prices are being realized than we looked for. It looks as if the demand will exceed the supply.

Carnations are in the field and are making fine growth. Roses in the field are now in bloom.

Enough funeral work is being done to take up all the stock and as yet there is no waste.

Carnations on the benches are going along lively, but I cannot say that I am in favor of the east and west house in this section. The sun, when it comes during the rainy season, is so hot that the bloom is cooked in this style of house, while in the north and south house the sun cannot have the same chance.

Reports from different places in this section are that the past Easter was the best ever experienced. A number who were not looking for much business, were caught without stock to sell. Learning by experience, they are placing larger orders with the seed and bulb houses for next fall and winter. NARCISSUS.

NOTTINGHAM, N. H.—L. E. Williams reports one of the most backward seasons in his recollection, there still being snow and ice in many places.

HARVEY, ILL.—The ladies who a year or two ago took hold of the Harvey Greenhouses have done so well that they are now adding about 3,500 feet of glass to the plant.

Kills green fly on roses and other flowers, insects on quinces and pears. Insects that fly like flea beetles and rose bugs are more difficult to contend against than are caterpillars or slugs. Look often and dust or sprinkle when necessary.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business the past week has been like that we expect to have in summer. A little funeral work helped to relieve the monotony, but under the poor demand prices of all varieties of flowers have reached rock bottom. On Saturday there was a pretty good demand in all lines and that helped to close out a large accumulation. The price obtained was very low, but the aggregate receipts for the day were very good.

The supply of both carnations and roses has increased greatly and, while the quality of carnations has been holding up very well, as much cannot be said of roses. Many of these show the effect of the hot sun and have no keeping quality. They pop right open and are scarcely worth ice-box room.

Bulbous stock is over, with the exception of lilies, of which there are plenty. Outdoor bulbous flowers are in full blast and lilac and snowballs are with us and hurt the sale of greenhouse flowers.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Saturday, May 12. Several lively discussions will be on and a good time is expected. The nomination of officers for the ensuing year will be in order. The annual meeting will be held in July.

The trustees of the Jabez Elliot flower market are figuring upon lighting the market by electricity. This would be a great improvement and, though the expense would be heavier, it looks as if the increase would be justified.

A fire in the building where Wm. Murphy and Weiland & Olinger have their wholesale establishments was the cause of considerable excitement, but the damage was light and the wholesale houses were not touched.

The Drake "Lexow" committee, who have been investigating the methods used in managing the affairs of our city, spent a few days last week in looking into the park department. Several of the local florists were called upon to testify, among them being E. G. Gillett, Julius Baer and Chas. Jones. The testimony tended to show that so far as the park department is concerned, there has been no graft.

C. E. Critchell has been on the sick list for several days, being confined to his bed, but is expected to be about in a day or two.

Visitors the past week were Will Clark, of Kalamazoo, and C. P. Deiterich, of Maysville.

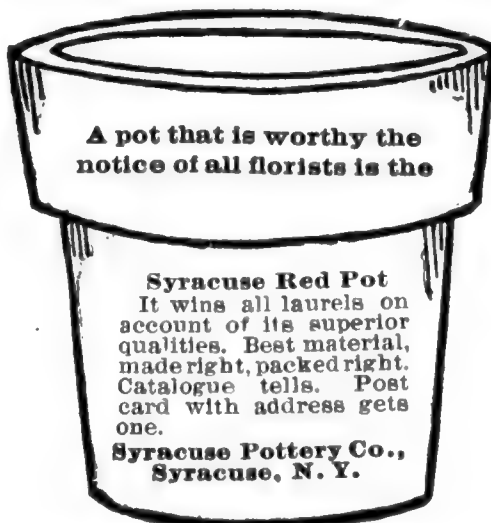

Weiland & Olinger have secured a location at 310 Sixth street, Louisville, Ky., and on Thursday, May 3, will open a wholesale house in that city. Wm. Gardener, who has been the manager of their Cincinnati house since its opening, will be in charge. The large crop of peonies which this firm is anticipating for this season necessitated obtaining larger facilities for disposing of them; also as they have recently added four large greenhouses to their plant they have need of added facilities for disposing of the increased output. C. J. OHMER.

SPIRAEA QUEEN WILHELMINA.

Last autumn some notes on spiræas appeared in these columns, in response to which Kuyk Bros., Hillegom, sent us half a dozen roots of their novelty, Queen Wilhelmina. We potted them up and grew them, and today (April 4) they are in full flower. The blooms are rather more dense than the common form, and of a nice clear color. The habit of the plant is admirable; one in a 6-inch pot carries over thirty good spikes, the other in a 5 1/2-inch, twenty-five. Spiræas run so near together that it is difficult to say that any seedling is absolutely distinct, but we have here a robust, free-flowering variety highly commendable for all practical purposes.—Horticultural Advertiser.

MIGNONETTE FOR MARKET.

The older varieties of mignonette, such as Parsons' White and Miles' Spiral, have quite disappeared as far as Covent Garden market is concerned. It is Machet, or selections from this variety, which most growers now favor, and those who have carefully selected their own stock for seeds have much improved the original form. Some which we now see in the market carry immense heads of bloom, but they do not run up so tall as the older varieties referred to, and I do not think the scent is so good. There is one advantage, however; that is, Machet is vigorous and easily grown compared with the others, but even with this I find the best growers have failures. Although such a common plant, there are few market things that have given growers more trouble, or of which so many failures could be recorded. It may sometimes be that a fungoid disease is the cause of loss, as it is with cinerarias, calceolarias, etc., but I think it is often attributable to the watering. I have seen many instances where over-watering has proved fatal, the fine thread-like roots are so easily damaged. I have found with spring-grown plants, that once let mignonette get too dry, and then water liberally, the roots will have suffered from drought, and then when water is given they cannot take it up; consequently the soil gets soured, and no new roots are made.—Horticultural Advertiser.

VINCENNES, IND.—A local newspaper contains the following advertisement: "From this time on C. A. Rieman, the florist, will give a 'scent' with every bloom and the 'earth' with every plant sold at his greenhouses. Plenty of fresh flowers of all kinds always on hand."

Superior Boilers Are Good Boilers

Read what our customers say about them:

SOUTH BEND, IND., April 4, 1904.

"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we have ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your Boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. Night after night the past severe winter weather gave your Boiler a good test. We are more than pleased with the Superior Boiler." Yours truly, Treanor & Rettle.

STREATOR, ILL.

Charles Ieuter and Vincent Kangley own thirty-five acres, situated along the river and a short distance south of the Vulcan works. They will erect six greenhouses, each 20x120 feet, with all modern equipment. Three boilers will be put in to supply steam in winter.

It is the intention to raise vegetables. Mushrooms will also be grown. They will be cared for in the greenhouses in winter, but in the summer they will be raised in tunnels, two of which Messrs. Ieuter and Kangley propose to dig in the river bank. Each of these tunnels will be thirty feet deep, ten feet wide and eight feet high. A number of fruit trees are to be set out, and a strawberry patch.

That the young men have determined to make it their permanent business is evident from the fact that each is making arrangements to have a residence of commodious size erected on the premises during the coming summer. The work of clearing the land has already begun.

NEW ORLEANS.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society had a pleasant trip last Sunday to partake of dinner at the residence of A. Alost. His amiable wife, assisted by her daughters and son, did all they could to make everybody at home. Mr. Alost is a great grower of roses, disposing of quantities of cut flowers. The variety of which he is cultivating the most is Zalia Pradel, and he has acres planted. His field, seen from a distance, could be taken for a cotton plantation, being a mass of white blossoms.

The city has been full of visitors this week. The U. C. V. reunion brought thousands of people to New Orleans, many taking an interest in plants and flowers and leaving a few orders.

AS A RULE

too little attention is paid to the quality of materials that go into your greenhouse and too much to the price. When a man talks price on Cypress materials, keep in mind that a good thing always costs, and it always costs not to have a good thing.

THE IN AND THE OUT

The kind of construction, the quality of materials—the arrangement or lay-out of the house, that's what goes into them. The plant result, the profit, that's what comes out of them; every unnecessary bit of light shut out, is so much money shut out. Our construction lets all possible light in, leaves no strengthening part out. A scientific machine built on scientific principles—The L. & B. Co.'s Greenhouses!

We Have Hundreds of Testimonials as strong as the following:

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 5, 1901.
WHITE ENAMEL REFRIGERATOR CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—The refrigerator you built for us recently is proving entirely satisfactory. It maintains a very uniform temperature of 42 degrees, and flowers keep in it well.

We find it well constructed and a highly attractive ornament to our store.

Yours very respectfully,
E. NAGEL & Co.

ST. PAUL, MINN., December 8, 1898.
WHITE ENAMEL REFRIGERATOR CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florist and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly,
L. L. MAY & Co.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

LILY OF THE VALLEY SHOWER.

The bunch of valley shown in the accompanying illustration is as nearly informal as a shower can be made. There is no attempt to preserve a strictly round bunch at the top, nor to hold the ribbon in any special position, other than to scatter the streamers by a few long sprays of Sprenger, fastened downward from the stems of the valley. This not only scatters the streamers but prevents that stringy look seen in some showers.

In the construction of the top bunch six or eight valley sprays are stemmed on half a matchstick and some stiff green tied in between the bunches to throw them out from one another.

This makes a larger bunch without using an immense number of flowers. It also reduces the size of the stem of the bouquet, the advantage of which is not difficult to see.

Gauze ribbon is used for the shower and embroidered chiffon for the sash.

Chiffon should never be tied as ribbon. Make loops and tie in place with baby ribbon. In tying a chiffon sash such as is used for this shower fasten one loop well up against the side of the bouquet, bring the other end around behind the bouquet and make and tie the one bow on the other side in the same way.

IDEAS VALUABLE.

Some time ago a window decoration in a large flower store in the city of Philadelphia was entitled "The Story of the Violet," taken from the opera, "Prince of Pilsen," playing in that city at that time. It consisted of an old-fashioned table, an old, worn violin and a mouldy sheet of music, showing the name of the selection, "The Story of the Violet." On the table were scattered small and large bunches of violets, also on the floor of the window and there were many other smaller details. But as an example, there were six customers of mine who visited Philadelphia and remarked to me the "slick" decorated window, as they called it.

VALUE OF NEATNESS.

When you meet people you instinctively size them up by the clothes they wear. Carelessly dressed people are sized up as careless in other things. It's the quiet, tasteful dresser that commands immediate respect and attention.

And the same thing applies to our business. Don't send out flowers done up in an old shoe box wrapped up in newspaper. You can't afford it. Good wrapping paper and good boxes are too cheap. You neither need nor should use "flashy" boxes. Of course, in very cold weather, when plants and flowers need extra protection, we must use several thicknesses of newspaper, but see that the outside is covered with wrapping paper. With flowers the same as with candy, the style of package is everything, for first impressions go a long way toward making satisfactory and profitable customers.

Study color combinations of paper and string; if you use a soft grey paper use purple string; for boxes containing violets use either a pure white paper with purple string, or purple paper with silver string, such as confectioners use. A safe rule to follow is to have your paper match your flowers as nearly as possible and let the string be an agreeable contrast.

If you deliver orders by wagon see that your wagon is clean, that the horse and harness are neat and a credit to your place. It is careful attention to little details like this that spells S-U-C-C-E-S-S in great big letters.

If you have greenhouses, go through them and see that the plants are arranged so that all of a variety are together and see that there is no rubbish under the benches. Not only is it bad business but it looks bad. I have noticed a number of places where the greenhouses were kept absolutely clean, but the outside. Oh, my! Oh, my! It struck me as being something "fierce" and the prospective customer would receive the same impression. So get your men together and have a "cleaning bee" if your place needs it, for once more I say, "first impressions go a long way."

DECORATION DAY.

The purists call it Memorial day, but practical people among the florists are content to call to mind that May 30, by whatever name, has been an increasingly active occasion in recent years and in 1905 and 1904 taxed the resources of the flower stores to a notable degree. Of course much depends on local conditions. If the lilacs and viburnums are in full bloom it eases the call on the florists; if garden flowers are not available it means that everyone will want flowers from the stores.

LILY OF THE VALLEY SHOWER.

The bunch of valley shown in the accompanying illustration is as nearly informal as a shower can be made. There is no attempt to preserve a strictly round bunch at the top, nor to hold the ribbon in any special position, other than to scatter the streamers by a few long sprays of Sprengeria, fastened downward from the stems of the valley. This not only scatters the streamers but prevents that stringy look seen in some showers.

In the construction of the top bunch six or eight valley sprays are stemmed on half a matchstick and some stiff green tied in between the bunches to throw them out from one another.

This makes a larger bunch without using an immense number of flowers. It also reduces the size of the stem of the bouquet, the advantage of which is not difficult to see.

Gauze ribbon is used for the shower and embroidered chiffon for the sash.

Chiffon should never be tied as ribbon. Make loops and tie in place with baby ribbon. In tying a chiffon sash such as is used for this shower fasten one loop well up against the side of the bouquet, bring the other end around behind the bouquet and make and tie the one bow on the other side in the same way.

The purists call it Memorial day, but practical people among the florists are content to call to mind that May 30, by whatever name, has been an increasingly active occasion in recent years and in 1905 and 1904 taxed the resources of the flower stores to a notable degree. Of course much depends on local conditions. If the lilacs and viburnums are in full bloom it eases the call on the florists; if garden flowers are not available it means that everyone will want flowers from the stores.

A Bridal Bouquet of Valley.

The great increase in the call for flowers at Decoration day has come from the broadening of the custom of decorating soldiers' graves so that now practically all the graves in the cemetery are decorated; this with the fact that the country is so prosperous that people everywhere have the half-dollar for the "bouquet" or the "five" for a wreath to take with them on this day when almost everyone who has friends there visits the silent city. When you stop to think that in a good many older communities there are more dead people in the cemeteries than there are live ones in the town it is easy to see that there is sure to be a pretty fair demand, even if outdoor flowers are fairly plentiful.

But Decoration day is no time for high prices. Don't try it. If you want the Decoration day business to keep on growing, see how much you can give for the money, not how much money you can get for the stock. People will not yet buy at high prices. The married millionaire monkeying with the real live actress is the one you ought to try your fancy figures on; the fellow going to his first wife's grave can't stand for it. Don't help to discourage him.

PLANTING YOUNG STOCK.

Many growers by this time are getting their plants into permanent quarters, either in the benches, boxes or pots. While bench plants are less trouble in handling, the fact remains that some wonderful flowers have been produced from pots, and more exhibitors every year seem to be going back to pot culture.

I am frequently asked if there are not some special soils or mixtures of soils that will insure special results. There are no such soils. The chrysanthemum will do better in a moderately light free loam than in heavy black soil, it is true, when grown under average conditions, but the intelligent cultivator who studies his soil and local conditions will have his measure of success anywhere.

The usual compost heap of sod, put up in the fall, with one-fourth of its bulk of cow manure, and chopped down in the spring, is just as good soil as anyone needs. I would much rather have my soil a little poor at planting time than too rich, because when the plants have to hunt around for food they make more roots and keep the soil in better condition mechanically, and the soil does not get sour from continued waterings.

In planting on the benches set your plants at least 8x10 inches, and, if you think you can afford the space, 10x12 is better. It looks wide just now, but one must think of the fall, when the plants have made six feet or more of growth and the space given will be little enough.

It is a simple matter to plant a house if one merely takes the first plants to hand and sticks them in. The proper way is to pick out the tall-growing kinds for the center, where they have the most head-room, and use the dwarf growers for the sides; and in the case of particularly tall ones, it is better to pinch the plants back, which will take off from one to two feet from their height at flowering time.

A list of tall kinds will run about as follows: Mrs. D. V. West, Chrysanthemiste Montigny, General Hutton, Viola, Dolly Glide, Carnot, W. A. Etherington, the Eatons, Lela Filkins, F. S. Vallis, Ben Wells and Mrs. Thirkell.

Medium heights will line up about as follows: W. Duckham, Nellie Pockett, Cheltoni, Guy Hamilton, Colonel Appleton, Merstham Red, Valerie Greenham, G. H. Silsbury, Brighthurst and Morton F. Plant.

The dwarf ones are: Merza, J. H. Doyle, Mrs. W. Duckham, Donald McLeod, Lady Hopetoun and F. A. Cobbold in the older kinds, with Beatrice May, Mrs. Partridge, Mary Ann Pockett, Old Gold, May Seddon and Mrs. Beckett in the novelties. These latter all give us an ideal habit and can all be flowered with four feet of head-room from the soil.

Kinds that I think should be cut down in May unless one has over six feet of head-room are General Hutton, Bessie Godfrey, Mrs. D. V. West and W. A. Etherington. Some other kinds that need to be cut down in May are the varieties that persist in producing buds instead of good, clean growth. W. R. Church is perhaps the worst offender in this respect, and I suggest with varieties of this type to keep the buds picked off closely, and eventually, when a sucker is produced, cut away the former plant and take up the sucker shoot for flowering. The old Vivian-Morel used to cause us much trouble with its habit of producing buds, but either Lady Hopetoun, Filkins or Cobbold are so great improvements on it that one never sees Morel any more.

Propagating from now on is not so easy as it was and calls for more care, as the sun is getting warm and unless the cuttings are kept sprayed they quickly wilt, and once they get hard it is difficult to root them. Spray the foliage several times a day on bright days and do not let a current of air from the ventilators or doors strike full on the cuttings. A shading is very necessary, and never forget that the chief cause of failure to root cuttings at this time of year is to allow them to get hard and dry.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

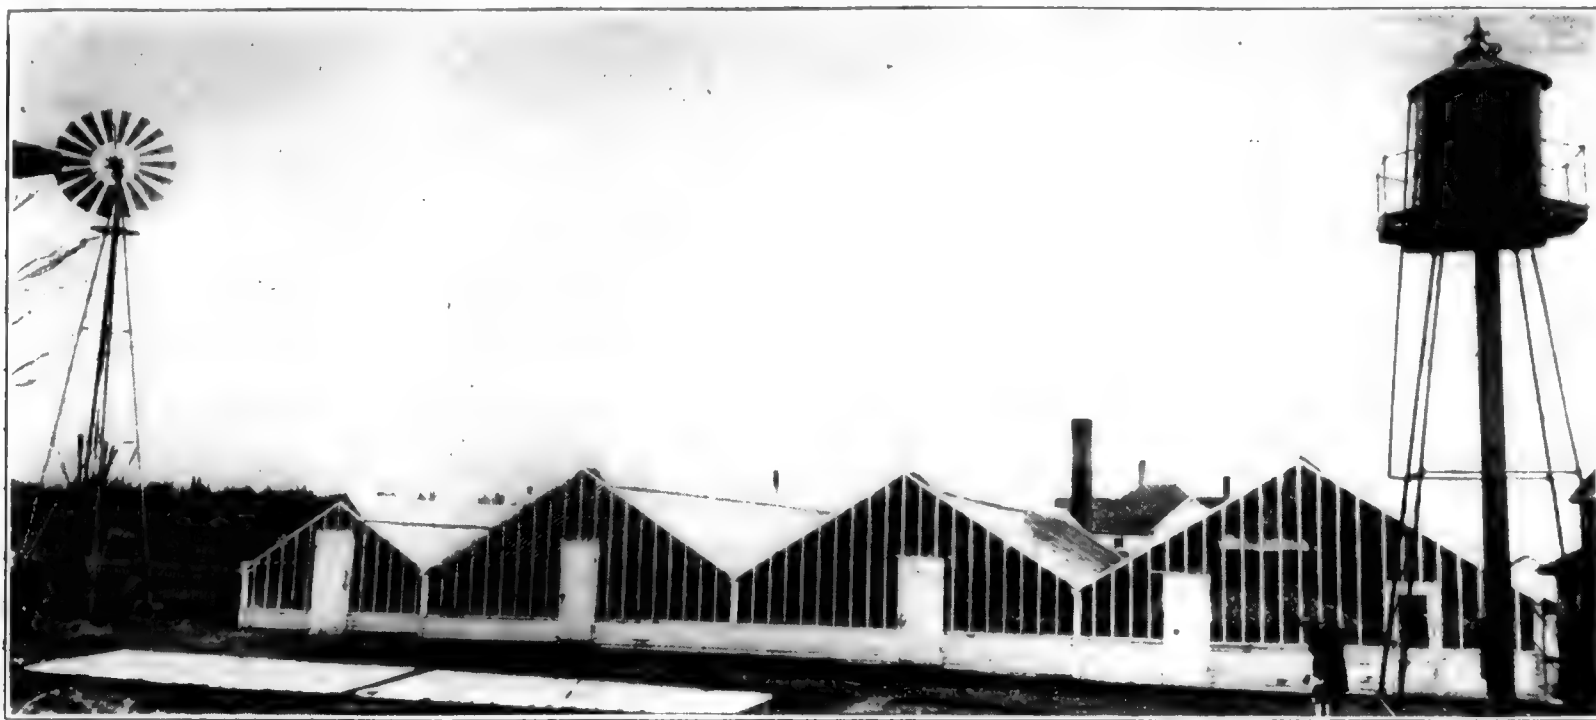

STRAIGHT STEMS.

Please tell us how to keep the stems straight on the chrysanthemums. Last year crown buds came out too early and when I pinched the bud out the stem would take a crook before going up again, thus spoiling the stem of many a fine plant, while the flowers were very large and fine. I propagated them in March and planted out in the field about the last of May out of 3-inch pots. Am located in southern California. F. S.

The best way, in fact, the only way, to keep the stems straight is to have a good stake for each shoot. After a plant has thrown a bud the growth shoot that is retained to run on up is tied to the stake while it is still soft and tender, and when this is attended to promptly and the bud is properly pinched out right down to the first eye, one can hardly tell at the end of the season where the first break had occurred on the stem. Lest F. S. should be in ignorance of what is meant by the first break I would

KAUPP'S GREENHOUSES.

At Nevada, Mo., G. P. Kaupp & Son are giving evidence of being among the up-to-date, progressive element in the trade. The accompanying illustration shows their plant, four houses, with a total of 10,000 feet of glass. They grow cut flowers, bedding and miscellaneous plants, and with additional glass in hot-beds and frames produce quantities of Grand Rapids lettuce and parsley. They issue a neat catalogue of plants, also illustrating a number of funeral designs and with its aid are doing more than a local business and enjoy a constantly growing trade. The present season they will put up another range, to be devoted to vegetables, and will use the present range exclusively for flowers and plants.

GREENHOUSE BUILDING.

[A paper by D. T. Connor, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, May 1, 1906.]

In my short paper I propose to tell you some of the things I have observed in greenhouse building. In the past ten years a great many improvements have been made in the construction of commercial greenhouses. The greenhouse builder is as much on the alert to add new and good features to greenhouses as is the grower to producing new varieties of roses or carnations.

The Iron Frame.

Perhaps the best greenhouse now erected is what is known as the iron-frame house. This house is the most durable and will last a life-time. Lighter woodwork is used in this construction and therefore more light is secured, less repairing is needed and at the same time it is more rigid and there is less vibration. While the cost is more than of our sash-bar houses, we have quite a number of well known florists that have adopted this style of houses and consider them a good investment.

If you stop to think that in any kind of a house you erect, the cost of labor, glass, heating and painting is the same, and often cost more in cheaper houses, a few dollars additional for material that would be more durable is money well spent. In nearly every kind of manufacturing plant the first and most important thing is to erect substantial buildings and use the latest improvements. This should be true in the florists' trade and apply to greenhouses. There are no buildings that suffer so greatly as greenhouses and they should be of the very best construction.

Take Builders' Advice.

We find all kinds of greenhouses wanted, and are asked to build them in all kinds of places. We meet a florist who wants to build a greenhouse or a range of glass, we hear his story and try to work out what he wants, and advise him to adopt as near as possible the standard style of house. It is always wise, and will cost you less, if you take the advice of the builder. The builders' constant association with the florists keeps them posted as to the wants of each grower and style of houses to build.

I might say that the even-span house, whether connected or separated, is the style mostly called for, from eighteen to twenty feet in width and up to 500 or 600 feet long. Connected houses I think should be from eighteen to twenty-six feet in width and the gutter line six to seven feet above the greenhouse floor. Separated houses are built from eighteen to forty feet in width. The pitch is usually about 32 degrees, or seven inches to the foot. Less pitch can be used in connected houses.

The Sash-bar House.

Perhaps the latest and best improvement in the line of durability is the combination of iron and wood in what is known as the sash-bar style of house. Builders of greenhouses are constantly working out the very best details for this purpose. Cast-iron gutters and iron posts are mostly used and have come to stay. The eave line, the weakest and most important point about a greenhouse, is taken care of by the use of cast-iron gutters and galvanized iron eave plates. In the iron and wood construction we get greater strength, more durability and less shade and this style costs very little more than all wood houses.

Cast-iron should always be used when set in the ground. Cast-iron is so close to the natural element that it is almost indestructible and I would say always use cast-iron in the ground and at the ground line. Wrought iron, when used, should be kept well painted or galvanized.

Trussed Houses.

Trussed houses, as planned by the firm that I am with, are something new. Houses of this style have been in use fifty years or more. A great many improvements have been made and special details worked out for this kind of construction, all of which I believe are practical. One good feature about the trussed house is that we do not have columns in the way, except when the houses are thirty feet or over in width, when it is best to use columns. Much lighter material is used in this construction, insuring the minimum amount of shade.

Wood and Putty.

I do not have to tell you that cypress is the best and only wood to use about a greenhouse, but I would like to impress on the florists that merely using the word cypress does not mean that you get the best wood. We find several kinds of cypress on the market and the selection of this should be left to experienced and reliable greenhouse builders. The cypress should always be air-dried and free from sap.

One of the most important things about greenhouse building is the use of good putty. Secure your stock where you know it is made of pure linseed oil and the best whiting. I meet many florists who use good material in building their houses and glaze with a poor grade of putty. The "marble dust brand" is often mixed with white lead. This makes the cost of your putty greater, and still you have poor material.

I was surprised the other day to meet a man who told me that one brand of putty is made at the beef packing establishments in the west. We all know that putty made of beef fat will not take hold of wood. No doubt some of this brand finds its way under greenhouse glass. If you secure good putty you do not have to mix white lead with it.

It is well known that white lead and pure linseed oil make the proper paint to use for all woodwork.

Glass and Glazing Nail.

Another good point in greenhouse construction is the glazing nail. We have a number of kinds to select from and nearly every florist believes one to be better than the other. I believe the zinc

I might say that the even span house, whether connected or separated, is the style mostly called for, from eighteen to twenty feet in width and up to 500 or 600 feet long. Connected houses I think should be from eighteen to twenty-six feet in width and the gutter line six to seven feet above the greenhouse floor. Separated houses are built from eighteen to forty feet in width. The pitch is usually about 32 degrees, or seven inches to the foot. Less pitch can be used in connected houses.

The Sash-bar House.

Perhaps the latest and best improvement in the line of durability is the combination of iron and wood in what is known as the sash-bar style of house. Builders of greenhouses are constantly working out the very best details for this purpose. Cast-iron gutters and iron posts are mostly used and have come to stay. The eave line, the weakest and most important point about a greenhouse, is taken care of by the use of cast-iron gutters and galvanized iron eave plates. In the iron and wood construction we get greater strength, more durability and less shade and this style costs very little more than all wood houses.

Cast-iron should always be used when set in the ground. Cast-iron is so close to the natural element that it is almost indestructible and I would say always use cast iron in the ground and at the ground line. Wrought iron, when used, should be kept well painted or galvanized.

Trussed Houses.

Trussed houses, as planned by the firm that I am with, are something new. Houses of this style have been in use fifty years or more. A great many improvements have been made and special details worked out for this kind of construction, all of which I believe are practical. One good feature about the trussed house is that we do not have columns in the way, except when the houses are thirty feet or over in width, when it is best to use columns. Much lighter material is used in this construction, insuring the minimum amount of shade.

Wood and Putty.

I do not have to tell you that cypress is the best and only wood to use about a greenhouse, but I would like to impress on the florists that merely using the word cypress does not mean that you get the best wood. We find several kinds of cypress on the market and the selection of this should be left to experienced and reliable greenhouse builders. The cypress should always be air-dried and free from sap.

One of the most important things about greenhouse building is the use of good putty. Secure your stock where you know it is made of pure linseed oil and the best whiting. I meet many florists who use good material in building their houses and glaze with a poor grade of putty. The "marble dust brand" is often mixed with white lead. This makes the cost of your putty greater, and still you have poor material.

I was surprised the other day to meet a man who told me that one brand of putty is made at the beef packing establishments in the west. We all know that putty made of beef fat will not take hold of wood. No doubt some of this brand finds its way under greenhouse glass. If you secure good putty you do not have to mix white lead with it.

It is well known that white lead and pure linseed oil make the proper paint to use for all woodwork.

Glass and Glazing Nail.

Another good point in greenhouse construction is the glazing nail. We have a number of kinds to select from and nearly every florist believes one to be better than the other. I believe the zinc shoe-nail is the only nail to use to hold your glass down; you will find it will take a good hold in the wood and stay with you.

A few words about glass for green-houses. Second quality glass is what mostly is used, and occasionally we find some one that uses single thick. In case of hail there will be less breakage where double thick is used. I would advise florists to use double thick glass. I believe glass should be spaced sixteen inches in width; we find this makes a stronger house and there is less breakage.

Benches and Ventilation.

The arrangement of benches is generally left to the florist and is planned to suit the kind of stock grown. They should be placed so that the walks come along the sides of the house. You get a better circulation of air and the houses will last much longer. The cypress material is best for the bottoms of the benches. While the cost is greater, it will outlast any other kind of wood and will be cheaper in the end.

Concrete made of ashes, sand and cement is now generally used to make solid beds. I believe in the next ten years concrete will be an important factor in the building of greenhouse foundations.

The ventilation of houses is an open question with the florists. Some want continuous lines on both sides of the ridge and others want top sash and spaces between. We have very little call for side ventilation on commercial houses. I believe houses twenty-eight feet wide and over should have continuous sash on both sides of the ridge.

ing induces them to throw buds, while if no such check occurs they will continue producing grass until toward spring. We are working out of those varieties, however, and we have very few varieties that are inclined that way. The ideal carnation plant breaks readily when topped and grows right into blooming shoots again.

If you plant your beds from small pots in April or May, you will lose at least two months of the season, and, while carnations are comparatively cheap during these two months, yet the profit is quite enough to be considered. If you shift the young plants as they need it, with a view to planting on the benches in July, then you will find a lot of work and close attention called for, and if you are a retailer and grow bedding stock, you will find this a mighty burdensome undertaking. They will have to be looked after and perhaps shifted, whether you are busy or not. A two weeks' wait may mean a stunt or hardening off that will take months to get over. They must be watered daily at least.

If you plant in the field you can usually finish before the spring rush begins and little or no care is required for a few weeks. In July and August you are better able to give all the care they need, as business is at that time at a low ebb.

I do not wish to discourage the use of the indoor method; in fact, I think rather well of it if you are prepared to give it the proper attention, but that it is hardly practical for certain classes of growers I am just as certain. Those who grow carnations or cut flowers exclusively can give the necessary attention at the proper time, but for the retail grower there is too much time called for just when he is busy elsewhere.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Planting Indoors.

The method of growing carnations in the house during the summer is coming more and more into vogue each season, and is being advocated by some of our leading carnation specialists. In our experience with this method we find that, while it possesses certain advantages over field culture, yet the advantages are not all on its side by any means.

Usually you will find that growers who advocate this method do so after having suffered an unfavorable season, during which their plants in the field did not make the usual growth. That you have more complete control over the situation under glass cannot be denied, but the question is, supposing the summer growing season be favorable, under which mode of culture is it possible to produce the most profitable crops during the season? It is not fair to single out an especially unfavorable season and use that for comparison, but such a season as we have four seasons out of five, and I feel safe in saying that percentage is at least fairly favorable to carnation growing in the field. In fact, the only kind of a season in which the grower is unable to help himself is in case of excessive rains.

It is generally conceded that from indoor stock you are able to cut a higher grade of blooms early in the fall than you will get from the first crop from late-planted stock grown outside, but when housing is done early in July, very often just as good stock can be cut from field-grown plants. If a variety is naturally a cropper, you can cut more evenly through the winter season from indoor plants than you can from the others.

Varieties that do not transplant readily, of course do best when grown inside, as they are not disturbed at a time when they are least able to stand it. For years we have favored growing Lawson under glass all summer, and it seems to like that mode of culture; but we find that where housed early and carefully handled until it resumes active growth, the outdoor plants will give a heavier midwinter crop, and of just as high quality as the others. If planted by the middle of July the early blooms will have as long stems and there will be no more splits. However, if you plant Lawson after the middle of August you need not expect to cut good stems before January.

For varieties that naturally grow long and straggly outside culture is best. Outdoors the tendency is toward robustness and short-jointedness. You will also find that by reason of the shorter joints, when you top a plant in the field it will break from more eyes than it will under glass. So it is easier to obtain a compact plant in the field.

Varieties that are inclined to be grassy are best grown in the field and planted early in August. By that time they ought to have reached a fair size and the check caused by the transplant-

THE JASMINE INDUSTRY.

"Great oaks from little acorns grow," and it was from a very small beginning that the cape jasmine industry has come to be one of first importance, not only to the people of a certain town in Texas, but to a large number of florists in all parts of the United States. Alvin is not the metropolis of the Lone Star state. In fact, the express agent says that the annual shipments of about a million "capes" represents the gathering and packing of five boxes of 100 each for every man, woman, child and "colored person" in the community.

Alvin is on the Santa Fe, little more than an hour's ride southwest of Houston and not quite that far from Galveston and the gulf. It is the recognized headquarters of the cape jasmine shippers, just at this moment beginning their season's activity. The first shipments from there, many years ago, were from bushes grown for no special purpose. For several seasons the shipments were simply such as circumstances provided but as the possibilities of the northern market began to be appreciated the business was put on a firm foundation by the planting of many acres to be grown specially to supply cut buds for shipment north.

The cape jasmine is Gardenia jasminoides. It is a tender shrub four to six feet high, with thick, glossy, dark green evergreen foliage. It propagates readily from cuttings and in the Alvin district the bushes are grown in rows across broad fields, the plants having been set about eight feet apart, which permits cultivating with the plow as well as the hoe. The flowers usually begin to open about the middle of May and for Memorial day uses the buds are shipped to every state in the Union. The cutting is done in the bud and the work gives employment during the season to as many girls and boys as are available in the town. Cutting is begun as early in the morning as it is light enough to see, and only the buds in the right stage of development are taken, the field being gone over four or five times a day. Even then a considerable part of the crop is lost, as the buds pop open and are not suitable for shipping.

The flowers are waxy white, with a strong tropical fragrance. They are rapidly growing in popularity and all the shippers are striving to improve the quality of their stock by culling out the short-stemmed buds and those with poor foliage. The variety grown at Alvin is an improvement on the old form and is called Gardenia grandiflora. It has larger flowers and, more important, longer stems.

The shipping principally is done by the growers. Formerly the trade was handled through commission houses but as production increased the growers began to take on direct orders as well as supply the commission men, greatly to the dissatisfaction of the latter, who were thenceforward never sure how many of their customers had been supplied direct, perhaps by the very shipper whose stock the commission house was handling. The result has been a steadily lowering average price for the buds sold in the big cities, where the commission houses still handle hundreds of thousands of buds, for some seasons many are lost. There are a number of shippers at Alvin who simply buy small lots as offered and forward them north, sometimes simply consigning them to the express company at some big city, to be sold for what they will bring. But except as to this uncertain commission stock, the business is now largely on a cash in advance or C. O. D. basis.

Naturally the size and date of the crop is a matter of much moment to the growers and also to the retail florists. In 1901 the cutting did not begin until about May 21 and the big crop did not come until too late for Memorial day orders. Each season since then the crop has been promptly on time and this year advices are to the effect that it will be both early and good.

One of the accompanying illustrations is from a photograph made last season in the field of Cook & Cook, who for some years have been among the largest shippers at Alvin and are now said to have the largest field in that locality, of thrifty young plants.

PIPING.

How much pipe will it take and how should it be arranged to heat a house 48x125, north wall five feet high, boarded and shingled; south wall three feet high with two feet glass? The south bars are thirty feet long, the north twenty-four feet. There is glass in both ends. The boiler shed is at the east end and houses a No. 4 Kroeschell boiler rated to heat 10,500 feet of glass. We have on hand 1,800 feet of 2-inch pipe and 1,000 feet of 1½-inch pipe which we wish to use. How much more will be required? We need 55 degrees in Massachusetts temperature. J. H. L. & S.

The house under consideration, to maintain the temperature specified, should be provided with 1,866 square feet of radiation. The 1,800 feet of 2-inch pipe is equivalent to 1,117 square feet of radiation and the 1,000 feet of 1½-inch pipe will give 497 square feet of radiation. The two together make about 1,600 square feet, or 266 square feet less than the amount required. If this is to be made good by the use of 2-inch pipe 430 lineal feet additional will be suffi-

The 2-inch pipe is none too large for the long runs—125 feet—and one size of pipe will prove more satisfactory than two sizes. The arrangement of the pipes must be determined by the type of the beds or benches used in the house and the crops to be grown. Without such information it would be unwise to venture an opinion. Your boiler is of ample size for this house. The only criticism is that the runs are a little long for hot water. L. C. C.

THE BUILDING BOOM.

Probably the extent of the present building boom in the greenhouse business best may be illustrated by the records of some of the manufacturers of greenhouse material. "Figures don't prevaricate." The John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, have for several years published a statement as to the combined number of houses built by them during the preceding season. It has shown an annual increase but nothing like the business to date done this season. Between January 1, 1906, and May 1 they have milled and shipped material for a total of 151 greenhouses of varying dimensions.

Here are 151 houses, of an average width of twenty-two feet and an average length of 150½ feet—151 houses 22x150½—or one house twenty-two feet wide and over four miles long.

It is interesting to note, aside from the tendency to build "longer, wider, higher," as a famous railroad advertisement says of its sleeping car berths, that the Moninger records show a majority to be building even-span houses, with most of the others short-span-to-the-south.

MAKING A START.

I have purchased a small piece of land on which I wish to build a greenhouse. Not having enough capital to build it all at present, I desire to build in sections, putting up one or two sections now and adding later. I would like very much to get advice from some practical florists or mechanics on this subject. At first I would want it for such stock as carnations, pot plants, chrysanthemums, etc. It is a corner lot and has no shade, but there may be a terrace built on the west side of a lane eighteen feet from my land, so I may have some shade in the afternoon. Is it better to buy from factories that are experts in building greenhouses or will it be cheaper to have a contractor build it? Please give me all information possible, as I am a young man and wish to get a start in life. I have been in this trade since a boy and love it, so any information will be appreciated. My home is opposite, across the road, where I can raise carnations, etc.

B. V. S.

As your lot is quite limited in size, I would advise you to build connecting houses. Where space is of little consequence and you could afford to keep the houses separate, it would be an advantage. To separate them by say six feet, it would be only to make a pocket for snow to lodge. If separated at all it should be at least twelve to fifteen feet and more is better. This would soon eat up all your ground.

I am quite certain that the detached house with glass on side walls both back and front will give the best results. Yet there are some advantages in the connected houses, among which are saving of fuel and cost of construction and, although they are not ideally light as the detached houses are, yet they are sufficiently light to grow splendid plants and flowers.

Suppose you build connecting houses, then they must be equal span with side or exterior walls five feet high and at least half their height of glass. Begin on the south line of your property and run the houses east and west. One gable end of the houses can be on the last line of the lot and the south side of house No. 1 running along the south line of the lot, showing off well from the main street. On the west end you must leave a passageway for convenience in renewing soil and other material. In future building you will add houses to the north.

After trying many different dimensions of houses we find twenty-one feet a convenient width, allowing three benches about five feet wide and a path beneath the gutter.

There are two styles of iron gutters, one supported by a single post, either wood or pipe, and the other by two rows of posts, in this case always 1½-inch or 2-inch pipe. In the latter case you save path room, for your path is beneath the gutter. In the other case your single post is directly beneath the gutter and you can't get along without a narrow path on each side of the center post. I strongly recommend an iron gutter, of which there are several patterns made.

While the grade of your surface of houses should be as near level as possible, let the ridge and gutter have a fall either to the east or west of at least ten inches. If you build two houses this year make convenient provision for adding other houses to the north. To do this finish off the north wall with wood and glass. Any horticultural builder will supply you with a wooden plate to fit on iron gutters and bars to fit to it. This can be removed at any time you desire, but most likely you will leave it in, as a place of your size will want some houses of different temperatures. Let the gutters be at least six feet six inches in height.

My plan as suggested may not be most convenient for heating, as you naturally locate your boiler-house on the northwest corner. Still you can overcome that by laying pipes in a trench and covering well with asbestos or mineral wool or some other nonconducting fire-proof material. We have a 2-inch steam pipe crossing an orchard a distance of 250 feet, ten feet above the ground. It carries thirty pounds of steam to a range of houses the farthest end of which is 500 feet from the boiler and in crossing the orchard we frequently notice icicles hanging from the covering of the pipe, but you will, if you are wise, use hot water and put in a heater large enough to warm well what you may build in future; or, if you can't afford to do that, then be sure to have heater and pipes enough to keep the proper temperature at your coldest weather. Then all the rest of the time you will be saving fuel, and when you duplicate your range of glass put in another heater of ample capacity and connect them so that in case of a break-down in one heater you are not thrown on your beam ends, which in nautical slang means that the ship is laying on her side ready to sink.

As far as building material and building are concerned, write to the many experienced horticultural builders telling them the height and width of the houses and how much side glass you wish, size of doors and ventilators and they will send you estimates on everything cut and fitted, so that any ordinary mechanic, or yourself, can put it up. Don't think of a local contractor. They know as little about greenhouse building as they do of Greek mythology.

Let your ventilation be continuous and thirty-six inches deep from the ridge. You don't need side ventilation. And don't use in your heating pipes anything less than 2-inch pipes. If you run against a snag in your heating problem write to the REVIEW and we will help you out. Of course you will use for material only the best cypress lumber and 16x24 glass. I have never seen a piece of decayed cypress yet after using it twenty years. Possibly about the time I pass away, 1950, there may be some discovered.

QUICK ACTION WINS.

Some men know better than others how to grow plants, and in some the business instinct is the more highly developed. Ludvig Mosbaek not only knows how to produce the stock but he has the faculty of selling; he knows how to make the stock move, how to make the wheels go round, faster and faster.

For years Mr. Mosbaek was in market gardening at South Chicago, Ill., but after a time he began to see a larger field and a better profit in devoting his glass to plants and gradually displaced lettuce with spring stuff. With his commercial ideas it was not long until he needed more room. The old place accordingly was sold and a new range of eight houses built at Onarga, Ill., since which time the business has assumed several times its former proportions. Not only are spring plants grown in quantity, but stock for fall and winter is provided for a quick rotation of crops and a large collection of hardly perennials, phlox, peonies, etc., is being established. Several acres are devoted to cannas and dahlias, and pansies are grown by the hundred thousand. He secures his pansy seed abroad. Several thousand pansies are shipped daily during the spring planting season.

Having the stock ready, Mr. Mosbaek came to a shrewd conclusion that might well be imitated by others; he conceived the notion that promptness would pay. He does not let a deal hang fire. If it is an inquiry it is answered the day it is received. If it is an order it is shipped the day received. It is a policy which has had a great deal to do in building up his business. He had forty-six people on his pay roll last week, for of course this is the busiest season, several wagons of express going out every day. Of course the bulk of the shipments go to points in Illinois and contiguous states, but the trade extends to the most distant parts of the country, and every day stock goes out to Washington, Oregon, Texas and New England. This is the heaviest year to date and the trade promises to keep up well, so that next year a still further increase will be striven for and may reasonably be expected.

Vegetable Forcing.

TOLEDO, O.—Crane Bros., who are said to have the largest range of greenhouses in the state, are just finishing an addition. They are lettuce growers.

GOUVERNEUR, N. Y.—A number of young business men of this village have under consideration a plan for the organization of a company to engage in the raising of vegetables. An option has been procured on ten acres of land on the Clinton street road, and it is proposed to erect eight greenhouses, each 100 feet long. It is hoped to incorporate within a few days with a capital stock of $10,000. R. C. Gonderman is interested in the movement.

FREMONT, MICH.—R. L. Chamberlain, of Chamberlain & Bunker, made a special trip to Chicago to investigate the working of the Wittbold watering device. He was so well pleased with it that he placed an order for a lot of pipe and nozzles for trial. He says that "after looking over the system I am convinced that mechanical spraying is a success. We expect to equip our whole place of 100,000 feet of glass with the Wittbold system as fast as we can get at it."

CUCUMBERS.

With increasing warmth and abundance of light the plants make a much quicker and stronger growth as the season advances. Setting of the flowers is also accomplished much easier, but insect pests become correspondingly more numerous and more troublesome. Chief among these are thrips and red spider. As I have stated before in these articles, these might be kept down by syringing if it were not for the tenderness of the foliage, which unfortunately will not withstand without laceration the water applied with sufficient force to dislodge the insects. This makes it necessary to use some cheap and effective insecticide for spraying the foliage occasionally.

We have found tobacco extract as cient. If the 1½-inch pipe could be exchanged for 2-inch pipe, 209 feet additional would be enough; i. e., 3,009 feet of 2-inch pipe will supply the necessary heating surface.

The 2-inch pipe is none too large for the long runs—125 feet—and one size of pipe will prove more satisfactory than two sizes. The arrangement of the pipes must be determined by the type of the beds or benches used in the house and the crops to be grown. Without such information it would be unwise to venture an opinion. Your boiler is of ample size for this house. The only criticism is that the runs are a little long for hot water. L. C. C.

THE BUILDING BOOM.

Probably the extent of the present building boom in the greenhouse business best may be illustrated by the records of some of the manufacturers of greenhouse material. "Figures don't prevaricate." The John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, have for several years published a statement as to the combined number of houses built by them during the preceding season. It has shown an annual increase but nothing like the business to date done this season. Between January 1, 1906, and May 1 they have milled and shipped material for a total of 151 greenhouses of varying dimensions.

As I have stated before in these articles, these might be kept down by syringing if it were not for the tenderness of the foliage, which unfortunately will not withstand without laceration the water applied with sufficient force to dislodge the insects. This makes it necessary to use some cheap and effective insecticide for spraying the foliage occasionally.

We have found tobacco extract as good for this purpose as anything we have tried. There are several brands of this on the market, put up ready to mix with a given quantity of water. Of the different makes we have little preference. Where tobacco stems can be easily procured the cheapest method is to soak a bundle of these in a pail or barrel of water, according to the quantity needed, and by straining off and diluting to the proper strength a cheap and effective solution can be procured.

I am unable to lay down a hard and fast rule as a guide to the exact quantity of stems necessary to give so many gallons, as the stems differ in strength and the strength differs with age, so the operator will have to conduct his own experiments. Err on the safe side by using a weak solution at first and increase the strength as it is seen that the plants will stand it.

Neither this home-made extract nor any other extract that I know of will rid the plants of thrips or red spider after they become badly infested, but if used in time either as a preventive or on the first signs of trouble, as a spray two or three times a week, there should be no difficulty in keeping the plants clean.

Another insect which often proves troublesome at this season is the common rose bug, which seems to hatch out in the greenhouses before it begins to move outdoors, and gets to work on anything it can find in the way of vegetation and will often severely lacerate the foliage of cucumber plants. They seldom appear in such numbers that they cannot be got rid of by hand picking, but it pays to keep watch of the plants and where a disfigured leaf is seen make a hunt for the rose bug. It is a healthy feeder and in a very short time will destroy quite a few leaves.

Some seasons we have been troubled by small caterpillars, which appear in colonies on the underside of the foliage and quickly work havoc wherever the eggs have been deposited by the mother moth. Hand picking is the only remedy found for these. The indications of their presence is easily apparent on the foliage, and if a close watch is kept they can be destroyed before many leaves have been destroyed. W. S. CROYDON.

but not too green and succulent. The conditions in the ordinary propagating bed are the reverse of favorable at this time, there being little bottom heat and the air being often very warm. In the fall, say November, the wood of the previous summer roots readily.

A better plan is to make a mild hot-bed with a foot or two of fermenting material, with three or four inches of soil, and top off with three inches of sand. In late June or early July the growth of the spring will be in the right condition to make cuttings of three or four eyes and insert in the sand half their length. Keep the sand moist and the frame close and well shaded until the cuttings are rooted. In two weeks you can admit air and gradually increase. In five or six weeks you can lift and pot. Almost all our real shrubs will propagate freely the same way, as well as H. P. roses.

ARSENIC FOR FUMIGATING.

The use of arsenic for fumigating in greenhouses has become a quite common practice. It is used by many growers for combating all sorts of leaf-eating greenhouse pests. The usual method of applying is to burn the powder upon a heap of tobacco stems. The result is that a deposit of arsenic is spread upon the foliage of all the plants in the house. That this is not an altogether safe practice is shown by an experience related by Thomas Allen, one of the well-known growers of Beauties for the Chicago market.

Mr. Allen has had trouble with a small worm which finds an entrance to Beauty buds and is next to impossible to exterminate. It is believed to come from a very small fly for which various fumigants have been tried. Mr. Allen burned tobacco stems on which arsenic had been placed. A day or so later he cut out some blind wood on his Beauty plants and gave the cuttings to some Belgian hares, which are very fond of the young tips of the rose growth. In this case it killed them.

THE IDEAL EMPLOYER.

[A paper by W. D. Abbott, Auburn, R. I., submitted in the S. A. F. prize contest.]

Just what constitutes an ideal employer is a question likely to bring forth a variety of opinions, numerous almost as the persons who advance them. To understand ourselves let us see what ideal means. In the first place it deals with the ideas. This meaning is extended in ordinary thought to mean an ultimate object or aim conceived to be most desirable if not, at the time, a reality. Thus we consider the ideal employer as the highest type of that class to which he belongs. He is what we aim at in developing further the best conceivable employer. He is the kind of man we want if there is to be the highest industrial efficiency, social and moral progress.

From the individual laborer gaining a livelihood for himself and those dependent on him, we find developed an industrial organization entirely different. The laborer saved part of his earnings and let others use this surplus in consideration of certain values agreed upon. So has developed the custom of men doing work for others on an increasingly larger scale until we have today our modern corporations with large numbers of employees.

Most of us have an idea of the way

BEST FORCING ROSES.

We will be very greatly obliged if you will give us a list of what you consider to be the best six or eight florists' roses for forcing purposes, when grafted. J. & P.

We take this to mean roses to produce flowers under glass. If so, then the following have proved the best and in the opinion of most florists give more flowers grafted on the Manetti stock than on their own roots. American Beauty is undoubtedly the most valuable of forcing roses, more money being spent in its cultivation and more bench room occupied than any other two or three varieties, but it is not benefited by grafting. Bride and Bridesmaid stand almost clear of all other varieties, the one pink, the other white. Killarney, pink, is much thought of by many. Richmond is the finest red. Perle des Jardins is the most profitable yellow. Golden Gate is large and free, a combination of delicate colors. Mme. Chatenay, pink, is a profuse bloomer and a great keeper.

Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Souvenir du President Carnot are two most valuable roses for the florist, but are classed as hybrid teas and consequently they will rest during the months of December and January, yet for summer blooming under glass they are most valuable, keeping their size and vigor during the hottest weather, which the true teas do not.

At first glance it appears very easy to mention half a dozen of the more popular roses, but in choosing that number it leaves outside not a few which are very desirable and favorites with many.

W. S.

PROPAGATING RAMBLERS.

Can I propagate rambler and other roses from layers and cuttings? If cuttings, how many eyes? Can I use green wood or one-year-old wood?

W. E. B.

The wood from ramblers that have stood the winter is unfit for propagation. From unsold plants that you have forced you might try the green wood, we want to be treated if employed or employers—an ideal way, if you please. To the employee the question of compensation appeals first. It means his living, his comfort, and that of his family. He wants as much as he earns. He has a right to it. His skill should be paid for according to its degree. He wants a stated number of hours for work, or some understanding with his employer that reduces extra unpaid-for labor to a minimum. He wants what skill he has and uses paid for at its honest value. He desires that his technical knowledge return to him its full value, exactly the same as his employer wants the full value for goods he sells.

The employee from this standpoint naturally expects to be under the control of some one who oversees his work. The temperament of this man counts for much in the ease with which work is done. A calm, strong, tactful, man will carry his men along with him, willing to do their work well and with little wasted time. On the other hand, the irritable employer wastes more or less time getting his temper cooled down to working temperature, while his men lose time in receiving instructions and have lost the spirit of efficient work.

The careful removal of cause for irritation outside of the personality of the employer is desirable. Good tools in good condition give more satisfactory results because of the satisfied feeling of using a machine that works well. Furthermore a man does not want to shoulder unjust blame so easily thrust down on his shoulders. He should be willing to stand reasonable criticism, but not that responsibility which should rest on the employer.

In a general way, we have considered some of the things the employee does not want. The employer, of course, wants his just reward for his labor, capital and skill. He in his turn is entitled to pay for his labor like the workman. He is entitled to a return from his capital because it is saved labor changed into forms which can be used to pay for the labor of saving it, and for its use in furnishing employment to others not easily found without its help. He is entitled to a return from his business ability, or we may say skill, the same as the laborer wants pay for his.

The difficulty seems to be in reaching a just division of the product of the employer and employed combined. It is not the purpose of this paper to suggest any method of division. It has rather been to show that such complicated relations as exist between capital and labor in the employer and the employee require a well developed moral fiber to deal justly with each other. "An honest man is the noblest work of God," is a phrase known to everyone. True, the employer must be honest with his men but may a man not be generally considered honest and yet not arrive at an absolutely square deal? By that I mean that he may not consider the financial needs of his employees in as liberal a spirit as he does his own. Every man has a right to some pleasure, some opportunity to improve his understanding and some means of allowing his children an education. It seems that the employer would do well to further these ends. Such a course would probably decrease his profits but he should be able to find a very satisfactory return from such a decrease where judiciously used thus for the good of society.

Charles Albert Traendly.

While financial considerations must, from the relations of the employer and the employee, be of especial importance, the qualities of mind not so intimately connected with the financial relations must prove equally helpful to both parties. Interest of a mutual kind by the employer for the employee would have a powerful influence toward making pleasanter and better worth living the life of each.

So the man must not only be honest but trusted by his men. No cause for misunderstanding must be allowed to creep in and destroy mutual confidence. A hearty fellow feeling which cements the individual efforts of the employed and the employer into one efficient productive whole; a unit where no waste occurs through the arbitrarily used power of the employer. Someone has said, "I expect to pass through this life but once. If therefore there is any kindness I can show or any good I can do to any fellow being let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again." A man with an honest purpose to be successful, and holding such sentiments as these quoted, to be used to their practical limit, should make an ideal employer. Such a man would realize that he was a powerful force for good government. He would realize his power to make superfluous certain prohibitory laws governing employment of labor. He would be a man of ideals. "Ideals are the only source of growth." He might, in fact, be called the ideal citizen, the man, the promoter of industrial efficiency, social and moral progress.

THE ASPIDISTRA.

I suppose the aspidistra takes an easy first as the favorite house plant. It can be grown even under hard unfavorable conditions, but well does it repay careful cultivation. For compost, nothing suits it better than good, fresh, yellow loam, to which has been added a little leaf-mold and the same quantity of sharp sand, the whole freshly mixed. If the plant requires dividing the roots must be carefully disentangled, and it is very important that they be not too deeply buried. These are subjects that should not be over-potted. I have just measured my best plant. It spreads out to a space of four feet from side to side. The larger leaves are over two feet four inches from the soil to the tip of the leaf. There are thirty-two leaves in all, and the whole is in an 8-inch pot.—Gardening World.

THE YOUNGEST WHOLESALE.

Charles Albert Traendly, the youngest wholesaler in New York and probably in the country, was born July 17, 1905. He is the son of Frank H. Traendly, of the firm of Traendly & Schenck, and is now legally a member of the firm, with an actual interest in the business. Mrs. Albert Small is the child's godmother and Charles Schenck the godfather, hence Charles Albert and the early launching of the boat on the tempestuous sea of New York business life. Mr. Schenck gave him an interest in the business in recognition of the honor of naming him. This is certainly the young man's century and Dr. Osler's limit seems to be bearing fruit. The wholesale section of floricultural New York is full of young blood but this one takes the cake. Mr. Traendly has not said it is a third interest or a half interest, but it is an actual fact that the boy is "It."

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

TROPAEOLEUMS.

Tropaeolum speciosum, or the flame nasturtium, is the despair of many growers, as only here and there can it be seen in good condition, though everyone wants to grow it. Pot roots planted deeply in cool soil, in positions where the roots may be kept shaded and cool while the top growth can feel the sun, give the best chance of success. Tropaeolum tuberosum is an excellent and quick growing plant for covering unsightly walls or other objects. A sandy soil is conducive to flowering, and I have found it to do best on an eastern aspect.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Because of the new wage scale which the Printers' Union has enforced upon those employers not willing to suffer interruption of their business, especially because of that part of the scale which makes overtime practically prohibitive, it is of first importance that the Review obtain its advertising "copy" earlier.

REVIEW ADVS. MOVE STOCK QUICK.

Don't neglect your advertisement in the REVIEW. If it contains items on which you are sold out, or nearly sold out, write to have these cut out of the advertisement. Don't put it off. Do it in time to catch the next issue. It does you harm, it does everybody harm, to disappoint a man who orders from your advertisement.

A great many advertisements in the REVIEW are ordered to run "until I tell you to stop." Don't fail to tell us to stop the minute the advertisement has done its work. If an advertisement has been ordered for three insertions, and two issues have done the work, don't fail to head off the third one. It will save letter-writing as well as disappointment.

The REVIEW goes only to live people; not a dead name on our subscription list. Seasonable stock at right prices sells quickly if advertised in the REVIEW. With the advertisers' help, we will carry no dead offers.

cleanly, but not so clean as they would like to be; also they would like cleanliness to be a little cheaper. It was through the experiments at Bassett & Washburn's that the now quite common practice was perfected, of spraying greenfly and thrip with the dilute solution of nicotine. This was found very effective under certain conditions but a very fine mist is necessary and it means much work to fill a big house with the spray; also it takes quite some nicotine, which wouldn't be cheap if it wasn't strong.

Experiments with hydrocyanic acid gas the past winter have confirmed the results obtained by the Department of Agriculture. It has been found that the gas was effective against greenfly but not against thrip. Furthermore, it was found that if the gas was strong enough to incommode the insects it was likely to burn the edges of the rose leaves. Besides, the gas is not the safest thing in the world for people to fool with.

The newest way of fumigating for thrip, which always makes its appearance in large numbers around Chicago every spring, and is just now on in full force, is to vaporize To-bak-ine liquid. There are half a dozen ways this may be done, but their way is very good. Small alcohol lamps are used under little tin pans, each containing two ounces of nicotine. The first time it was tried each lamp set fire to the extract in the pan and some harm was done; the lamps had been turned too high.

It was found that two ounces of wood alcohol in their style of lamp would just evaporate one ounce of To-bak-ine. It keeps up the fumigation several hours. The smoke is very effective but it remains to determine how many lamps are needed to each house; it varies, of course, with the size and tightness of the structure.

This method has one decided advantage in that it is safe. No harm can come to the operatives unless they imbibe the wood alcohol. But Hinsdale is a prohibition town; however, Bassett & Washburn's growers are exemplary young men whose inclination is for the quiet pleasures of the reading room at the Y. M. C. A. rather than toward the bacchanalian joys of the sightless porker.

HAND'S FUMIGATOR.

Robert Hand, one of the growers for the Poehlmann Bros. Co., has been granted a patent upon a process of fumigation invented by him while he was located at Cleveland in 1904. It consists of an apparatus for vaporizing nicotine by dropping it in dilute form into a discharge pipe containing superheated steam, by means of which the vapor is carried into the greenhouse. The inventor states that he has found that no success will be obtained if saturated steam is used, but that results are exceedingly satisfactory if superheated steam is used. The important feature, therefore, is the superheater and the means provided for exposing to the stream a thin layer of the solution to be vaporized. The practical operation of the apparatus will be watched with interest.

ASPARAGUS.

I send a piece of asparagus different from any other I have. Will you kindly state its name? It came in with a shipment of other varieties. E. T.

The asparagus in question was very dry when received, and had lost much of its foliage in consequence, but so far as may be judged from a specimen in that condition, it appears to be simply a seedling variation of Asparagus plumosus. Numerous variations of this species have appeared from time to time, and without seeing a fully developed plant it would be impossible to say whether this variety possesses especial merit. W. H. TAPLIN.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Trade was quiet last week. Stock was carried over each day until Friday, when there was a good clean-up of carnations, but a surplus of roses still remained. This week conditions are a little better. Demand is stronger and supplies somewhat reduced by several days of unseasonably cool weather. The shipping demand is beginning again to be felt in some force.

One of the heaviest cuts of roses ever known in this market has been on the past week. Practically every house has been loaded. The Beauty crops are coming in exceptional quantity and in general the stock is of first-class quality. There has been a good sale for the better grade of goods at prevailing prices, but a large quantity of cripples have found their way to the street merchants. The short stock has moved slowly. Brides and Maids have brought low averages because there is enough select goods to go around and the poorer qualities are difficult to dispose of. Some very fine Richmond is seen, also good Liberty. Chateau is among the best of roses, stems in many instances being almost as long as on Beauty. Uncle John is also in fine shape. Kaiserin is received in a number of houses and Carnot at Bassett & Washburn's is excellent.

The carnation crop is passing off. Supplies are much less than in the period since Easter and prices are slowly stiffening. There is some complaint as to the quality of stock, but much of it is still excellent.

Violets are gone and sweet peas have their place. Much good stock is received and sells well. Daisies are abundant and many of them remarkable for size and stem. They are largely used in dinner table centerpieces. Some outdoor bulbous stock still accumulates and long-florum lilies are difficult to move. The supplies are very large. Callas are quite abundant. The spring weddings make a demand for valley which keeps this item moving. Green goods are a little more abundant.

Various Notes.

Bohannon & Canger have dissolved partnership, John Canger continuing the State street store. Lovelace R. Bohannon has succeeded John Ghormly in charge of Fleischman's North State street store.

Joe Curran, for years at Friedman's, is now with Henry Klunder, where they report a very heavy run of funeral work the first of this week.

The Benthay-Coatsworth Co. is making a very considerable saving by shipping its cut from New Castle to Chicago in large corrugated paper boxes. The light weight saves the cost of the box every trip and the boxes are good for from four to six trips each, being returned to New Castle by freight at a cost of one-fourth the express company's return charges. No ice is used and the stock arrives in better shape than in the ordinary wood cases.

George Reinberg reports last week to have been the best first week in May he ever enjoyed. If prices were low, the size of his Beauty crop compensated.

The Retail Florists' Association sent a request to the city council last Monday evening asking that the chief of police be directed to enforce the ordinance against street stands. It was referred to the judiciary committee.

George Walther, president of the Retail Florists' Association, states that the secretary is in receipt of letters from about half the wholesalers agreeing to cut out red violets "wherever possible."

A. L. Randall spent Saturday and Sunday at his farm in Michigan.

George R. Scott is back at his old stand with the E. F. Winterson Co.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is handling some very good lilac in quantity.

O. P. Bassett has sold his gasoline automobile and now runs a White steamer. He is said to be the dean of the Chicago chauffeurs, 71 years of age. Some of his friends tell him it is not safe to go steaming through the country carrying 500 pounds pressure, more or less, but Mr. Bassett says it is nothing; that all his life he has sat on a safety valve of one sort or another.

At J. A. Budlong's they think highly of Nelson Fisher carnation. A fine cut is on at present. It holds its color much better than Lawson.

The Florists' Club meets tonight.

L. Baumann & Co. have a specialty that goes well in natural Asparagus plumosus that is prepared the same as are cycas leaves. It endures for months.

Thomas Allen has despaired of eradicating the microscopical worm in his Beauties, and will plant Brides for next season. Prior to last year Mr. Allen's Beauties were among the cream of the market.

Frank Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland, was a visitor last week.

Albert Amling has discarded the big hanging pots in which he has grown Sprenger and has planted the stock in wire baskets. He will add adiantum to his list of greens for next year.

The Butler Floral Co. has moved two doors south to 297 Dearborn street, where a much larger store was available, facing on two streets. One end is used for the typewriter business, the other for the flower store. Mr. Jahn may be just a bit unique, but nevertheless there is always something doing wherever he spends his time.

Louis Winkelman, one of Bassett & Washburn's city force, and Miss Boyer, daughter of a Hinsdale coal man, were married yesterday.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has large daily supplies of valley, one of the most salable items on the list at present.

Word has been received from E. C. Struvy that he has reached his old stamping ground at San Jose, Cal.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says that reports from Sarcosie indicate that late frost has blighted many peony buds and that the crop will not be heavy and quality not up to the best of past years. The first Early Rose from Sarcosie arrived May 7.

R. E. Kennicott, of Carbondale, is shipping Old Red and Early Rose peonies in considerable quantity. There is slight prospect of local peonies arriving for Decoration day.

John Zech says that carnation crops have shortened materially and that he looks for an early reduction in rose cuts. He sees no prospect of heavy supplies of roses for Decoration day.

Robert Newcomb, formerly of Des Moines, is handling the rush for spring plants and seeds at the Chicago Rose Co.

Martha Gundeburg will in the future represent the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum greenhouses on the floor of the Flower Growers' market. She was formerly buyer for J. Bombenger.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has a very popular novelty in a staple shaped like a hair pin, very useful in attaching ferns to the moss in funeral designs and for many other similar purposes. The wire is light and pliable and colored green. A few cents buys a pound, and a pound would take a week to count. Practically every retail store has a box of them.

The Market.

Cut flower trade continues very dull. To say the glut continues would be putting it mildly. All the commission houses were loaded down all last week and more stock went to waste than to customers. The weather was too warm, more like July than May. This brought the crop out very rapidly. In many lines the stock runs poor and roses are generally soft and off in color.

Funeral work is all that is being done by the retail stores. The services for Corwin H. Spencer, first vice-president of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co., called for an extra amount of work last Saturday. Beauties especially had a big call for this funeral. A number had orders from outside the city.

Monday a large amount of stock was still coming in and going at prices as low as last week. One of the down-town retailers boasted as to how cheap he bought the morning's supply, and to verify his statement showed his bill, which was as follows: "1,000 assorted roses, $7.50; 1,000 carnations, $5; fifty callas, $1." All the above was first-class stock. The wholesalers are almost forced to these prices to dispose of the stock to make room for new shipments. Outdoor stock is also beginning to crowd the market, such as lilac, valley, jonquils. Cape jasmine from Texas will come in next week.

The plantsmen were never so busy as now.

Various Notes.

Mr. Abrahamson, representing E. H. Hunt, Chicago, spent a few days here last week.

L. Cella, of East St. Louis, died last week. He was a brother-in-law to Chas. Fleckinstein, who was formerly in the wholesale business here. Mr. Cella was well known among the trade, coming over almost daily to buy stock. He leaves a wife and two children, who have the sympathy of the trade.

Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, called last week. Mr. Fehr reports that all the Belleville florists had a big Easter trade and are now kept busy with plant trade.

Fred H. Meinhardt is very busy at present attending to cemetery work, of which he has the largest trade in that section. He has very little time to attend to the duties to which President Kasting has just assigned him, but he is a hustler and will make up for lost time early in June. A better state vice-president could not have been had.

One of C. Young & Sons Co.'s large show windows was broken last week by dynamiting the old cable tracks in front of the store. The damage was $250, which was paid by the railroad company.

Ernest Strehle, a gardener at Forest park, was appointed overseer at the park to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of George Ostertag as superintendent of parks. Michael Ratchford will be retained as keeper of the park.

The Junior School of Horticulture opened its grounds on Wednesday of last week at 4142 Shaw avenue, with Allen Stevens as instructor. Three hundred enthusiastic children attended the opening and each was assigned a plot of ground 2x10 feet. By the end of the month Mr. Stevens says more than 700 children will be in attendance.

C. C. Sanders says he never was so busy as this year with nursery stock and bedding plants. The big force is kept busy from morning until night. Cut flowers are plentiful, but trade is dragging in this line.

The St. Louis Palm Co. is moving this week to its new location at 1010 Olive street, which is much larger than the old stand.

W. E. Burrows, who spent a few weeks at his old home in Peoria, Ill., returned Monday.

W. C. Smith will leave this week for a trip to his old home in Milwaukee. He will visit Detroit, Chicago and other points in the interest of his growing business.

The trustees of the Missouri Botanic Garden gave the sixteenth annual Shaw banquet at the Southern hotel last Saturday evening. Covers were laid for 140, the decorations being roses and asparagus. The menu card bore a picture of the late Henry Shaw, who provided in his will for this annual meeting. W. S. Chaplin, chancellor of Washington University, was toast-master. The speakers were Prof. Andrew F. West, Princeton University; Prof. F. W. Kelsey, University of Michigan; Prof. W. G. Hall, University of Chicago; Prof. R. M. Jesse and Prof. W. G. Manley, both of the University of Missouri.

The florist bowlers rolled two matches the past week and came out second best in both, although the boys rolled some extra big scores. The league season will end this month, when the boys will commence to make preparations for the Dayton convention. J. J. B.

DELAWARE, OHIO.

A brief message received by J. H. Cunningham, May 1, stated his son, Hal Cunningham, died very suddenly at Los Angeles, Cal. No mention of the cause or time of his death was made.

About four years ago Mr. Cunningham left Delaware and sought the mild climate of southern California in the hope of improving his health. He suffered with rheumatism and his spine was affected. He improved rapidly, and his sudden death, occurring at a time when he was supposed to be in good health, was a shock to his many friends in Delaware.

Mr. Cunningham was assistant cashier in the Delaware National Bank and he resigned that position shortly before his departure for California. Several years ago he married Miss Clo Van Trump of this city, who survives him.

He was a member of Hiram Lodge F. & A. M., B. P. O. E. and the Delaware Club.

Our bushes are in fine, healthy condition and we believe we shall have the best stock ever put on the market. We oversee our own packing and cull out poor, bad-foliaged buds. The illustration in this advertisement is 1-16 the real size of the buds. The flowers are waxy white, with a delightful fragrance, which is retained after shipping. The foliage is a dark, glossy green. They carry well to all parts of United States.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade in general has been somewhat quiet. Stock is abundant. Roses are coming in nicely, but most of them are weak-stemmed and not choice by any means. Nearly all of the stores are handling seeds and shrubbery in a small way. The stocks carried by the retailers who buy their flowers are not heavy, but the growers who have stores are of course carrying heavy supplies. Minneapolis seems to be favored by fakers, the street dealers in St. Paul doing little. Carnations are small, especially the home-grown stock; the warm weather is no doubt the cause of it. Trailing arbutus is handled quite extensively by the leading stores, also gardenias, which, from reports, sell very well. Spring openings the past week have called for quite a number of palm decorations.

Minneapolis.

Otto Will & Son are very busy putting up their new range of houses and will have one of the finest plants in this section.

Up to this season they have been growing only carnations and violets, but now intend to grow a complete line, which can be used to good advantage in this section.

Rice Bros. say that business is keeping up fairly well, but do not expect much in a wholesale way for some time. Decoration day will, no doubt, make a ripple, but that is only for one day.

The Rosary reports a fair trade, but nothing large. A good stock is always on hand and the place is prepared for a brisk demand at all times.

O. Swanson is doing very well and selling quite a number of the new rose, Minnehaha.

St. Paul.

The Swanson Floral Co. have had a neat window display in the shape of a large plateau filled with green sheet moss, in which there were about 200 blooms on long stems of the new rose, Minnehaha, which were artistically arranged by Gust Colberg. They report trade fair.

L. L. May & Co. say that business in the cut flower line is not heavy, but they are having a heavy retail seed trade.

C. F. Vogt says trade is only fair in cut flowers, but is well satisfied with shrubbery sales.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

The hail loss of Mr. Munson, of Denison, chronicled in last week's REVIEW, is covered by insurance, but Mr. Farley had no protection and has a total loss.

In sections where no hail fell everything is looking fine. Stock is selling at least as well as at any time this season. Carnations, where they have received the right kind of care, are doing finely, but some places show signs of going to pieces.

The bedding season is about over for the simple reason that the local stock is all planted. Another year will see a much larger amount grown.

The funeral trade is divided between the two firms in Sherman. Hannah & Son had some large orders the first of

The Market.

Business all along the line has been fine the past week, and prices good, everything being cleaned up nicely, except lilies, which have been going very slowly ever since Easter. Carnations are high in price and scarce in quantity, while roses are plentiful enough to fill all demands.

Various Notes.

There have been several changes among the different houses, the most important being that of Bate Bros., who have purchased the F. R. Williams Co. place on Eddy road, and will move their large plant from East Cleveland and build several new houses 25x300, and a large boiler house, so that when the place is rebuilt it will be up-to-date in every respect. Guy Bate will be in charge.

Mr. Myers has resigned his position as head grower for the Gasser Co., and expects to go into business for himself. He grew some of the finest roses ever sent in from that place.

The Essex Greenhouses are offering their stock of plants for sale, and expect to dispose of the houses in the near future.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

"Is it necessary to have such enormous quantities of flowers at certain seasons?"

"Yes, in order to be able to meet the demand during the short, dark days of winter."

The above question and answer are brought vividly to mind by the condition of the cut flower market today. Flowers are arriving in immense quantities, the demand is light and irregular and it is impossible to dispose of them at any think like good average prices. That is the situation in a nutshell.

To take the bright side, it might be added that lavender sweet peas are arriving in considerable quantities and bring a better price than any other color, indicating a fair demand. Lilacs are in, and great quantities of dogwood, both pink and white, are used in decorations. Of the other flowers, it can only be said that lilies sell worse than anything else, but there is a standing joke that Children's day is near, though nobody seems to know exactly what Children's day may be, beyond the belief that that day will come and on it children will use flowers, let us hope lilies. It is, however, a positive fact that on each Sunday in May some of the churches of one denomination have a children's festival at which flowers are largely used.

The real center of activity has been shifted from the great wholesale cut flower houses to the many greenhouses where box, basket and bedding plants are produced in quantity. Here the mart atmosphere pervades, and the proprietor and his principal assistants may be seen pencil in hand taking down the orders of the various visitors who want their homes or grounds beautified on or about May 10.

Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club was well attended. President Thomas B. Meehan presided. After routine business was transacted the question of increasing the dues from $3 to $6 a year was brought up, the idea being that with larger revenue the club could extend its usefulness. The objection to this amendment was that more money was not needed. The club was doing good work and giving its members good essays, discussions and sufficient amusement. After a lively debate the amendment was lost.

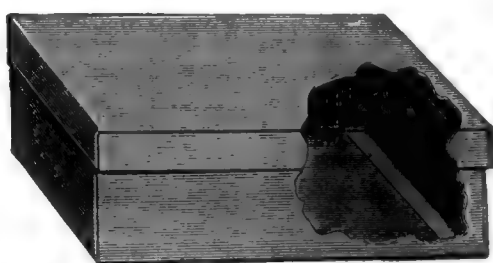

D. T. Connor's paper on greenhouse building brought out an interesting discussion. A. Farenwald advised building good houses to produce good paying crops. The question of relative expense of wood and iron construction was discussed by J. L. Dillon and D. T. Connor. Then Mr. Farenwald advocated using single-thick glass in 16x24-inch size, stating it was less expensive and almost as thick, the exact difference being given. Mr. Dillon opposed this idea, stating that he had once glazed a house with single-thick glass at the warm end and double-thick at the cold end. The warm end became so cold that the next summer he took out all the single-thick, replacing it with double-thick. He also found that hail broke single-thick glass, where double-thick escaped. W. K. agreed with Mr. Dillon, adding that his plate-glass house had proved the cheapest house on the place. The same amount of heat kept it 10 degrees warmer than any other house in zero weather. In eleven years there had been practically no breakage. Mr. Harris also said that it was a mistake to think small blisters in the glass would burn foliage some distance beneath. It is the irregular waves in the glass, the varying in thickness that causes the burns. Blisters usually focus too close to touch the foliage below.

Mr. Farenwald exhibited his three cups won in Boston, at the rose show. They were much admired.

Spring Bedding.

From a number of sources it was learned that more bulbs had been sold last season for outdoor bedding than ever before. It is very easy to say that sort of thing, and of course it is always true; but it is not always brought home to the notice of the average person so clearly as in this case. Parks, squares, cemeteries, private residences and 'umble homes have been beautified with hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, crocuses, snowballs and whatnot, to a wonderful extent. Everywhere you go bright colors are seen. It may be of interest to especially mention Independence square, with its patriotic red, white and blue hyacinths, and Horticultural hall, in Fairmount park, where the entire parterre, or sunken gardens, have been planted with bulbs, the center beds with tulips, usually one variety to a bed, and the festoons on each side with daffodils, making a waving effect indescribably

Berkowitz Helps Decorators.

Paul Berkowitz, known throughout the country as a member of the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., has a new adjustable plant stand intended to help the hard pressed decorators, whose resources are so seriously taxed by the many different requirements of small rooms, large halls and the intermediate stages. Through the courtesy of Mr. Berkowitz I am enabled to give a slight idea of this improved plant stand. It is made of gas-pipe, light, strong and easily adjustable. It can be set to hold a plant at anywhere from eighteen inches to four feet in height, and will hold anything from a 6-inch to a 10-inch pot, either upright or at any desired angle. The stand is supported by three legs, rubber tipped, which will prevent their doing damage on the most delicate carpet. The whole can be slipped into a very small compass, making it easily transportable.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The wholesale cut flower section would have been as quiet and solemn as a funeral if Totty and Bobby Schultz and Alex Burns had not drifted into town on Monday. They gave the market an exhilarating air, that lifted the gloom and made things seem better than they were. The two from Madison were breathing fire, and swore against the injustice of the express companies, which have raised the rate on empties to $1 a hundred, which is just a dollar more than has been the rule. It makes a lot of difference to the long-suffering growers and means the enlargement of the wagon and automobile express system. The companies are very independent about it.

Roses are very abundant and the slump in prices is severe. Few of the best Brides and Maids go above $4. Boxes are often taken, as they run at $1 a hundred. Thousands are disposed of at half that. Beauties seldom go above $15. The supply is now beyond any possible demand. Carnations hold their value well. Their quality was never better at this time of the year, and the best stock maintains the quoted figures easily. Callas have retrograded about fifty per cent.

A few violets still arrive, but the flavor has departed and only special orders make a market for them at all. May 15 will close the books for the season.

Southern stock, especially of lilac, is enormous. Much of it finds its way to the street merchants, and the avenues down-town in the shopping district look like moving flower gardens. Pansies and arbutus are used heavily by the street sellers. Soon these gentry will leave for the summer resorts and this very necessary outlet for the surplus will be greatly missed. These conditions will doubtless

D. T. Connor, who has evidently made up his mind to cover the entire eastern seaboard with glass structures, has contracted with Isaac Moss, of Baltimore, for two new houses each (I think) 26x 180 feet.

Mrs. Robert Kift is rendering invaluable aid in the book-keeping department of her husband's retail flower store at 1725 Chestnut street.

Gustavus B. Steinhauser markets the product of his Mercer street greenhouses at Ninth and Girard avenue.

Advices from abroad are that M. Rice has secured several novelties that will be shown in this country next season for the first time.

Eugene Bernheimer is closing at 7 p. m. during May. He has got up a striking pot of pansies as a friendly offering.

continue, as they have done for years, at this time, until the preparations for Decoration day begin. We are no worse off than in 1905.

Various Notes.

The trade extends sincere sympathy to C. W. Ward in the loss of his mother, near Pontiac, Mich., on April 21.

Samuel Kilpatrick, for ten years book-keeper for Walter Sheridan, has formed a partnership with Emile Runge in the real estate and insurance business at Flushing, L. I., and 149 Broadway, New York city. Mr. Sheridan's testimony is one any man may be proud of. In the ten years not once has he had occasion to criticise adversely the work of Mr. Kilpatrick. He was a great favorite and will be missed severely.

L. J. Kreshover has removed to 106 West Twenty-sixth street.

Fleischman has fully recovered from an operation for appendicitis and is back at his desk after only ten days' hospital experience.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week the annual exhibition of the New York Horticultural Society takes place in the Bronx Park Botanic Gardens.

Next Monday the New York Florists' Club's monthly meeting takes place at 7:30 p. m. A fine exhibit and a large attendance are anticipated.

The Kervan Co. has a novelty for florists in mounted heads of foxes, coons and fawns, from Florida.

Reed & Keller's latest novelty is a cycas leaf-holder, which is very useful. A patent has been applied for. They also have a double-angle pot-holder, which will be very helpful in decorations. Their new building next door is almost ready for occupancy.

Seligman and Levy make a strong team, and rapidly are building an extensive business.

It is the year for young men in floriculture. Rumors are heard of another combination, and yet there is room. Between marriages and partnerships and enterprises, these be strenuous days in the wholesale district.

John B. Nugent's only sister died April 29 and was buried May 1. Many beautiful floral tributes from his friends in the trade showed their universal sympathy.

S. Rodh reports the past year the best in his experience. Easter's call for ribbons was greater than ever. His headquarters on West Twenty-eighth street are very conveniently located.

Walter Sheridan is convalescing from a severe attack of the grip and is back at headquarters again.

Alex. Guttman cables his safe arrival in Europe after a pleasant voyage.

LeMoult, the veteran of the Bowery, directly opposite the approach to the new Williamsburg bridge, will have to vacate the old store before long. After a stay there of a generation a street is to be opened directly through his premises. He reports thirty-five per cent more business this year than in the best in his long career.

Not far away is the extensive establishment of John J. Foley, who has his own greenhouses at Madison. His album of floral designs is having a steady sale.

Von Praag, on Broadway, has just completed the outdoor decoration of the American Garden, a summer resort on Lennox avenue and One Hundred and Sixteenth street, and has a unique design in sod and stone in front of his store, with a border of pansies, the name being worked out in stone on the grass background, some of Ed Ladiges' handiwork.

O. V. Zangen has on exhibition in the fine store of M. Hendberg, Hoboken, a splendid specimen of Whitmani fern in a 10-inch pot with a spread of three to four feet. For thirty years Mr. Hendberg has occupied this store. Mr. Zangen has added this fern to his other interests and is selling a large number of this novelty.

B. J. Ezechel has his card out as wholesale florist with headquarters at 52 West Twenty-ninth street.

M. Bowe's windows were ablaze with a fine display of Cattleya Mossiae Monday evening that were very superior and effective. Business continues good here all the time and the European trip for the present is postponed.

Almost all the tenants in the Metropolitan hotel, Broadway, have removed except Thorley, who still holds the fort. As fine a vase of white chrysanthemums as ever graced any window in the height of the November season attracted much notice in his window on Monday evening.

H. E. Froment is handling an enormous quantity of roses daily. One of his prominent growers is building a house for American Beauties 65x250, so there will be no undersupply here next season.

street and will occupy both ground floor and basement, as well as retain his present quarters on Sixth avenue. The upper floors of his house will be made into offices. It was a good purchase and is already worth much more than when he secured it.

Max Limprecht is quite ill at his home in Jersey. There seems more than the usual complaint of grip, doubtless owing to the late season.

Summer seems some distance away yet and the nurserymen especially have much to be thankful for. The department stores have overdone the hardy rose business. Many of them have large quantities of their importations, dry and unsold. You can't fool all the people all the time. The suburbanites are getting their eye teeth cut and even the cleaning up at 25 cents a dozen doesn't move them.

The auctions are well patronized just now. A large number of ladies attend at the demonstrations of the handsome auctioneers on Fulton street. Good prices prevail. Some fine trees are offered at Cleary's, also other home-grown nursery stock.

There will soon be another removal or two from Thirtieth street. One of the wholesale stores on Twenty-eighth street upstairs has the seductive sign "to let" on its window.

State Vice-President William Siebrecht, of Astoria, is a good appointment by President Kasting and a popular one here.

Saltford is receiving some fine stock from his southern shippers.

Mr. Klein, lately with Julius Lang in his plant department, is now with Charles Millang.

James Hart grows happier daily because of his settlement in Twenty-eighth street. His business is fast increasing.

The outing is only eight weeks away. Time for every member of the New York Florists' Club to plan for it.

The Market.

No very striking changes have occurred in the market during the past week. Supply and demand have each been fairly good. Roses are holding their own, the better grades realizing good prices. Best Beauties go at $20 and $25 per hundred. A few Liberty and Richmond bring $15 and extra select Brides and Maids $6 and $8. These are top figures and the lowest grades clear out at $1 per hundred. A few Carnot and Kaiserin are arriving. There are some hybrids, but these are now a very small factor in the Boston market.

Carnations vary from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. A few double violets still arrive and realize 50 cents per hundred. Sweet peas at 50 cents to $1 are not too abundant. Some very good gladioli sell at $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Varieties are Snow White, Shakespeare, Augusta and May. There is a good supply of stocks, myosotis, candytuft, antirrhinums and other seasonable flowers. Indoor bulbous stock is over for the season. Outdoor narcissi bring $1 to $1.50 and tulips $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred. Valley remains about the same and there is no change in green goods.

Bedding plants now cut quite a little figure with many of the florists and the demand this season promises to be heavier than ever, at last year's prices.

Weekly Exhibition.

The first Saturday exhibition of the year was held May 5. Coming, as it does, at a very strenuous season, there were rather fewer exhibits than are sometimes seen, but the quality was very high class. For six calceolarias, distinct colors, James Stuart, gardener to George F. Fabyan, won first and second prizes with magnificent plants a yard in diameter. The same exhibitor was first and second for six distinct fancy pelargoniums. His plants were the best we have seen at any Boston show. His varieties, which were all good, were Alice Love, Duke of Portland, May Queen, Mme. Thibaut, Purity, H. M. Stanley, Bridegroom, Mabel, Lady Duff, Miss Henderson, Nellie Hayes and Mrs. Ashley.

Converse, showed well flowered plants of Cattleya Mendelii and Amaryllis Johnsoni.

W. C. Rust, gardener to Dr. C. G. Weld, had two magnificent specimens over four feet in diameter of Calceolaria Golden Gem. This is a plant which florists might profitably grow for Decoration day trade. The flowers stand well when cut and work in finely for bouquets. It is of the easiest possible culture.

For collection of narcissi, F. L. Ames estate, W. N. Craig gardener, secured first prize, showing over forty varieties. The collection also received a silver medal. W. J. Clemson, J. O. Kristenson gardener, took second prize. For forty-eight tulips W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, was first and third, and W. J. Clemson second.

For forty-eight pansies, the prizes went to Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, Mrs. E. M. Gill and J. B. Shurtleff.

Robert Cameron, from the Harvard Botanic Garden, had a large display of tulips, narcissi, Viola cornuta, phlox, primroses, alyssum and other early spring flowers. Displays also came from W. J. Clemson, W. Whitman and Mrs. E. M. Gili.

W. W. Rawson & Co. showed three narcissi described as hybrids between N. poeticus ornatus and the polyanthus narcissus under the name of N. poetaz. The varieties were Alsace, Triumph and Louise. The flowers were variable in size, some being as large as N. poeticus ornatus with more of the odor of polyanthus narcissi. The perianths were pure white and cups yellow with no trace of the scarlet as in N. ornatus. The plants were said to be quite hardy. An award of honorable mention was given with the desire that they be shown again.

W. N. Craig received a cultural certificate for a vase of Lilium candidum. There was a nice display of forced vegetables.

hall occurs on June 2, when rhododendrons will be the leading attraction.

E. O. Orpet will speak on "The Making of a Gardener" at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, on May 15. There will be other attractions and no member can afford to miss it. An invitation to hold a field day at the estate of Larz Anderson in Brookline during June has been received.

Some of the earlier lilacs are already coming into bloom. These and other flowering shrubs promise an unusually lavish display this season.

Splendid rains following a dry spell have given vegetation a much needed fillip. Carnation men welcomed it, especially. Peirce Bros., Wm. Nicholson and other large growers have finished putting out their stock in the fields.

William Stockwell was given a month's sentence at hard labor for stealing tulips from the Boston Public Gardens, and an added month for being inebriated at the same time, before the Boston municipal criminal court on May 4. A few more such salutary sentences would diminish garden robberies, which are usually numerous just prior to Memorial day.

Memorial day talk is now one of the chief topics. That the demand will be phenomenal admits of no question, and all are striving to secure sufficient stock to meet the coming calls.

CLEVELAND, O.—The J. M. Gasser Co. is cutting some very fine Gen. Mac-Arthur roses. The flowers are large, stems long and foliage heavy. The fragrance is an especial feature with this rose and Smith & Fettes say that it is the most popular variety with their best trade.

DE KALB, ILL.—J. L. Johnson has purchased the Ellwood greenhouses, about 6,000 feet of glass, and will move them out on his place east of town. He has twenty acres of land convenient to the city and expects to grow more or less nursery stock in connection with his flower business. He reports a good trade at his store.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—E. L. Kiley, of the Budd Park Greenhouses, St. John and Hardesty avenues, is making a trial of the Wittbold system of mechanical watering and is so well pleased that he expects to equip his whole place with the apparatus. He has a normal water pressure of ninety pounds to the square inch and it makes the water fairly fly. In fact, the hose connections will not stand the full pressure without damage to the hose. The pressure is much greater than is needed to make the sprinklers work successfully.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Fruit growers will have a plentiful crop this season, especially in plums and apples, providing we get no late frosts to nip the blossoms. There has never been a better show of blossoms. Fruit growing is being treated more and more scientifically and it is now an important item of agriculture. Apples for several years have paid the best. This has caused a good trade to be done in nursery trees, the nurserymen's stocks of all sizes being quite cleared.

Easter week in the cut flower and plant trade was very good, the best experienced for years.

London has lately been provided with a new fruit and flower market, a splendidly arranged market being opened at Brentford, on the west of London. Previously Brentford market was carried on in nothing more than an open space, and Covent Garden has for a long time been too crowded for the proper conduct of business.

New Plants.

I wrote you some time ago regarding a white vinca and will say it has come to stay. I have two plants in fine condition, planted on a solid bed, which have a dozen fine runners on each plant. They have not up to the present showed a trace of green or variegated leaf. They are as vigorous as Vinca variegata in every way.

A double frond sport from Scottii has made its appearance. The newcomer has made fine runners and young ferns have made their appearance on them, but are yet not large enough to speak about them. I will write you again regarding both plants as they grow in size.

assures a supply of hard coal for next season at practically the same prices paid the past year.

The action of the miners of anthracite seems likely to hasten the adjustment of the wage question in the bituminous fields, where many thousands of men are now on strike for increased pay. It is thought the miners in the west soon will see the folly of holding out for that which the men of the eastern fields have thought it unwise to try to secure. Market conditions also help to encourage the mine owners to resist the demands of the miners. Coal never was cheaper, all things considered. Nearly all the big consumers have supplied themselves with fuel in sufficient quantities to make it unnecessary to purchase coal for some

LATEST advices from the Quedlinburg and Erfurt seed-growing districts in Germany are to the effect that more favorable weather conditions have given seed crops a normal prospect.

THROUGHOUT the onion growing section of Ohio reports indicate that the growers are having trouble to get their fields planted. Wet weather keeps the ground in poor shape for working.

A SCARCITY of early cabbage plants is developing. At the centers where plants are usually to be had in large quantities the growers are calling upon other sections to supply them.

A NEW red cabbage is shortly to be introduced by Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., Copenhagen. It is called Danish Stonehead and is said to be a very distinct strain and a great improvement on red cabbages.

THE May frosts that the wise ones have been predicting have arrived. Reports from many of the gardening sections throughout the west state that considerable damage has been done to beans and other tender vegetables. It is reported that a very large quantity of tomato plants have been frozen.

CHICAGO:—There is yet quite an acreage remaining unplanted in the northern onion set district. Unfavorable weather has kept operations back. If the seed is not in the ground by May 15 it will be too late to mature a good crop. Three-fourths of the usual acreage, however, is planted, and many of the fields are far enough along to permit cultivating with the wheel hoe.

CONGRESSMAN GAINES, of the Nashville, Tenn., district, admits that the government trust-busters have no evidence of an illegal combination of seedsmen, but he has heard that there are two associations of seedsmen and is afraid that without the congressional free seed distribution we should soon have a real rascally, rapacious, ruthless, relentless seed octopus oppressing the dear, defenseless farmer!

FREE SEEDS.

In the due course of events the lower house of Congress, having by a vote of 153 to 58 adopted Lamb's amendment providing for $242,920 for free seeds, passed the agricultural appropriation bill as amended. The bill carries a total of $7,481,440.

There is one slight chance that the appropriation may yet be defeated. The Senate Committee on Agriculture, of which Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, is chairman, has granted a hearing on free seeds, to be held May 11 at 10:30 a. m., at which a number of seedsmen from Philadelphia, New York and other nearby cities will endeavor to show why the Senate should cut out the appropriation for the seed distribution. It will help to have those not able to be present send a telegram. It may be addressed to Senator Proctor at the capitol or to Wm. W. Smith, 301 Munsey building, Washington representative of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, who will present it to the committee.

WHO'S WHO?

A leading seedsman writes: "We note that the House of Representatives at Washington has amended the agricultural appropriation bill to again provide for the free seed distribution, and we wish, when it comes up in the House for final passage, that you would publish for future reference the members' votes on the bill in order that we may know where they stand. If they stand against it after the tremendous amount of agitation, we shall know exactly what it means."

The REVIEW regrets that its esteemed contemporary, the Congressional Record, has scored a beat on us in the matter of publishing this information. As the table showing the vote would occupy nearly a page of the REVIEW we must refer any seedsman who wishes to make it a personal matter with his congressman to the pages of the Record. If you do not care to ask your congressman for a copy, send 8 cents (not postage stamps) to Chas. A. Stillings, Public Printer, Washington, for the Congressional Record of May 2. The vote is set forth on pages 6344 and 6345.

The members were put on record by Congressman J. W. Wadsworth, of New York, who demanded a separate vote on the paragraph providing for free seeds. It stood: Yeas, 153; nays, 83; answering "present," 10; not voting, 135; paired, 104, 52 for and 52 against. To be of value the publication of the entire matter would be necessary.

MONUMENTAL.

W. Atlee Burpee and the other Philadelphia seedsmen have many friends in the newspaper offices of that town; in no other city has so much notice been taken of the action of Congress in the matter of free seeds. The Public Ledger devotes an editorial column to the reasons why Congress should have acted differently, concluding as follows:

"The decision to retain the old plan was hailed with joy by many clerks strongly attached to their salaries, by tradesmen furnishing the paper bags, by the experts who won't let a pea go forth unless it has the symmetry fitting it to be used in little Johnny's blow-gun, and by the congressmen who want to keep in touch with the folks at home. It was also a victory for the eloquent John Wesley Gaines, already immortalized in the lines beginning:

"The mere fact that the money expended for seed distribution is an absolute waste might be considered, but economy is a detail, and this is a day of big things."

CALIFORNIA SEED CROPS.

Chas. P. Braslan, of the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal., writes:

"The seed crops were uninjured by the earthquake. The outlook for a seed crop is better than it has been for two or three years past. The only crop that is suffering is that of the onion: it has some mildew on it at the present time. How serious this will prove we cannot tell at this writing. None of the seed growers was injured in the recent disaster. All the seed houses which were burned out in San Francisco are making rapid progress and re-establishing their business in that dear old city."

OUR VIEW.

Upon receipt of information that the Senate Committee on Agriculture would grant a hearing on the appropriation for free seeds the following letter was addressed to the chairman, Senator Redfield Proctor:

Dear Sir:—We are deeply interested in the subject of congressional free seeds. You are familiar with the many arguments against the seed distribution. We believe the only argument in its favor is the necessity for the repair of the fences of the bucolic statesmen. If this forever must be done at public expense, we submit that it is time some other article

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The sweet pea stocks are considerably cleaned up. The National Sweet Pea Society has done much to foster the growing of sweet peas, and the show on July 5 may be expected to be the largest and finest of its kind yet seen.

For a long time leading English seedsmen have endeavored to obtain, chiefly by selection, a strain of blue lobelia which from seed will come up to the required compact habit such as is seen in plants raised from cuttings taken from selected plants. Previously those obtained from seed were very straggly in growth and uneven in bloom, with scarcely any semblance to the bushy little blue tufts obtained from cuttings, but I think the special strains of one or two of our leading houses may now be freely used in preference to cuttings, as they appear to have reached the perfection of form required in a bedding lobelia. I saw a batch of 150,000 seedlings and fully ninety-five per cent were perfect in form.

The reported shortage of Victoria aster seed does not seem to have caused inconvenience. Many seedsmen bought small quantities because of high prices, but have had no difficulty in persuading customers to take other varieties to fill the shortage.

BONE MEAL AND LIME.

Experiments which have been carried out with bone meal in comparison with other phosphatic manures have frequently shown that the action of the phosphoric acid in bone meal is as a rule less than it is when in the form of superphosphate, although in many instances the reverse has been found to be the case in actual practice.

It was pointed out in 1900 by Kellner and Böttcher that the experiments which gave results unfavorable to bone meal were made either on soils which were naturally strongly calcareous or on those to which carbonate of lime had been added. They found, in fact, that the effect of bone meal was much less on calcareous soils, or on soils manured with lime, than on unlimed soils, and that the manurial action of the phosphoric acid in bone meal depended very largely on the lime content of the soil. After attention had been directed to this point, pot experiments were carried out, which gave results favorable to bone meal.—Gardeners' Magazine.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—W. E. King reports that all local greenhouses passed through the earthquake without damage. He was in San Francisco during the earthquake of 1868 and believes it to have been fully as heavy as this one. But it was not the same city in those days.

THE FRISCO PICTURES.

The first picture, taken especially for the REVIEW by its San Francisco correspondent, shows the locations of the principal flower stores of San Francisco prior to April 18. There is little but ashes there now. In the area shown were Pelicano & Co., Podesta & Baldocchi, Sievers & Boland, Stevenson, Frank Shibeley, the Shanahan Floral Co. and half a dozen others not so widely known. The large building is the shell of the splendid Fairmount hotel; nearer is the J. F. Flood residence.

The other picture shows the way what remains of the population have since subsisted. It is the bread line. Rich and poor alike have had to subsist on the food distributed by the authorities, for during many days there was no other food in San Francisco, even if one had money to pay.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Really there is no market, and not liable to be anything in that line for quite a while. There is not a first-class flower store in town. A few small places in the neighborhood of the cemeteries and probably a dozen peddlers on the streets is all I have to chronicle for San Francisco's trade for the past week. The destruction along all lines was so complete and the dealers so thoroughly wiped out in a business way, that none has quite recovered enough to attempt to restore anything like a retail store. The people seem to be dazed and everyone who is able is trying to get out of town.

A few of the retailers have moved over to Oakland and there is some talk that they will open in that town, but there are already enough there to handle all the trade, which is not over half of its usual volume. Nobody wants flowers in these troublous times. All the banks are closed temporarily; they as yet dare not open their vaults, so money is a scarce article. The Oakland banks, after remaining closed a week, are now paying depositors small sums to tide over existing difficulties.

Everything depends on how soon the insurance companies will begin to pay losses. There is probably about $125,000,000 to be distributed within the next few months to help cover losses estimated at about $275,000,000. From what I am able to learn, although the florists assisted in swelling the total amount of the fire loss, they were not fortunate in being well insured, as a rule, so whatever benefits are derived from the companies will reach them only indirectly.

I do not see how it will be possible for the retailers to get back much of their trade for two years at least, and it will be much longer before we have anything like the business enjoyed up to April 18. Many are going into other lines of work and several have departed for more prosperous localities.

With the growers it is really worse, as their expenses continue indefinitely, with absolutely no chance to sell anything and collections impossible. Of course, there is a shipping trade, but it is always light at this time and not over five per cent of the stock is used up in this way. Some of our largest growers have discharged their help, in some cases as many as fifty men, and let their carnations and roses dry up, merely keeping a caretaker on the premises. Other growers are staying with their houses determinedly and hoping that something may turn up to throw a little light on the situation, but with everyone the events of the past three weeks are like a horrible nightmare.

Various Notes.

Domoto Bros. have temporarily stopped the construction of their range of new glass. The conditions are such that at present it is impossible to get sufficient glass to continue with the work.

Chas. Stappenbach, having lost his store on Polk street, will reopen at his residence on Sutter street in a few days.

Schwerin Bros. have discharged most of their help, keeping only enough men at work to keep their stock alive.

Chiappari & Baldocchi lost the hotel property recently acquired by them on Where Frisco's Best Flower Stores Once Stood.

Bush street. They refused an offer of $80,000 for the ground and building a few weeks ago.

Sievers & Boland have opened temporary quarters at their nurseries on Van Ness avenue, which luckily escaped the general conflagration.

John Young, of the Dwight Way Nurseries, Berkeley, has re-leased the property used by him for many years for a further term of three years.

A. Rossi, of Rossi Bros., was united in marriage with Miss Louise Ferroggiaro on April 26. He will make a trip to Europe on his honeymoon.

The Cox Seed Co. has opened a temporary office at 108 Cole street. They will handle the bulk of their seeds from their Oakland warehouse.

The camping of 50,000 refugees in Golden Gate park has played sad havoc with the park.

A. Mann, Jr., has opened temporary quarters at 2041 Pine street.

Frank Pelicano can be found at his nursery on Mission road, near the five-mile house.

One of the results of the recent fire is to cause a great scarcity of florists' moss, several large lots of it being burned up in San Francisco. All the surrounding towns get their supplies here.

John Martin, of Ross Station, has purchased the Park Fellow's collection of orchids and removed them to his new orchid houses.

The California Evergreen Co. has opened at Thirty-fourth and Telegraph avenue, Oakland.

It is estimated that over 1,000 men and women are thrown out of employment by the temporary ending of San Francisco's flower trade.

An absolute want of demand for all kinds of colored flowers has put the price of such stock at anything a purchaser will offer. American Beauty roses can be had anywhere at 25 cents per dozen, and carnations of fancy varieties at 5 cents to 10 cents per dozen. There is a slight sale for funeral flowers, that is all.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Just a few lines to let you know we all escaped the "trembles" but that we are up against it in a business way, especially with our place at Fruitvale, Cal. Over forty flower stores were

PACIFIC COAST TOURS

A new booklet just issued under this title should be in the hands of every person who expects to make a trip west of the Rockies this year.

It outlines all the routes to the Coast, shows maps of each, contains a large map of the country from the Great Lakes to the Coast and has a great deal of valuable information about side trips, interesting sights, etc.

The booklet is finely printed and handsomely illustrated. Its use will save you the trouble of getting and combining the separate booklets of the many different roads reaching the Pacific.

burned in San Francisco, which was our market, and all the greenhouses might as well have burned for all the business we can do. Frisco as we knew it is no more. Refugees to the number of a thousand a day are arriving at Portland, carried free by the Southern Pacific. (Harriman isn't such a bad fellow after all.) The fire put business, at least the flower business, "on the bum" all along the coast, including Portland.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held May 5, President Carlquist in the chair. This was an institute, held in connection with the Housatonic Agricultural Society, and their president, F. W. Heath, introduced Dr. B. L. Hartwell, of the Rhode Island Experiment Station, as speaker of the evening. Dr. Hartwell gave a very instructive lecture on "How Plants Grow." He explained from large charts the chemical structure of the leaves, stems and roots of plants, and also explained the various experiments that they are making at Kingston, R. I. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions of condolence to be sent to the wife of our esteemed and active member, the late Wm. Wood. G. F.

I WOULD like to congratulate you on the phenomenal results obtained from my advertisement. I have sold several hundred thousand Asparagus plumosus nanus seeds. The REVIEW surely does the work.—F. GILMAN TAYLOR, Glendale, Cal.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

THE imports of trees and plants through the port of New York last week were valued at $19,321.

THE season is over in the southwest and nurserymen are preparing for fall and the spring of 1907 with much larger acreages than usual.

IN the Boston district the Bay State Nurseries, Blue Hill Nurseries, J. W. Manning and other local nurserymen are experiencing the most remarkable call for trees and shrubs in their history. The call for evergreens is unprecedented.

THE Texas Spencer Seedless Apple Co., of El Paso, was incorporated May 1 with authorized capital stock of $100,000; purpose, to grow, propagate and sell Spencer seedless apples. The incorporators are Albert Jeffries, John W. Fisher, Oliver M. Fairchild and Samuel H. Fairchild.

A DEAL was closed at Davenport, Ia., April 30, whereby the old Nichols & Lorton nursery, probably the oldest in Scott county, was sold to Harry Bryant and Adolph Arp, and the farm whereon it is located leased to Messrs. Bryant and Arp for fifteen years. Mr. Arp is superintendent of the Davenport park system.

P. M. KOSTER, of Koster & Co., Boskoop, Holland, has been in Chicago several days the past week. He reports good business, in fact among the best he has ever enjoyed. When Mr. Koster began his annual trips to America there were only two others coming, but this year there were fifteen nurserymen from Boskoop alone.

DEATH was the alternative for Charles S. Greening, president of the Greening Bros. Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich., if he did not deposit $1,000 in a certain hiding place for plotters who wrote him the threatening letters. Twice Mr. Greening notified the officers of the game and went through all the maneuvers laid down by the blackmailers, but both times the fellows slipped away unseen.

L. A. GOODMAN, president of the American Pomological Society and secretary of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, asserts that the survival of twenty per cent of the peach buds is sufficient for a full crop of peaches, and says that in all parts of Missouri a greater proportion of buds escaped the rigors of winter, the damage being greatest in the southwestern part of the state.

THE DALLAS MEETING.

Further addresses have been arranged on part of the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at Dallas, Texas, June 13 to 15, as follows:

"A Uniform Standard of Grading Nursery Stock, and Its Adoption," by C. J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; "Ornamentals, Their Increasing Importance, Propagation, etc.," by J. Wilkinson Elliott, Pittsburg; "Commercial Fertilizers for Trees," by W. F. Heikes, Huntsville, Ala.; "Storing Nursery Stock, Dampness, Temperature, Packing, etc.," by Wm. Pitkin, Rochester.

A fruit banquet, similar to the one so successful last year, is planned.

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN MEET

The Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association was organized at Nashville May 2. Three sessions of the members, who numbered about fifty, were held. It was made one of the by-laws that the annual convention be held in Nashville each year on the day following the convention of the State Horticultural Society. Leading nurserymen were elected officers, as follows: J. C. Hale, of Winchester, president; Thomas Brazelton, of Winchester, vice-president; A. J. Smith, of Knoxville; Sam Byrns, of Silvia, and H. L. Nicholson, of Winchester, vice-presidents for east, west and middle Tennessee, respectively, and J. M. Bentley, of Knoxville, secretary and treasurer.

The grading of nursery stock was the principal subject discussed at the first session, several addresses being made, with a general discussion following. W. F. Heikes, of Huntsville, Ala., was present and participated. Other addresses were: "Tennessee Nursery Interests," by J. C. Hale, of Winchester; "Needs of Tennessee Nurseries," by Sam Fowler, of Clinton, and by Thomas Brazelton, of Winchester, and "History of the Nursery Business in Tennessee," by John Shadow, of Winchester.

The principal feature of the afternoon session was the address of Prof. H.

A. Morgan, of the State University, on the injury of fruits by insects, illustrated with stereopticon views.

Another important feature was a general discussion as to the grafting of fruit trees by the whole root and half root processes. The ubiquitous agent also came in for discussion, along with the other troubles.

"Our Relation to the National Nurserymen's Association" was the subject of an address by A. I. Smith, of Knoxville; G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville, spoke of "Nursery Inspection in Tennessee." The session was concluded with an address by James Morton, of Clarksville, on the subject, "Greenhouse Interests."

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

In the case of D. T. McCarthy & Sons against the H. S. Taylor Nursery Co., of Rochester, Justice Lambert, at Lockport, N. Y., directed a verdict for the defendant. This is one of the peculiar cases arising under our incorporation law. Two Taylor brothers had for years conducted a nursery near Rochester under the name of H. S. Taylor & Co. In 1893 they, with one J. Frank Norris, organized a corporation by name the H. S. Taylor Nursery Co. It was undisputed that one of the Taylors came to the plaintiffs and bought trees. Failing to get their pay they sued the corporation, and it defended on the ground that the sale was made to the Taylor brothers as a firm and not to the incorporated company. The court upheld the contention that the action had been brought against the wrong concern.

Florists' Review

When Writing Advertisers.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Some fourteen years ago I began the growing of carnations, and especially of seedlings, more as a pleasant occupation from which I derived considerable recreation and relief from business cares and worries. In a few years the results attained in my work proved so encouraging that I began the introduction of such new varieties as proved commercially successful and had received the approval of the retail florists of New York City.

This was done in the belief that the dissemination of the best results of my labors among the craft would prove beneficial and profitable to our carnation brethren. During the past two years I have become aware that more or less loss has been incurred by many in the trade who have purchased new varieties, either of others or of my origination, and I have been subject to more or less unjust criticism from certain quarters.

While I have been unusually careful about keeping records as well as conservative in the descriptions of the varieties sent out I am convinced that no amount of care on my part will insure a certain proportion of growers to successfully cultivate the new varieties which I might introduce, and as the introduction of new sorts has always been done at a monetary sacrifice I have decided to cease the active production of carnation plants and cuttings for sale as well as the introduction of new varieties, and from this onward the resources of the Cottage Gardens Carnation Department will be devoted to growing carnations exclusively for cut blooms.

I desire to take this opportunity to express my extreme gratitude to those who have shown a friendly interest in my work and who have contributed to what little success I have attained by cheering me onward with words of genuine appreciation, and to assure those friendly spirits who are above carping criticism that so long as I continue to labor for the advancement of the divine flower they will still be welcomed to the COTTAGE GARDENS as they have been in the past.

The Market.

Trade was very brisk the past week and supplies abundant. Both roses and carnations were plentiful, but cleaned out well and at good figures for this season of the year. The cold weather setting in Saturday shortened the supplies the past few days and prices stiffened considerably. The range of prices for carnations was from $1.50 to $3; roses, $4 to $6 for good shipping stock and $1 to $2 for shorts. Violets are now out of the market. Some good sweet peas, valley and mignonette are coming in, but the supply of lilies is on the wane.

Various Notes.

Bedding plants are now beginning to move and considerable of this stock is being grown here.

Growers are now busy planting out carnations.

We lost a member of the craft in the death of Hans Bartels, who died May 1. Mr. Bartels was 48 years old and had resided in Milwaukee for a good many years, being engaged in the florists' business on Teutonia avenue for about fifteen years, growing a general line of plants. He was a member of the Milwaukee Florists' Club. His business will be carried on by his wife and daughter.

Some of the Chicago bowlers are expected up Friday.

INCOG.

Park Commissioner.

Daniel Erdmann, president of the park board, has been notified by Mayor Becker that he will be reappointed park commissioner for the south side when his term expires on June 1. The only other man mentioned in connection with the position has been C. C. Pollworth, whose friends have urged him to be a candidate for the office. It was argued that Mr. Pollworth, as a practical florist, would make a valuable member of the board. Mr. Pollworth, however, declined to make an active campaign for the appointment.

Some People have taken our advice as published in these columns recently and are buying My Maryland for trial. We reiterate here—if it succeeds with you as it does with us, it will prove the best white carnation you ever grew. Despite the variety's apparent failure in several places, we strongly advise all growers to give it a trial. We have been frank about its faults as developed in other places. We doubt if these will develop in many places.

Jessica we believe, will succeed generally and will prove to be the best red and white variegated ever disseminated. Few varieties show as strong constitution as this one does and it is a wonderful producer. Extra fine stock of both varieties ready now. R. O., $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The past week was one of the kind that worries the wholesalers, stock of all kinds raining on them in such quantities that they were swamped every day until Saturday, when most stock cleaned up pretty well, but the week's results will probably be very unsatisfactory to the growers. To get rid of it, stock was sold at ridiculously low prices. The retail shops were not in any better shape, especially those growing part of their own stock, for they were loaded to the guards.

Various Notes.

The Blind boys had a bad half hour May 2, when they had a heavy hail storm which entirely stripped the trees and shrubbery of all the young leaves and blossoms, also cutting to pieces beds of tulips, which were in their glory, and breaking all the glass in the hotbeds. However, the greenhouses escaped without the loss of a single light. The hail was quite large and so much of it that you could take it up in shovels a half hour after the storm. The same storm passed over Bakerstown and the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. say it was the heaviest rain they ever saw but there was no hail with it.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. had its first peonies Saturday.

J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, has just completed a number of changes in his store, having put in a new front and rearranged and decorated the interior. His cut flower trade has grown so that it is crowding out some of the side lines which he formerly carried.

The South View Floral Co. has been held back some on account of the weather, which prevented completing the grading, but is rushing things now. Twenty carpenters are at work getting the houses ready for planting. Mr. Fischer is working almost day and night.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday night. The subject for discussion was bedding plants. The meeting was a very interesting one and should have been better attended, but it is hard to get the boys into the city when there is so much spring work on hand. Hoo-Hoo.

HERE is another dollar; we cannot get along without the REVIEW.—C. E. MANSFIELD, Fitchburg, Mass.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business was somewhat quiet the past week, but one or two days there was a good clean-up on account of funerals. Friday was particularly a quiet day on account of the storm.

The receipts of long Beauties are not so heavy as they were, but still abundant enough to go around, and prices are a shade lower. Bride and Maid are still plentiful and the most critical buyer can be pleased as to quality. There is quite a supply of Chatenay and they also are of superb quality. There is also a fine crop of Liberty and Richmond in all grades. The receipts of carnations are somewhat lighter, but there is still an abundant supply for all and prices are lower.

There are abundant supplies of sweet peas of fine quality at 50 cents per hundred, with a promise of lower prices soon. There still are a few tulips in the market and a comparatively large supply of daisies, both of which sell well. Violets are almost out of the running.

Various Notes.

E. J. Reynolds, of the Scott Floral Co., left Tuesday for a month's vacation, spending it in New York and New Jersey.

J. A. Valentine has been appointed by President Kasting to serve as state vice-president for Colorado for the year 1906.

Michelia Magnificens came from the Colgates and J. Crosby Brown, carnations from Col. H. A. Potter and Chas. Hathaway, roses from Col. H. A. Potter and J. WASHINGTON.

On the evening of May 7, the parlors of the Arlington hotel were handsomely decorated for a reception to Speaker Cannon in honor of his seventieth birthday. The hosts were his "boys" of the House of Representatives, republicans and democrats joining hands to honor the grand old man.

The first floor of the Arlington was practically given over to this event, but the most elaborate decorations were in the large double parlors, where the reception was held. The Speaker stood in front of a beautiful model of the Capitol, that part of the room being darkened, thus giving fine effect to the illumination of the model. The grounds were represented by many fine foliage plants. The entire side of the room was a bank of American Beauty roses and white spring blossoms, in the center being a Roman wreath, with red, white and blue ribbons, bearing inscriptions.

The outer parlor was decorated with carnations and smilax over the entrance and banks of crotons and other foliage plants in every available spot.

The decorations representing the Capitol were planned by Elliott Woods, superintendent of the Capitol and grounds. The cut flower work was by J. H. Small & Sons. SCOTTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

For the past fortnight a very fine business has been done in all lines. Our florists have been more than surprised at the flow of orders that each day has brought. Funeral flowers have been in urgent demand. Of course prices at both wholesale and retail have softened a little, as is expected at this season of the year. There are large quantities of lilac coming in, and this outdoor stuff will from now on appear in daily increasing quantities. Taken as a whole the florists were never doing better than they are at present.

If our florists have been busy, what shall I say about the business the seedsmen have been doing? It has been years since such an elegant month of trade has been done as during April. I doubt very much if any more could have been done—to the limit of endurance every man and boy worked, early and late.

The past week saw the beginning of the retail bedding plant trade. As usual geraniums, salvias, coleus, etc., cover the average needs; prices the same as in past seasons.

At the Florists' Club very little is doing, as no one has time for anything but work. The bowling club has religiously met every Thursday evening at the alleys of the Y. M. C. A. and practiced hard. All the craft are looking forward with the greatest pleasure to the Dayton convention, and there is no question that from here the attendance will be very large. ZERO.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held at Peter Murray's greenhouse, Fairhaven, Monday evening, May 7. All had a very pleasant time.

Mr. Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., made us a call last week. As usual he had a novelty. This time it was the Japanese au plant. He placed them in the leading stores and they are making a great hit. A novelty always pays. F. C. C.

THE BEE IS LIKE THE

Prosperous Florist
NEVER IDLE

The bee is the first that takes advantage of the great work Godfrey Aschmann, the never-resting florist and his people have done since Easter. They are swarming and enjoying their life. "O, Aschmann's flowers taste so sweet," the bees say, "we cannot stop, we have a big field to work in. 100,000 of the choicest plants every nook and corner full. Let us harvest."

WATCH! BE CAREFUL.

Don't buy morning glories for Moonvines. Moonvines a specialty. We grow only the best, A. W. Smith's hybrid Ipomoea Noctiflora for which we have had a world-wide reputation for the past 15 years. We ship about 26,000 every spring (especially May), to every city in the States and Canada. This moonvine is much earlier than any other moonvine in existence, flowers pure white, waxy, fragrant and as big as a saucer:

The Market.

Business is very poor. The demand has subsided until it amounts to almost nothing. While a few of the retailers report a fair business, yet by far the majority say that it could scarcely be worse, even in the middle of summer. The cause of this slump is hard to figure out, there being no special reason why business should go all to pieces at this time of the year. Another fact which made the slump doubly unfortunate is that there was a large glut on at the same time. Both roses and carnations are coming in by the thousands and they are being sold, in many cases, for almost nothing to save throwing them on the dump. Even the extremely low prices at which the stock was offered did not tend to clean up the market and there has been considerable waste. How long this state of affairs will be with us is hard to say, but it is to be hoped that it will not last long. From the present outlook we will see the last of it this week.

Sweet peas are plentiful and the demand for them is good, all things considered. The price has dropped to 50 cents per hundred for the best. Lilies of all kinds are still coming in good lots and sell pretty well. Outdoor valley is being sent in also and sells fairly well. Iris is coming in large quantities, but lilac and snowballs are about over.

Various Notes.

The season for outdoor bedding is on in full blast and all the florists who do this kind of work are heels over head in it. The demand this year is at least as heavy as usual and the prospects are that there will be no surplus of stock. A pretty heavy frost occurred May 6.

The Florists' Society meeting will be held Saturday, May 12, and there will doubtless be a large number present, owing to the several subjects of special interest which will be discussed.

W. E. Hall, of Clyde, O., is sending some of the best carnations which are being received in the market at present. His seedling red, E. G. Gillett, is in fine shape and sells at sight, even in this time of a bad glut. The retailers give a very good report of its keeping qualities.

Walter Grey came to town last Thursday with a seedling rose of which he thinks a great deal. It originated four years ago, from a cross of Beauty and Kaiserin. It closely resembles Beauty in stem, foliage and bloom, but there are several points of difference in these. The color is a beautiful shade of pink, identical with that of Lawson when well grown. Mr. Grey says that this color does not fade. He also states that it is a very good bloomer. Judged from all sides the rose appears to be a good thing and it is very likely that it will be heard from in the future.

It is fine, like flour, no waste, and odorless. Just the thing for the lawn, garden, plants and shrubbery, and, in fact, any soil you put it on will give you good results. INSECTICIDES.

Haslam's Insect Powder, an infallible insecticide. Destroys insects injurious to house and garden plants, shrubs, trees, vines, potatoes, melons, cabbage, currants, and vegetables and fruits of all kinds.

This preparation, though poisonous to insects, does not injure the foliage. It is used either by dusting or in water by spraying. Also destroys lice on fowls, cattle and dogs. Kills green fly on roses and other flowers, insects on quinces and pears. Insects that fly like flea beetles and rose bugs are more difficult to contend against than are caterpillars or slugs. Look often and dust or sprinkle when necessary.

Put up in 1-lb. boxes at 25c; 5 boxes for $1.00. Special prices in bulk.

Haslam Chemical Co., 118 Cliff St., Scranton, Pa.

Sprinkle it freely about stables, kennels, cow sheds, pig sties, poultry houses, rabbit hutches, farm-yards, market places, factories, urinals, ash bins, etc. For disinfecting walls, ceilings, cattle trucks, and slaughter-houses, make the powder into a wash or milk by admixture with water and apply it in that form.

This is the purest and has the most strength of any lime made. Sure death to vermin and insects and superior to chloride of lime. No odor. Put up in bulk at 10c per lb.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Generally speaking the cut flower market has been in pretty good shape the past two weeks. The warm, bright days have brought out in quantity all kinds of flowers. A good many more roses are coming in than can be used from day to day. The tendency of everything last week was for lower prices. There has been little trouble in keeping the wholesale house clear of carnations. White has been in greatest demand and some days there is a shortage. With the increase of glass put up in the spring of 1905 there are less carnations being cut this spring than last.

The market is much over-stocked with first-class Harrisii; in fact, the quality is much better than could be had at Easter. Callas also are over-plentiful. Other bulb stock is pretty well done for. Lilac is in large supply and sells well, the large white variety going best. Smilax and asparagus are in brisk demand, with the supply short.

Violets are done for. Sweet peas are more plentiful and outside valley can be had in quantity.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Gardeners' Club it was unanimously decided to hold a fall flower show. Four years have passed since we held the last show to which an admission was charged. A guarantee fund of ample proportions was promptly subscribed and a competent committee appointed to push the enterprise to a successful conclusion. Fred Michell and G. C. Watson, of Philadelphia, who happened to be present at this meeting, spoke encouraging words as to the benefit of a show to the trade in general. President William Lehr appointed the following committee: George Morrison, Fred C. Bauer, J. J. Perry, James Glass and Albert G. Fiedler.

The question box brought out the most interesting discussion of the evening: "Who has the best of it, the retailer or the grower?" After an hour of spirited debate, the general opinion seemed to be in favor of the growers, especially the one making a specialty of what he can grow best. A. F.

The Market.

Business has been dull the past few weeks. Good tea roses are plentiful but Beauties are seldom available in this market. There seem to be just about enough carnations to meet the demand, but the general run of stock is poor, especially Lawson. Plenty of good outdoor hyacinths and tulips are seen. Elegant pink and white sweet peas are displacing violets. The peas bring 75 cents to $1 per hundred.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held May 2. There being no special subject for the evening, a discussion on shrubbery and trees for our parks and boulevards was participated in by all present. Superintendent Wm. Dilger said that any suggestion toward the improvement of the parks would be much appreciated.

The question, "Would it not be advisable for the retailers to maintain a list and exchange the names of undesirable customers?" resulted in the appointment of a committee of two, Wm. Brown and J. F. Sullivan, to wait upon the retailers and get their views on that subject. It was also deemed advisable by several members to abolish the commission, given undertakers. This question will also be discussed by the storemen.

The entertainment committee having decided on Belle Isle as the most suitable place for holding the club's annual outing, a motion to that effect was made and supported; this outing to take place some day the second week in July.

Various Notes.

Albert Pochelon, whom most people call L. Bomb, requests that hereafter he be called by his right name only, namely, A. Pochelon.

Robert Watson has invested in a new delivery wagon.

Walter Taepke has been on the sick list.

Louis Rush has been in the woods of northern Michigan gathering sheet moss.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Searles Bros., market gardeners, are planning the erection of an addition to their present greenhouse which will cost between $75,000 and $100,000. The improvement will cover five acres and will give Searles Bros. one of the largest greenhouses in the middle west. When the addition is joined to their present building they will have eight acres under glass.

Searles Bros. make a specialty of lettuce and nutmeg melons, the former being produced entirely in the greenhouses and the latter getting the start there and then transplanted to the open air. Some years they produce as many as forty acres of melons, being the largest growers of these in this part of the country.

The new greenhouses will of course necessitate the erection of a new heating plant. Several boilers are to be installed and a new stack 100 feet high is to be built. The property adjoins the Toledo & Indiana electric road and a switch has been built into the plant to supply coal for the boilers.

Searles Bros. recently purchased the property adjoining theirs for $500 per acre. This is the highest price ever paid for land so far away from the center of the city.

John Meyer, who is engaged in the same business as Searles Bros., and whose property is located on Dorr street in the same neighborhood, is also planning large greenhouses. Mr. Meyer has heretofore devoted his attention to outside gardening, but is going into the greenhouse business and will grow lettuce. His new plant will cost over $25,000 and will be completed this summer.

THIS IS AN AGE

of specialists. An age when expert knowledge is demanded. The time when "well enough" won't do, it must be top notch of efficiency, whether it's a patent plant sprayer or a greenhouse. You can't grow plants to compete at a profit with your opponent who has an up-to-date scientifically planned, skillfully erected house, when your house is by its very construction, a shade trap, its heating plant a sink hole for coal money!

Fifty years of designing and erecting greenhouses means something, it means the best there is in building—the greatest economy in the heating problem.
For expert knowledge, go to experts.

THE DECORATOR'S TOOL KIT.

How many times, when out on some large or even minor decoration, have you had to trouble the people in the house for some tacks, pins or the loan of a hammer, with the poor excuse, "I forgot mine"? This not only causes unnecessary delay but makes a poor impression.

All this can easily be avoided by keeping, ever ready and under lock and key, a small tool kit similar to a carpenter's tool box, but of such proportions as to be easily carried, on the car if need be. About twenty inches long, one foot wide and five to six inches deep is a good size.

You can construct the box yourself, of light, strong boards. Along one side make a compartment to hold an 18-inch saw and a medium weight hammer. The balance of the box should be a "double decker." The lower part should be divided up for holding tacks, pins, two sizes of nails, staples, spools of green thread, straightened wire, pliers, etc. In the upper half you will find room for a coil of wire and a pair of overalls, although some decorators will prefer to wear an apron.

The cover of the box should hold the two parts in place, so that the small articles will remain in their respective places.

Put a good lock on the box and keep the key in your pocket. See that everything is in its place and every place filled, and instead of having a dozen things to remember when starting on a job, aside from plants, greens, etc., you have just one other thing to carry, the tool kit.

HUGO SCHROETER.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

The use of fruit with flowers is rather uncommon, and for that reason quite desirable. One centerpiece of daisies and strawberries took well. Strawberry plants in blossom and fruit in all stages, from the whitish green to greenish red and fully ripe, were used as the foliage part of the piece. In among the plants were placed two or three short vases containing cut daisies. The plants were taken out of the pots and sphagnum packed around held them in place. The runners were allowed to "run" outside of the centerpiece proper, and clusters of extra berries were wired on, so as to give the idea of their having grown there in clusters. This on a Battenberg centerpiece made an attractive luncheon decoration.

Later fruits could be used with seasonable flowers, such as cherries with white sweet peas, black raspberries with delicate pink-tinted sweet peas in a twig basket, peach blossoms with Chatenay or Golden Gate roses.

For an informal luncheon try a twig hamper containing a small vase or two of Richmond roses. Let the lid fall back and the roses scatter over it from the inside of the basket. See that the vase or small bowl is concealed with extra rose foliage or ferns. Stiff, long-stemmed roses cannot be used in this way. It is a good arrangement to suggest for using short and weak-stemmed roses.

A seasonable window for yellow and white snapdragons was devised by using a brown, square handled, rather rustic basket containing a pan or large vase full of these tall, graceful stalks, with the addition of a little Sprengeri as center. The background was a 2-inch bed of sphagnum covered with ferns laid flat, and yellow and brown pansies stemmed two or three to a pick inserted through the ferns into the sphagnum. Pansies were set in about as thick as when found growing in a bed.

BASKET OF CHATENAY.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a cornucopia-shaped basket of roses arranged by the Drumm Seed and Floral Co., Fort Worth, Tex. The horn of plenty was particularly appropriate to the occasion, which was the opening of the new Touraine hotel. The roses used were Mme. Chatenay. The arrangement of the basket was excellent.

FLOWERS POLLUTING WATER.

I lately came across a note which stated that a French florist had discovered that roses and mignonette would not live together in the same vase. This is entirely contradictory to my experience, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser; yet I have found that mignonette very soon pollutes water, especially if the leaves are not stripped off above where the stems reach the water.

It is remarkable that many of the sweet-scented flowers pollute the water in a very short time. Take stocks, lily of the valley, wallflowers, heliotropes, sweet peas, especially where foliage of the latter is used with the flowers. It may not be confined to sweet-scented scheme, a green basket was used with pink snapdragons and purple pansies.

Full blown roses often accumulate at this time of the year. They need not mean loss. Get some advertising out of them. Make loose garlands and trim a window mirror with a line of drapery composed of the garland. Set a large Boston fern and trail a garland across the front to fall to the floor, with a few loose roses.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

flowers that the water so soon becomes offensive, but it certainly occurs more with them than it does with many other flowers.

In all cases, water should be changed frequently. And there is a twofold advantage in stripping off the foliage on the lower portion of the stems, for it adds to the pollution of the water, and no flowers keep so well with much foliage left on the stems. Take chrysanthemums; the one great disadvantage in showing them on long stems with foliage is that the flowers do not keep so long.

With Asparagus plumosus nanus I have found that where any of the foliage goes into the water it soon becomes offensive. Even when packing for market the foliage must be kept quite dry, or it will soon go slimy and be useless; but if packed in boxes which are well lined with paper, it will keep good a long time without any moisture. With many flowers inexperienced packers use too much moisture, with the result that if shut up close for one day they go wrong. In the warm weather the flowers may be put into water (or rather the flower stems), and allowed to stand some time before packing them, but all blooms should be kept quite dry; and when packing in boxes a good paper lining should be given, the boxes to be made as nearly air-tight as possible.

found one species in cultivation in our southern states and from which have come the double forms now known as G. jasminoides, or cape jasmine, and that grandiflora is merely a garden form of the latter.

Gardenias Under Glass.

We noticed last August, during a visit to one or two of the leading plant establishments of Philadelphia, that there were several houses of gardenias planted out on benches, just as we grow carnations and roses. They were free of insects, growing vigorously and must have given splendid results. The natural time of flowering is April and May and the grower who can flower it freely in midwinter reaps a good harvest.

Most writers on the cultivation of Gardenia florida under glass recommend growing it in pots, but that is no reason why its culture planted out should not be a great advance in the right direction. Remember, brother florists, that if forty years ago the planting out of roses, carnations or chrysanthemums had been advocated to a good old gardener, he not only would have been skeptical, but dubious as to your sanity. They assuredly can be grown in pots very successfully, and for conservatory decoration that would be the way, but, commercially, planting out will be the method.

Easy Plants to Grow.

As they propagate easily from cuttings, which is best done in early January, it is now too late to speak of that, but plants in 3-inch pots can be procured in right condition for planting out, now or a few weeks later, in about five inches of well chopped up turfy loam with a fourth or fifth of rotted horse or cow manure. The bottom of the bench should afford ample drainage. I will say here that the gardenia is an easy plant to grow and flower. The chief essentials are heat and moisture, with an abundance of water at the roots during the growing season, and, lastly, freedom from insect pests, chief of which is the mealy bug.

After they have started to grow freely the leading shoots can be pinched during the season to produce more branches, which means more flowers. They must be syringed at least twice a day to keep down mealy bug and, if that is not effectual, then a syringing of kerosene emulsion will eradicate them. The constant syringing they require keeps the soil wet and prevents a resting of the plants in the fall and no cessation of growth and consequent late flowering.

And now I am to mention something incident to the planting-out system. On telling this to Robert Craig last fall he wrinkled up his Socrates-like brow and remarked: "I think that is a valuable point." Here it is:

As It Is Done at Frisco.

Wm. Belsey, of this city, who was several years engaged in the growing end of floriculture in the city of San Francisco, on his return to the east told me of the ease and success with which they grew gardenias under glass. It appears that in place of planting on a level surface of soil on a bench, as we do roses and carnations, they spread about five inches of soil on the bench and then mound it up in little hillocks and plant on top of these little mounds. For instance, the summit of these little mounds would be eight or nine inches

Antirrhinums.

You will have noticed the popularity and call for the snapdragon (antirrhinum) this spring. If the price it brings does not make it as profitable as American Beauty roses, it is nevertheless a very decorative subject and makes a pretty centerpiece or bouquet associated with other spring flowers.

Antirrhinums are, I think, mostly grown from seed sown in July or August and then planted on benches in four or five inches of soil. The trouble with this method is that as the dark days of autumn come on they make little progress and do not flower till the returning sun of spring.

A better plan is to propagate at the end of May from cuttings. The strong growths, from which you have cut blooms last month, will send out side shoots, which will root readily, and must then be carried over summer in pots plunged in a frame in the full sun. This is a better preparation to make early flowering plants than carrying in the shaded greenhouse. When put on the benches in September or October they will soon give a crop of flowers, and once they begin to bloom you may expect to cut right along until late spring.

By cuttings you can also perpetuate the most desirable forms and colors, which from seed you are not sure of doing. The white and yellow shades are the most in demand. Soil that will grow carnations will grow antirrhinums, and, as they are free-growing plants, give them room to flourish. Twelve to fifteen inches apart each way is little enough. They are almost hardy in our northern winters, so 50 degrees at night will grow them freely, and give them all the direct sunlight your location is favored with.

Marguerite Queen Alexandra.

A plant that will be more popular next Easter than it was this spring is Chrysanthemum frutescens, commonly known as marguerite, or Paris daisy. The variety or form I allude to is called Queen Alexandra. It is one of the best of all house plants and the flower is beautiful. The first flowers to open are single, having only one whorl of petals. Succeeding flowers lose the yellow eye and the center of the blossom is a rosette of short, crowded petals, much resembling the Japanese anemone chrysanthemum. With only a few flowers they are not sufficiently attractive, but well-flowered plants of medium size in 5-inch or 6-inch pots or 8-inch pans are bound to be popular.

Cuttings should be put in now, or a little later, and grown on with occasional shifting through the summer, and should be plunged outdoors in the full sun. Or, if kept in not larger than 4-inch pots through the summer, they can be planted out on a bench where some of the earliest chrysanthemums have been cut. This will prevent them becoming exhausted in the pots and they will lift perfectly.

As planting them out will have a tendency to make strong, robust growth rather than bloom, they must be lifted and potted two months before you desire them in full flower. For pans take cuttings of the leading shoots about New Year's. They root most easily. Plant five or six rooted cuttings in an 8-inch pan.

As a cut flower, the Queen Alexandra marguerite is also most desirable. Sprays cut will last two weeks in water, the larger buds opening after being cut a week. We have measured flowers of Queen Alexandra the past week that were four inches in diameter, almost double the size of the old type.

Cape Jasmine.

In the last issue of the REVIEW there were interesting illustrations of the culture of gardenias in Texas, which is good proof of the immense demand there is from the northern florists. The gardenia is a native of tropical Asia and southern Africa, so our warm southern states grow it to perfection, but from the fact of their being native to the Cape of Good Hope would lead us to believe that a tropical temperature is not necessary in winter time. However plentifully they can be produced in Texas, Louisiana or Florida, they are a long way off from our large northern cities, where the chief market lies, and they do not travel well, their soft petals being easily bruised or soiled by the packing material and the long journey, so it is desirable that they should be produced near where they will be used.

It is interesting to learn from Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening that Gardenia florida was named for a Dr. Garden, of Charlestown, South Carolina, who was a correspondent of the great Linnæus, which proves the antiquity of Charlestown in horticulture, for Linnæus wrote about 1720. Nicholson says it is "a genus comprising about sixty species," of which no doubt Dr. Garden above the boards of the bench and the depression between these little elevations perhaps only three inches from the boards. This information was imparted at least eighteen years ago, and I did not see the utility of it as I do now.

On a level surface of bed the copious syringing necessary into late fall would keep the soil saturated and render a slight drying out of the roots difficult, but planted on an elevated position surface water would quickly flow to the lowest level, and I believe the secret of getting Gardenia florida to flower in January and February is this: In October lower the temperature, give more ventilation and decreased the water at the roots; in other words, ripen the growth of the summer, when flower-buds will form, which a renewal of heat and moisture will soon expand.

I have been rather lengthy and elaborate on a beautiful evergreen shrub in which only a few commercial men are at all interested, and I will conclude by saying that in small communities there would be little call for it. Its cultivation in the neighborhood of large cities would be most profitable. Remember that Texas and other southern states would be no opposition in the winter months and the greenhouse-grown flowers would reign supreme in this unequalled sweet-scented flower.

For Crowded Plants.

We read in the correspondence from many cities that flower gardening is in rull blast. With us it is three weeks in the future, and until we get relief we are much crowded. Those who do not like the sound of the word hotbed, good old greenhouses as they are, can find much relief in cold frames. There are few of our bedding plants but will do perfectly well now in a cold frame, and they cost little to put up, either in time or money.

The chief plant of our flower gardening, the zonal geranium, is better outside in a frame than being exhausted in the hot greenhouse. It would be a long story to enumerate those plants that are better in a frame than kept in a greenhouse, but a reliable guide is this: Plants of a tropical nature want the slight artificial night temperature of the greenhouse and those of cold-blooded temperament will do very well with the protection of sash, and they stand the winds and bright sun much better when planted out than do the soft plants from the greenhouse.

A Simple Frame.

Did it ever occur to you that there are more ways of making a cold frame than nailing boards together? I can remember, when 19 years of age, a plan of making a cold frame in England. If you are blessed with access to a pasture or field of sod, cut a few loads of sod a foot wide, as long as you like and three inches thick. Build a sod wall for the walls of the frame. Place a plank or board on top of these little walls for the sash to rest on, and you have an ideal cold frame, much warmer than an inch board, and when the frames have fulfilled their purpose the sods chopped down are invaluable material for potting soil.

Queen Charlotte Geranium.

A few days ago I renewed the acquaintance of a fine geranium, Queen Charlotte. We had a bed of this at the dear old Pan-American, and I was not impressed with it as a good bedder, but as a pot plant for Memorial day it is a wonder, far surpassing that good salmon, Beaute Poitevine.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

At a recent sale at its rooms at Cheap-side, Protheroe & Morris, the well-known auctioneers, obtained 1150 guineas, or £1,207:10, for a plant of Odontoglossum crispum Pittianum, the highest price ever realized under the hammer. At the same sale a plant of O. crispum Abner Hassall realized 470 guineas, or just under £500. Protheroe & Morris are justly proud of these results.

Covent Gardens at this time of the year is well worth a visit. The quantity of bedding plants is simply immense. Every day, during the four hours of business, large numbers are disposed of, and this season prices are leaving a very fair profit to the grower. Pansies, calceolarias, geraniums, lobelias, fuchsias, daisies and all sorts of herbaceous plants are offered in great quantities, some growers having as many as ten acres of pansies alone, and 200,000 bedding geraniums in 3-inch pots is no uncommon thing. Petunias in 3-inch pots are also done in prodigious quantities, larger this year than ever, and some of the strains of these propagated from by the big plant growers are magnificent.

This spring bedding trade is at very cheap prices, but generally profitable. The establishments in which the stuff is produced are veritable plant factories, but everything connected with them must be done cheaply, so that the product can be sold at low prices. Many of the houses in which they are grown are only frame structures with movable roofs, as many as fifty or sixty of these cheap structures in one block. Everything anthemums; the one great disadvantage in showing them on long stems with foliage is that the flowers do not keep so long.

With Asparagus plumosus nanus I have found that where any of the foliage goes into the water it soon becomes offensive. Even when packing for market the foliage must be kept quite dry, or it will soon go slimy and be useless; but if packed in boxes which are well lined with paper, it will keep good a long time without any moisture. With many flowers inexperienced packers use too much moisture, with the result that if shut up close for one day they go wrong. In the warm weather the flowers may be put into water (or rather the flower stems), and allowed to stand some time before packing them, but all blooms should be kept quite dry; and when packing in boxes a good paper lining should be given, the boxes to be made as nearly air-tight as possible.

Nicholson says it is "a genus comprising about sixty species," of which no doubt Dr. Garden found one species in cultivation in our southern states and from which have come the double forms now known as G. jasminoides, or cape jasmine, and that grandiflora is merely a garden form of the latter.

Gardenias Under Glass.

We noticed last August, during a visit to one or two of the leading plant establishments of Philadelphia, that there were several houses of gardenias planted out on benches, just as we grow carnations and roses. They were free of insects, growing vigorously and must have given splendid results. The natural time of flowering is April and May and the grower who can flower it freely in midwinter reaps a good harvest.

Most writers on the cultivation of Gardenia florida under glass recommend growing it in pots, but that is no reason why its culture planted out should not be a great advance in the right direction. Remember, brother florists, that if forty years ago the planting out of roses, carnations or chrysanthemums had been advocated to a good old gardener, he not only would have been skeptical, but dubious as to your sanity. They assuredly can be grown in pots very successfully, and for conservatory decoration that would be the way, but, commercially, planting out will be the method.

Easy Plants to Grow.

As they propagate easily from cuttings, which is best done in early January, it is now too late to speak of that, but plants in 3-inch pots can be procured in right condition for planting out, now or a few weeks later, in about five inches of well chopped up turfy loam with a fourth or fifth of rotted horse or cow manure. The bottom of the bench should afford ample drainage. I will say here that the gardenia is an easy plant to grow and flower. The chief essentials are heat and moisture, with an abundance of water at the roots during the growing season, and, lastly, freedom from insect pests, chief of which is the mealy bug.

After they have started to grow freely the leading shoots can be pinched during the season to produce more branches, which means more flowers. They must be syringed at least twice a day to keep down mealy bug and, if that is not effectual, then a syringing of kerosene emulsion will eradicate them. The constant syringing they require keeps the soil wet and prevents a resting of the plants in the fall and no cessation of growth and consequent late flowering.

And now I am to mention something incident to the planting-out system. On telling this to Robert Craig last fall he wrinkled up his Socrates-like brow and remarked: "I think that is a valuable point." Here it is:

As It Is Done at Frisco.

Wm. Belsey, of this city, who was several years engaged in the growing end of floriculture in the city of San Francisco, on his return to the east told me of the ease and success with which they grew gardenias under glass. It appears that in place of planting on a level surface of soil on a bench, as we do roses and carnations, they spread about five inches of soil on the bench and then mound it up in little hillocks and plant on top of these little mounds. For instance, the summit of these little mounds would be eight or nine inches about them is movable. The roof is made of frames, the piping for heating is often hung on hooks supported on the sides, or in some cases merely laid on the floor.

These houses are used for tomatoes in most cases, as soon as the bedding stuff is cleared out at the end of May, and during late autumn and winter for chrysanthemums, which are grown outside during summer and lifted just before bad weather sets in and planted in the houses. As soon as these are cleared, during January, the houses are filled with forcing bulbs, so that growers in this way get four full crops each year from the houses, yet the extraordinary low prices at which these cheap bulk lines have to be sold renders the profits from quite immense establishments almost incredibly small.

In some cases, where chrysanthemums are the principal autumn crop, the houses are taken down and the lights and piping stored away under cover. The chrysanthemums are planted out from 3-inch or 4-inch pots in the frame of the dismantled houses and are not moved. As soon as bad weather sets in, about October, the lights are put on and the houses put into working order. The plants are by this means all safely covered without moving and without more trouble and expense, after which they are ready for the bulb forcing and spring bedding trade. J. B.

The plants have been grown under cool treatment, but have the appearance of being likely to force well. I am still of the opinion that the variety Lord Salisbury, as I grew it three or four years ago, is one of the best types of the numerous hybrid seedlings, but I have not yet seen this in the market. I find, however, that some growers have the Queen Wilhelmina, and it compares well with others seen. From several growers we see some variations; it may to some extent be attributable to culture. Market growers are not fond of giving names, or where they obtain stock from. I should imagine that most of the best samples we see are sold simply as astilboides floribunda, which is the name given to the first hybrid; yet there is a great variation, as seen from different growers.

The old favorite, Japonica, is still grown extensively, but many that I have seen seem to suggest that it is getting weaker in growth than it was years ago; probably this may be owing to its not getting a fair share of attention in culture since we have had the newer sorts. Compacta multiflora finds favor still, for where neat dwarf plants are wanted there is nothing better.

With spiræas, as with many other easily grown plants, it is only the special sorts that get much attention in culture; and I must say that if the older varieties received the same careful attention as the newer sorts do, we should often fail to find so much difference between them.—Horticultural Advertiser.

STOCK BEAUTY OF NICE.

This fine stock appears to be adaptable both for winter flowering or treated as a ten-week for the open border. The plants are fairly tall when grown in pots, and their spikes of salmon-pink flowers render them useful where soft shades are in request. It may be called a giant variety, and it does not appear to be sufficiently known. The percentage of double flowers is large, but we have had sufficient single-flowered plants to be able to save a nice bit of seed.—Gardeners' Magazine.

TO STAND POOR TREATMENT.

A southern subscriber would like to get the name of two carnations, one white and one red, which will grow under unfavorable conditions. For instance, solid beds, not very particular about the degree of temperature, and still give some bloom. F. J. U.

If the solid bed and irregular temperature are all that will be against them, there are a number of varieties that will give a fair return in blooms, according to how good the treatment may be. You will want varieties that are strictly non-bursters. Crane for red will likely prove most satisfactory. Lady Bountiful, The Queen, Moonlight and Vesper are all strictly non-bursting whites. Which one would prove most satisfactory in the south I cannot say. Try some of each. A. F. J. BAUR.

RED SPIDER.

This is our first year in growing carnations for the Philadelphia market. Our house is badly infested with red spider. We have tried all sorts of things, but none of them seems to do much good. We have a tree sprayer of good force with which we spray down on the beds about every other day. Having seen little about this in the REVIEW, we thought there was some secret among growers. How about mixing salt or coal oil in the water when spraying? D. & S.

The best thing to use against spider is a strong, cutting spray of clear water, of sufficient force to wash the spiders from the plants. It has been found that to apply anything in the way of insecticides strong enough to kill red spider will in most cases injure the plants. We once thought that spraying with salt water was a help, but we are told by a large importer that if a plant starts across the ocean with a sign of red spider, it will invariably be covered with them on arrival on this side. So it seems sea voyages agree with them as well as with the human species. At least it has shaken our faith in the salt spray.

You will find this pest pretty hard to get rid of, now that hot weather has come. The time to fight them is early, before they get much of a start. In fact, all winter you should keep an eye out for signs of spider. If your water supply has a good pressure, spray them from the side with all the force at your command every bright day, and if possible spray from both sides of the bench. There is no secret way of keeping down red spider, except the secret of success, and that is eternal vigilance and perseverance. A. F. J. BAUR.

A GOOD SPIRÆA.

Spiræa Queen Wilhelmina, recently introduced by Kuyk Bros., is certainly one of the best of the astilboides floribunda type; the plants have made wonderful foliage, and long spikes of bloom, which are of a clear white. On one plant I counted thirty-five good spikes of bloom, but these were not quite so large as some which had fewer spikes.

SINGLE-STEM POT MUMS.

Please give me a selection of five chrysanthemums, one each of white, pink, yellow, maroon and lavender. I want medium to large flowers to come in at the same time in November, for exhibition. How should they be handled in pots? L. M.

I presume the idea is to grow the plants to single stems in 6-inch pots. This is what is generally called for in pot competition, excepting the large specimens and standards, and these are quite another thing.

June 1 is the time that some of our best exhibitors put in their cuttings for 6-inch stock and these, as soon as they are rooted, are potted on into 2½-inch pots, thence to 4-inch and finally to the final potting of a 6-inch pot. By striking late, in this manner, it will happen in not a few cases that the plants will not produce a bud before the middle of August. This bud is retained and the result is a splendid little plant, not two feet high, and carrying a flower of almost exhibition size and finish. Such a plant, I have always contended, will sell on sight if one has any retail trade or is within easy distance of a city, aside from its exhibition value.

Never permit the plants to become dry in any stage of the growth, or the foliage at the base of the stem will die off. The ideal plant has foliage clear down to the pot.

The best place to grow these plants in the summer is on a front bench with the side ventilator open night and day.

Give each plant ample room and have about two inches of ashes on the bench for the plants to stand on. The ashes are useful in holding moisture and will help to keep the roots cool. Years ago we used to grow the 6-inch pot stock outside, plunged in ashes, but we have either progressed in inside culture or conditions outside have changed, for plants grown outside now cannot hold a candle to the indoor stock. The only condition to look out for is to have ample air around the plants, so that they do not pull up on hot days.

I give below a good selection of varieties for 6-inch pot work, a selection based largely on the winning lots at the eastern shows last year:

White: Merza, Nellie Pockett, May Seddon, Beatrice May.

Yellow: Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, Appleton, Merstham Yellow.

Pink: W. Duckham, Valerie Greenham, F. A. Cobbold, Mrs. Coombes.

Red: Merstham Red, J. H. Doyle, Mrs. J. A. Miller.

Maroon: T. Carrington, E. J. Brooks.

Lavender: Lady Hopetoun.

The last named is the finest variety for this work I ever saw, some last year being only a foot high and producing an enormous flower.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

CINERARIAS.

J. H. Myers, Altoona, Pa., finds Cineraria stellata a very useful plant, particularly for Easter decorating. The accompanying illustration shows a house running along the end of Mr. Myers' range in which he grows the cineraria successfully. The plants photographed were grown in 6-inch pans and were from eighteen inches to four feet in height, the spread of bloom being as great as three feet on some of the specimens. It was an especially interesting lot because of the variety of colors, ranging from nearly white to dark blue, purple and crimson.

THE DAHLIA.

[A paper by E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O., read before the Ohio State Horticultural Society, January 12, 1906.]

The recent revival of the interest in the dahlia for cut flower purposes and its adaptability as a flowering plant for amateurs, makes information regarding its culture and management at this time desirable.

Its increasing popularity is largely through the advent of new forms and the ever increasing love and demand for flowers. The dahlia comes at a season when the rush of earlier summer flowers is past and prior to the advent of the chrysanthemum and glass grown flowers.

It is not at all particular as to kind of soil, requires no glass treatment, covers a wide range of colors and forms, standard varieties are cheap and are easily kept through the dormant season. It well repays that loving care and attention that many amateurs so delight to bestow upon their plants.

Its culture and development have nearly all taken place within the last hundred years—a very short time as compared with the period covered by the rose and chrysanthemum. It was taken in its wild form from the sandy plains of Mexico to Europe about 1789, but it was not until 1814 that the first double forms were seen at Louvain, Holland. From this time on development was rapid; from the single wild form, double varieties appeared so rapidly that one English dealer in 1841 listed over 1,200 varieties. Both the large flowering and pompon class were of the globular form, being as round as a ball. They are classed as show and fancy. The show class is made up of the self colors, that is, one color; the fancy class includes the variegated flowers.

These globular forms and singles filled the lists until about the year 1873. At this time a Dutch merchant offered a new form of dahlia, the parent of the now popular class called cactus. This variety was named Juarezii in honor of the President of Mexico. This first new form, with its long twisted petals, had the peculiar red shade associated with the cactus; hence the name of this class. From it we are getting many variations; indeed, another class is announced—the pæony-flowered. The advent of the cactus form with its informal grace and beauty makes it valuable for all decorative purposes. The dahlia has an adaptability for graceful decorating not possessed by the chrysanthemum and in brilliancy of coloring it transcends all other summer flowers. With the improvement in keeping qualities and a more general knowledge of its usefulness as a cut flower, both by the florists and the public, the dahlia is bound to become very popular.

Methods of Propagation.

There are three methods of propagation—by seed, root division and by cuttings. Dahlia seeds germinate very quickly in moderate heat and the young plants are easily handled. Sown in March, pricked out into flats and transplanted into the open ground after danger of frost, they are almost certain to produce bloom in September in great and endless variety.

Perhaps the most common method of propagation is by root division. In April the eyes will begin to show at the base of the old stalk. These may be divided with a knife, I find pruning shears most useful, leaving one or two eyes with each tuber. In this way varieties can be largely multiplied. Where glass is available the clumps of roots may be bedded in earth in full light about the last of February; they soon spring into growth. These young shoots can be taken off, rooted in sand and handled like any other soft-wooded plants. The claim is made that plants grown from cuttings produce the best flowers. As far as my observation goes I can see no superiority over plants from root division.

The dahlia does well in any fertile soil, but its preference seems to be for a rich, deep, moist, sandy loam. It should be planted about the middle to the last of May. It requires warmth to start it into growth; consequently there is nothing to be gained by early planting. I think it is even a mistake to start the tubers indoors as many amateurs do. Midsummer is not a desirable time to bloom the dahlia. About September 1 is quite early enough to bring in the first blooms and this can be done easily by planting out the last of May. To attain the best results the plant should receive no check from start to finish.

Planting.

The dahlia should be planted so as to permit of easy passage between the plants, as the bushes are very brittle and a touch often will cause great branches to break down. A single row will permit of as close planting as two feet in the row, but rows should be at least five or six feet apart. Planting depth should be about five inches below the soil surface. Frequent and shallow cultivation is essential to its rapid growth. Gradually drawing a little soil around the base of the plant tends to assist in holding the plant upright. When tubers are about them is movable. The root is covered with the piping for heating and the roots are supported on the sides of the cases merely laid on a plank.

These cases are used for tomatoes in winter cases, as soon as the bedding stuff is cleared out of the end of dry, and being taken down and winter for chrysanthemums, which are grown outside during summer and lifted just before another sets in and planted in the cases. As soon as these are cleared, during January, the houses are filled with forcing bulbs, so that growers in this way get four full crops each year from the houses, yet the extraordinary low prices at which these cheap bulk lines have to be sold renders the profits from quite immense establishments almost incredibly small.

In some cases, where chrysanthemums are the principal autumn crop, the houses are taken down and the lights and piping stored away under cover. The chrysanthemums are planted out from 4-inch or 4-inch pots in the frame of the dismantled houses and are not moved. As soon as bad weather sets in, about October, the lights are put on and the houses put into working order. The plants are by this means all safely covered without moving and without more trouble and expense, after which they are ready for the bulb forcing and spring bedding trade. J. B.

The plants have been grown under cool treatment, but have the appearance of being likely to force well. I am still of the opinion that the variety Lord Salisbury, as I grew it three or four years ago, is one of the best types of the numerous hybrid seedlings, but I have not yet seen this in the market. I find, however, that some growers have the Queen Wilhelmina, and it compares well with others seen. From several growers we see some variations; it may to some extent be attributable to culture. Market growers are not fond of giving names, or where they obtain stock from. I should imagine that most of the best samples we see are sold simply as astilboides floribunda, which is the name given to the first hybrid; yet there is a great variation, as seen from different growers.

The old favorite, Japonica, is still grown extensively, but many that I have seen seem to suggest that it is getting weaker in growth than it was years ago; probably this may be owing to its not getting a fair share of attention in culture since we have had the newer sorts. Compacta multiflora finds favor still, for where neat dwarf plants are wanted there is nothing better.

With spiraeas, as with many other easily grown plants, it is only the special sorts that get much attention in culture; and I must say that if the older varieties received the same careful attention as the newer sorts do, we should often fail to find so much difference between them. —Horticultural Advertiser.

STOCK BEAUTY OF NICE.

This fine stock appears to be adaptable both for winter flowering or treated as a ten-week for the open border. The plants are fairly tall when grown in pots, and their spikes of salmon-pink flowers render them useful where soft shades are in request. It may be called a giant variety, and it does not appear to be sufficiently known. The percentage of double flowers is large, but we have had sufficient single-flowered plants to be able to save a nice bit of seed. —Gardeners' Magazine.

TO STAND POOR TREATMENT.

A southern subscriber would like to get the name of two carnations, one white and one red, which will grow under unfavorable conditions. For instance, solid beds, not very particular about the degree of temperature, and still give some bloom. F. J. U.

If the solid bed and irregular temperature are all that will be against them, there are a number of varieties that will give a fair return in blooms, according to how good the treatment may be. You will want varieties that are strictly non-bursters. Crane for red will likely prove most satisfactory. Lady Bountiful, The Queen, Moonlight and Vesper are all strictly non-bursting whites. Which one would prove most satisfactory in the south I cannot say. Try some of each. A. F. J. BAUR.

RED SPIDER.

This is our first year in growing carnations for the Philadelphia market. Our house is badly infested with red spider. We have tried all sorts of things, but none of them seems to do much good. We have a tree sprayer of good force with which we spray down on the beds about every other day. Having seen little about this in the REVIEW, we thought there was some secret among growers. How about mixing salt for dusting the plants with spraying?

The best thing to use against spider is a strong, cutting spray of hot water, a sufficient force to wash the spiders from the plants. It has been found that it kills anything in the way of insects. It is strong enough to kill red spider, but in most cases injure the plants. We once thought that spraying with salt water was a help, but we are told by a large importer that if a plant starts across the ocean with a sign of red spider, it will invariably be covered with them on arrival on this side. So it seems sea voyages agree with them as well as with the human species. At least it has shaken our faith in the salt spray.

You will find this pest pretty hard to get rid of, now that hot weather has come. The time to fight them is early, before they get much of a start. In fact, all winter you should keep an eye out for signs of spider. If your water supply has a good pressure, spray them from the side with all the force at your command every bright day, and if possible spray from both sides of the bench. There is no secret way of keeping down red spider, except the secret of success, and that is eternal vigilance and perseverance. A. F. J. BAUR.

A GOOD SPIRAEA.

Spiraea Queen Wilhelmina, recently introduced by Kuyk Bros., is certainly one of the best of the astilboides floribunda type; the plants have made wonderful foliage, and long spikes of bloom, which are of a clear white. On one plant I counted thirty-five good spikes of bloom, but these were not quite so large as some which had fewer spikes.

SINGLE-STEM POT MUMS.

Please give me a selection of five chrysanthemums, one each of white, pink, yellow, maroon and lavender. I want medium to large flowers to come out at the same time in November, for exhibition. How should they be handled in pots?

I presume the idea is to grow the plants to single stems in 6-inch pots. This is what is generally called for in pot competition, excepting the large specimens and standards, and these are quite another thing.

June 1 is the time that some of our best exhibitors put in their cuttings for 6-inch stock and these, as soon as they are rooted, are potted on into 2½-inch pots, thence to 4-inch and finally to the final potting of a 6-inch pot. By striking later, in this manner, it will happen in not a few cases that the plants will not produce a bud before the middle of August. This bud is retained and the result is a splendid little plant, not two feet high, and carrying a flower of almost exhibition size and finish. Such a plant, I have always contended, will sell on sight if one has any retail trade or is within easy distance of a city, aside from its exhibition value.

Never permit the plants to become dry in any stage of the growth, or the foliage at the base of the stem will die off. The ideal plant has foliage clear down to the pot.

The best place to grow these plants in the summer is on a front bench with the side ventilator open night and day.

Give each plant ample room and have about two inches of ashes on the bench for the plants to stand on. The ashes are useful in holding moisture and will help to keep the roots cool. Years ago we used to grow the 6-inch pot stock outside, plunged in ashes, but we have either progressed in inside culture or conditions outside have changed, for plants grown outside now cannot hold a candle to the indoor stock. The only condition to look out for is to have ample air around the plants, so that they do not pull up on hot days.

I give below a good selection of varieties for 6-inch pot work, a selection based largely on the winning lots at the eastern shows last year:

White: Merza, Nellie Pockett, May Seddon, Beatrice May.

Yellow: Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, Appleton, Merstham Yellow.

Pink: W. Duckham, Valerie Greenham, F. A. Cobbold, Mrs. Coombes.

Red: Merstham Red, J. H. Doyle, Mrs. J. A. Miller.

Maroon: T. Carrington, E. J. Brooks.

Lavender: Lady Hopetoun.

The last named is the finest variety for this work I ever saw, some last year being only a foot high and producing an enormous flower.

CINERARIAS.

J. H. Myers, Altoona, Pa., finds Cineraria stellata a very useful plant, particularly for Easter decorating. The accompanying illustration shows a house running along the end of Mr. Myers' range in which he grows the cineraria successfully. The plants photographed were grown in 6-inch pans and were from eighteen inches to four feet in height, the spread of bloom being as great as three feet on some of the specimens. It was an especially interesting lot because of the variety of colors, ranging from nearly white to dark blue, purple and crimson.

THE DAHLIA.

[A paper by E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O., read before the Ohio State Horticultural Society, January 12, 1906.]

The recent revival of the interest in the dahlia for cut flower purposes and its adaptability as a flowering plant for amateurs, makes information regarding its culture and management at this time desirable.

Its increasing popularity is largely through the advent of new forms and the ever increasing love and demand for flowers. The dahlia comes at a season when the rush of earlier summer flowers is past and prior to the advent of the chrysanthemum and glass grown flowers.

It is not at all particular as to kind of soil, requires no glass treatment, covers a wide range of colors and forms, standard varieties are cheap and are easily kept through the dormant season. It well repays that loving care and attention that many amateurs so delight to bestow upon their plants.

Its culture and development have nearly all taken place within the last hundred years—a very short time as compared with the period covered by the rose and chrysanthemum. It was taken in its wild form from the sandy plains of Mexico to Europe about 1789, but it was not until 1814 that the first double forms were seen at Louvain, Holland. From this time on development was rapid; from the single wild form, double varieties appeared so rapidly that one English dealer in 1841 listed over 1,200 varieties. Both the large flowering and pompon class were of the globular form, being as round as a ball. They are classed as show and fancy. The show class is made up of the self colors, that is, one color; the fancy class includes the variegated flowers.

These globular forms and singles filled the lists until about the year 1873. At this time a Dutch merchant offered a new form of dahlia, the parent of the now popular class called cactus. This variety was named Juarezii in honor of the President of Mexico. This first new form, with its long twisted petals, had the peculiar red shade associated with the cactus; hence the name of this class. From it we are getting many variations; indeed, another class is announced—the paony-flowered. The advent of the cactus form with its informal grace and beauty makes it valuable for all decorative purposes. The dahlia has an adaptability for graceful decorating not possessed by the chrysanthemum and in brilliancy of coloring it transcends all other summer flowers. With the improvement in keeping qualities and a more general knowledge of its usefulness as a cut flower, both by the florists and the public, the dahlia is bound to become very popular.

Methods of Propagation.

There are three methods of propagation—by seed, root division and by cuttings. Dahlia seeds germinate very quickly in moderate heat and the young plants are easily handled. Sown in March, pricked out into flats and transplanted into the open ground after danger of frost, they are almost certain to produce bloom in September in great and endless variety.

Perhaps the most common method of propagation is by root division. In April the eyes will begin to show at the base of the old stalk. These may be divided with a knife, I find pruning shears most useful, leaving one or two eyes with each tuber. In this way varieties can be largely multiplied. Where glass is available the clumps of roots may be bedded in earth in full light about the last of February; they soon spring into growth. These young shoots can be taken off, rooted in sand and handled like any other soft wooded plants. The claim is made that plants grown from cuttings produce the best flowers. As far as my observation goes I can see no superiority over plants from root division.

The dahlia does well in any fertile soil, but its preference seems to be for a rich, deep, moist, sandy loam. It should be planted about the middle to the last of May. It requires warmth to start it into growth; consequently there is nothing to be gained by early planting. I think it is even a mistake to start the tubers indoors as many amateurs do. Midsummer is not a desirable time to bloom the dahlia. About September 1 is quite early enough to bring in the first blooms and this can be done easily by planting out the last of May. To attain the best results the plant should receive no check from start to finish.

Planting.

The dahlia should be planted so as to permit of easy passage between the plants, as the bushes are very brittle and a touch often will cause great branches to break down. A single row will permit of as close planting as two feet in the row, but rows should be at least five or six feet apart. Planting depth should be about five inches below the soil surface. Frequent and shallow cultivation is essential to its rapid growth. Gradually drawing a little soil around the base of the plant tends to assist in holding the plant upright. When tubers are planted it is best to thin the shoots to one or two stalks to the hill. When the plants attain their second pair of leaves it is a good practice to pinch out the leader and, again, the laterals can be pinched after the second pair of leaves. This starts the plant into bushy form, which helps to keep it upright and lessens the necessity for staking. Still some staking is required by such tall growing varieties as John Elitch and Grand Duke Alexis.

If there is any one requirement for dahlia success, it is plenty of moisture from August through the blooming season. At this time the plants are making their greatest efforts and to be checked now, seriously hinders their perfect development.

There is enough in the cutting and handling of dahlia blooms to make up a separate paper and much is yet to be learned by even the most experienced. The proper handling of these cut flowers is much more difficult than its growing; it cannot be told; it must be experienced.

When frost has robbed the dahlia of its beauty and the season has advanced to about the first of October, we take a clear, warm sunny day for the gathering of the roots, digging all we can up to about 3 p. m. and then gather the roots up, being careful to bruise and break them as little as possible, and put them in the root cellar either in compact heaps or in boxes, using no earth or other material for protection. If any variety seems to be drying out too much, it is well to cover it with a paper or other material that will prevent further evaporation. My experience is that covering with dry earth, as frequently recommended, is unnecessary labor.

The decorative type of dahlias is distinguished by its broad, flat petals, usually of great substance and long-stemmed. C. W. Bruton, yellow; Lyndhurst, scarlet; Augusta Victoria, white; Sylvia, pink, are varieties belonging to this class. The decorative group furnishes the most satisfactory varieties for commercial cut flowers.

Recommended Varieties.

To close this paper without giving a partial list of recommended varieties would seem like erecting a house and maintaining it without occupants, it would be empty. I append a list that has done well on our sand loam. There are many left off for fear of too extended a list.

Cactus Class—Arachna, Bodenia, Countess of Lonsdale, Earl of Pembroke, General Buller, Kriemhilde, The Queen, Aunt Chloe, Night, Jealousy.

Show Class—Arabella, Black Diamond, Glori De Lyon, Grand Duke Alexis, A. D. Livoni, Mary D. Hallock, Oyster Bay, Red Hussar.

Fancy Class—Eloise, Kaiser Wilhelm, Miss Marsh, Penelope, Puritan, Striped Banner.

Decorative Class—In addition to those previously mentioned I would add: Catharine Duer, Frank Basset, Mad Van den Dael, Mrs. Winters, Oban, Pendent.

Pompon Class—Canary, Daybreak, Guiding Star, Little Beauty, Red Piper, Verdiflora. In the Century class, large flowering single, I would name: Twentieth Century, White Century, Crimson Century, Scarlet Century. In the small flowering single: Ami Barillet, Mrs. Bowman, Sunset, Souvenir de Franz Liszt.

No collection is complete without the collarette dahlia, President Viger, rich blood red with white collar.

A DAVIS HOUSE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made in one of the cucumber houses of W. B. Davis & Co., Aurora, Ill. This is a new and up-to-date plant. One of the interesting features of the photograph is that it shows the equipment for mechanically watering and syringing. This is the Wittbold patent and the swivel arrangement shows how the spray may be directed to all parts of the house. All the Davis houses are equipped with this apparatus. Davis & Co. find them great labor savers and consequently money makers. They say the only use they have for the hose is to touch up dry spots occasionally.

STRAWBERRY FORCING.

A query suggests to me that a little information on the forcing of strawberries might be of service to some of the readers of the REVIEW.

In preparation for forcing, the first essential is to procure good, strong plants. These are best obtained from the home patch. As early in July as the runners are large enough, 2½-inch pots should be prepared by being filled with a good potting soil. These are plunged to the level of the ground in the strawberry bed wherever they can be reached by a good, strong runner. The young plant already formed on the runner is pegged down to the soil in the pot and allowed to root well in the pot before being separated from the parent plant. All secondary runners forming on the young plant are, in the meantime, pinched off as they appear. Just as soon as the pots are filled with roots the plants should be shifted up into 4-inch pots and afterwards into 6-inch pots, this being the best size to fruit them in.

Every effort should be made during the growing period to keep the plants growing as strong and vigorous as possible, as the stronger the plants the more certainty or good results.

Next in rotation is the thorough ripening of the plants, preparatory to beginning to force. The best place for them as winter approaches is a cold frame where the pots may be set close together. Here they should be allowed to stand uncovered until they have been exposed to at least 10 degrees of frost; but when the frost exceeds this they had better be protected by covering, as too much frost would crack the pots. Freezing and thawing should also be provided against as much as possible, though light should not be excluded or loss of foliage would result. Towards the end of December or beginning of January we usually find the plants sufficiently ripened to be ready to force. Started at that time, the hardest part of the season has to be encountered. The later they are left the easier the forcing operation becomes, but the season must be regulated according to the time the fruit is wanted. In private establishments, where a continuous supply is needed, the plants are brought in in batches, the first being taken in just as soon as the plants are ready.

When the plants are first introduced to the house the temperature should not at first exceed 45 degrees, but should be increased as growth advances until, by the time they are in full flower, a temperature of 55 degrees should be maintained. Once the fruit is well set the temperature to facilitate ripening may be run up to 65 degrees.

House of Cucumbers Grown by W. B. Davis & Co., Aurora, Ill.

These figures represent the night temperatures. A rise of 15 degrees in the day time should be allowed right along on bright days, but a little air should be admitted, even if the temperature does not rise more than 10 degrees above the night figure during the flowering period. Especially should air be admitted so as to keep the atmosphere as dry as possible, to facilitate the distribution of the pollen. A good many more flowers are usually produced on the plant than can be properly fertilized or could be relied upon to develop into good fruits. Ten fruits to a plant is considered a good crop, so it is a good plan, after they are large enough to be distinguished, to select the ten best, and remove the smaller fry, to give the others all the benefit. The most troublesome insect enemy that assails the plants is red spider. To keep this under control the syringe should be kept going freely whenever possible. During the flowering stage it should be discontinued, but may be resumed again after the fruit is set—up to the time of coloring. With the fruit once well formed the plants will stand quite liberal feeding, liquid from barnyard or sheep manure being the best to use. No doubt some of the commercial fertilizers could be advantageously employed, but we have always had good results with the first-named manures and have never found it necessary to try anything else.

BEST STRAWBERRIES.

Please give me some information as to what kind of strawberries would be the best variety for greenhouse culture in pots.

T. N.

If you are going to confine yourself to one variety I think Nick Omer is the best. It is not quite so high class in quality as some of the others, but it always can be relied on to produce plenty of pollen for the fertilization of the flowers. Lack of pollen is a drawback to many of the best flavored varieties. The old Sharpless is one of the best varieties for forcing purposes, but is a rather shy producer of pollen during the short winter days, though by growing this together with Nick Omer, the later variety will produce pollen enough to make up the deficiency.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Badge Book.

In accordance with the instructions voted at the convention in Washington last August, the secretary is now preparing a badge book containing the names of members, numbered, and will issue correspondingly numbered badges to those whose dues for 1906 are paid previous to June 1. Members in arrears for current year's dues, as well as all persons intending to take out membership this year, are earnestly requested to remit now. There is no advantage in waiting until the convention meets, as the fiscal year begins on January 1, and payments made at any date during the year cover the interim until December 31 only.

Sydney B. Wertheimer.

The size of the badge book will be about 3½x6 inches. Advertisements will be inserted at $5 per page; one inch cards, $1 each. Advertising copy must be supplied not later than June 20.

MEN OF RIBBONS.

There are not many retail flower stores of the first class that do not know the pleasant countenance of Sydney B. Wertheimer, for he calls upon a large proportion of the florists and enjoys a wide personal acquaintance in the trade, covering the entire country. His house enjoys a very large patronage, a large proportion of which is due to his indefatigability.

The firm of Lion & Wertheimer, now Wertheimer Bros., was established in 1899 in a small room at 463 Broadway, New York. Leon G. Wertheimer was the pioneer, but a year later Sydney B. entered the firm and the business began to expand, the necessity for larger quarters causing them to add Nos. 465 and 467 to their premises. S. B. Wertheimer originated the system of the house and conducts its advertising and extensive catalogue department. Leon G. Wertheimer has for many years been the general manager of the business. Between them the brothers have acquired about all that is to be known of the manufacture and marketing of ribbons and chiffons; they know the value of merchandise and the needs of the trade, and there lies before them an excellent prospect for an ever-widening field of activities. They will be on hand at the Dayton convention with another big display.

MAKING A START.

Advice for Beginners.

If you are ambitious to go into business for yourself start a bank account your next pay day. Keep out of your wages only enough to pay for your board, lodging, washing and absolutely necessary wearing apparel. Stop going to places that will require fine clothes and boiled shirts; stop going out with the boys; stop using liquor and tobacco; and above all, stop "sportin'." If you can't do this where you are, change jobs and get a new start. You will find it absolutely necessary to deny yourself of very many things if you would spend your old age in luxury. And no business man will have anything to spend the first few years except on the barest necessities, so don't start in by buying an automobile, wearing loud clothes and getting married unless your wife can support you instead of you supporting her. Follow this sort of economy up by seeing how much you can save for your present employer. Take care of his tools. Test your judgment to the utmost to do your heating, watering and airing with artistic precision so that the boss will get a few extra shekels by reason of your high grade flowers or plants. Subscribe for several trade papers and thus get new ideas, and more indelibly fix in your mind the older ones. But whatever you do, save, save, save! If board and room cost you $4 per week, another dollar will pay for your clothes (cheap ones), furnishing goods and washing. Do your own mending to pass away the evenings. Some neighbor woman will show you how. In this way $10 a week will permit you to lay up $250 per year and by working to your employer's best advantage you will soon get $12 or even $15 a week. It will take you from

Just as soon as the pots are filled with roots the plants should be shifted up into 4-inch pots and afterwards into 6-inch pots, this being the best size to fruit them in.

Every effort should be made during the growing period to keep the plants growing as strong and vigorous as possible, as the stronger the plants the more certainty of good results.

Next in rotation is the thorough ripening of the plants, preparatory to beginning to force. The best place for them as winter approaches is a cold frame where the pots may be set close together. Here they should be allowed to stand uncovered until they have been exposed to at least 10 degrees of frost; but when the frost exceeds this they had better be protected by covering, as too much frost would crack the pots. Freezing and thawing should also be provided against as much as possible, though light should not be excluded or loss of foliage would result. Towards the end of December or beginning of January we usually find the plants sufficiently ripened to be ready to force. Started at that time, the hardest part of the season has to be encountered. The later they are left the easier the forcing operation becomes, but the season must be regulated according to the time the fruit is wanted. In private establishments, where a continuous supply is needed, the plants are brought in in batches, the first being taken in just as soon as the plants are ready.

When the plants are first introduced to the house the temperature should not at first exceed 45 degrees, but should be increased as growth advances until, by the time they are in full flower, a temperature of 55 degrees should be maintained. Once the fruit is well set the temperature to facilitate ripening may be run up to 65 degrees.

These figures represent the night temperatures. A rise of 15 degrees in the day time should be allowed right along on bright days, but a little air should be admitted, even if the temperature does not rise more than 10 degrees above the night figure during the flowering period. Especially should air be admitted so as to keep the atmosphere as dry as possible, to facilitate the distribution of the pollen. A good many more flowers are usually produced on the plant than can be properly fertilized or could be relied upon to develop into good fruits. Ten fruits to a plant is considered a good crop, so it is a good plan, after they are large enough to be distinguished, to select the ten best, and remove the smaller fry, to give the others all the benefit. The most troublesome insect enemy that assails the plants is red spider. To keep this under control the syringe should be kept going freely whenever possible. During the flowering stage it should be discontinued, but may be resumed again after the fruit is set—up to the time of coloring. With the fruit once well formed the plants will stand quite liberal feeding, liquid from barnyard or sheep manure being the best to use. No doubt some of the commercial fertilizers could be advantageously employed, but we have always had good results with the first-named manures and have never found it necessary to try anything else.

BEST STRAWBERRIES.

Please give me some information as to what kind of strawberries would be the best variety for greenhouse culture in pots. T. N.

If you are going to confine yourself to one variety I think Nick Omer is the best. It is not quite so high class in quality as some of the others, but it always can be relied on to produce plenty of pollen for the fertilization of the flowers. Lack of pollen is a drawback to many of the best flavored varieties. The old Sharpless is one of the best varieties for forcing purposes, but is a rather shy producer of pollen during the short winter days, though by growing this together with Nick Omer, the later variety will produce pollen enough to make up the deficiency.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Badge Book.

In accordance with the instructions voted at the convention in Washington last August, the secretary is now preparing a badge book containing the names of members, numbered, and will issue correspondingly numbered badges to those whose dues for 1906 are paid previous to June 1. Members in arrears for current year's dues, as well as all persons intending to take out membership this year, are earnestly requested to remit now. There is no advantage in waiting until the convention meets, as the fiscal year begins on January 1, and payments made at any date during the year cover the interim until December 31 only.

Sydney B. Wertheimer.

The size of the badge book will be about 3½x6 inches. Advertisements will be inserted at $5 per page; one inch cards, $1 each. Advertising copy must be supplied not later than June 20.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

MEN OF RIBBONS.

There are not many retail flower stores of the first class that do not know the pleasant countenance of Sydney B. Wertheimer, for he calls upon a large proportion of the florists and enjoys a wide personal acquaintance in the trade, covering the entire country. His house enjoys a very large patronage, a large proportion of which is due to his indefatigability.

The firm of Lion & Wertheimer, now Wertheimer Bros., was established in 1899 in a small room at 463 Broadway, New York. Leon G. Wertheimer was the pioneer, but a year later Sydney B. entered the firm and the business began to expand, the necessity for larger quarters causing them to add Nos. 465 and 467 to their premises. S. B. Wertheimer originated the system of the house and conducts its advertising and extensive catalogue department. Leon G. Wertheimer has for many years been the general manager of the business. Between them the brothers have acquired about all that is to be known of the manufacture and marketing of ribbons and chiffons; they know the value of merchandise and the needs of the trade, and there lies before them an excellent prospect for an everwidening field of activities. They will be on hand at the Dayton convention with another big display.

MAKING A START.

Advice for Beginners.

If you are ambitious to go into business for yourself start a bank account your next pay day. Keep out of your wages only enough to pay for your board, lodging, washing and absolutely necessary wearing apparel. Stop going to places that will require fine clothes and boiled shirts; stop going out with the boys; stop using liquor and tobacco; and above all, stop "sportin'." If you can't do this where you are, change jobs and get a new start. You will find it absolutely necessary to deny yourself of very many things if you would spend your old age in luxury. And no business man will have anything to spend the first few years except on the barest necessities, so don't start in by buying an automobile, wearing loud clothes and getting married unless your wife can support you instead of you supporting her. Follow this sort of economy up by seeing how much you can save for your present employer. Take care of his tool. Test your judgment to the utmost to do your heating, watering and airing with artistic precision so that the boss will get a few extra shekels by reason of your high grade flowers or plants. Subscribe for several trade papers and thus get new ideas, and more indelibly fix in your mind the older ones. But whatever you do, save, save, save! If board and room cost you $4 per week, another dollar will pay for your clothes (cheap ones), furnishing goods and washing. Do your own mending to pass away the evenings. Some neighbor woman will show you how. In this way $10 a week will permit you to lay up $250 per year and by working to your employer's best advantage you will soon get $12 or even $15 a week. It will take you from six to ten years to get a good start but those years of living the simple life will not be spent in riotous living but in prolonging your days, so you have really lost nothing.

Securing a Location.

When you have accumulated your little wad cast about for your opening in some nice little town of 3,000 or more inhabitants. If you can buy an unsuccessful florists' business you can usually make your money go farther than when you build new and you, furthermore, have an established trade to start with; while on the other hand you are often liable to get "soaked" if you are not extremely careful. A lease for a year or two with privilege of buying at a given figure is the best way to buy a second-hand place. I have known of fairly decent opportunities to buy up a place for from $1,000 to $2,000; whereas, a new place (and if I built new I should build as much as possible of concrete and iron to keep down the usually large annual repair account) would cost about $3,000.

If you build new choose as central a location as you can so that people can buy direct from your greenhouse. A lot 66x165 feet in a small town will cost about $500 and in a small city $1,000 to $1,500. The second figure ought to get you a lot well located in a city of 10,000 inhabitants. A house 22x100 feet of latest construction, iron posts, gutters and purlins and iron and tile benches, divided into three compartments for maintaining differences of temperature will cost from $1,500 to $1,800, according as material is high or low, and based on hot water heating. Don't use steam on less than 25,000 feet of glass. A concrete basement and boiler house 20x22 feet with two hot water boilers will cost about $1,000. Don't build a fire trap. Insurance, if you can get any on it, will cost $2.50 a year on every $100 insurance on the building and $3.50 per $100 on stock. With a full concrete basement you don't need insurance.

A small stock of palms, ferns and other decorative stock will cost $500. I should use the house only for decorative material and potted plants, depending on the nearest market for the cut flowers and funeral designs. Thus your investment will be from $3,000 to $4,000 and the repairs for the first ten years will be a very small outlay.

Running Your Place.

You have probably all read about what the receipts ought to be from a house of this size. It has a reputation of earning $1 per square foot but that's a pipe dream. If you are a good trade getter, kind, courteous, solicitous, and that is not an easy matter when some old woman comes around haggling over the price of a 10-cent geranium when you ought to be at the other end of the house mending a leaky joint; I say, if you are a "regular rip snorter" over the sales counter you may land about $750 the first year and the business will cost you in the neighborhood of $500 to run, not including your wages nor interest on any money you may have borrowed. On the cut flowers you buy and sell you may—you may—make a profit of $250, provided you can hand out about $20 worth a week, besides the sales out of the greenhouse, yet this profit depends on how judiciously you bought and whether you sold for cash or "put it on the ice." If you extend credit too freely somebody will get rich off your poverty.

From what I have just said you will see how easy it will be to just miss them 'ere $500 with which you intend to pay yourself wages and develop the "biz." But that will be no real cause for discouragement. If you have taken well my advice as to "hornin' in a little on 'spenses" you will be able to live on the net proceeds of the greenhouse and then use the paper profits on the posies for further development.

You can live on $250 a year if you have to but the average man makes a grimace when he takes the medicine. Of course, if you are married and have nine or ten children to support these remarks do not hold out much encouragement to you but it may save you from getting rid of your little pile. If you have only a wife and she is of the right sort she can help you a good deal and earn her keep, but I don't advise you to get married with that idea in view. The old girl is liable to kick over the traces when it comes to living in poverty row. A successful business man can always find a wife; in fact, he has the pick of the bunch as a rule. It may take you from five to ten years to firmly establish yourself but you ought to be nicely fixed by that time. Then you can think about the wedded bliss business.

Some other time I'll hand you a hot one on "The Evils of Cut Prices for the Beginner." IRVING GINGRICH.

ROSES NOT FLOWERING.

What can be the cause of the following:

Dwarf roses, low budded stock, were potted in pots about the middle of November and were put in cold frame and were kept from hard frost. They were hauled in the greenhouse the middle of January and kept on 45 degrees from the start and afterwards up to 60. They grow vigorous, but do not flower. Some of them have grown as high as three to four feet. P. B.

Your treatment of the dormant H. P. roses seems to have been almost perfect and why they did not flower is not easy to explain.

When first potted, instead of plunging in a cold frame where the wood and eyes were exposed to many changes of temperature, it would have been much better to have laid them on their sides out of doors and to have covered pots and canes with four or five inches of soil. This method was fully explained in the pages of the REVIEW last October and it is sound, as we proved this winter.

As your roses have grown vigorously, I can only think of one cause why they are blind. Perhaps when you potted them or brought them into the greenhouse you cut them down too low. The first few eyes will make a vigorous growth, but form no flower buds. Judgment and experience can alone teach you the right height to prune. W. S.

SOIL FOR ROSES AND CARNATIONS.

I am building a new plant for carnations and roses and I want to ask in regard to the soil. I did not prepare any soil for my houses last fall, as I had no intention at that time of building. My soil is good and black and I want to know how I can fix it for my benches now to get good results from my carnations and roses this winter. Do you think I can make up a compost now that would make good soil for carnations and roses by putting old rotted manure and sand with it? How about lime and bone meal? I can get a lot of sandy loam if that will help. I have been watching the REVIEW of late to see if I could find anything on this subject, but was unable to do so.

C. F. R.

You do not say whether your soil is in the shape of sod. If it is, it would be advisable to put it in a pile at once, for, although there are not many weeks to spare before you should plant roses, yet some amount of rotting would take place. In building a compact pile you should add a wheelbarrow of manure to every three loads of sod. In the case of rose soil do not use old rotten manure—it is of little use, except mechanically. Procure cow manure that is very slightly decayed. If your black soil is inclined to be heavy so much the better. You need not add any sandy loam. The bone meal can be worked into the soil after the soil is on the bench. Notice how large a space a certain number of wheelbarrow loads go and then add for each load one quart of bone meal or flour.

There is more time with the carnation compost because from the middle to the end of July is the earliest that is desirable unless you adopt the all-inside culture and it is now too late for that. Far better let them have a few weeks in the field. If your "good black soil" is heavy it would be well to add a half of sandy loam and a fourth or fifth of the old rotten manure. There is no need to compost the material. Draw it up to the greenhouse door and mix it there, using the same amount of bone flour as you do for the roses.

On a visit to the great Dale estate I once noticed a very methodical plan of mixing soil for a rose bench and by which it was almost impossible to have one part of the bench overloaded with manure or another part with not enough. It was a bottomless box nine feet long, three feet wide and one foot deep. The soil was shoveled into this bottomless box and when even full to the top of the sides it contained just one cubic yard of soil. Then the required quantity of manure was spread on top of the soil and, lastly, the bone meal was spread on the manure. The box, or frame of boards, was then lifted up and the workman shoveled it over.

By this method you are sure that all your bench will be uniformly of the same mixture. It is simple and accurate.

I would not bother with adding lime this year. I think you will meet with success without it. If you find that your soil is devoid of lime then add it when you make up your compost heap this fall, which you certainly should do in September or October. The most successful men are doubtless very careful and particular about their soils. I know some who procure their sod in the fall and stack it up in sheds with open sides but tight roof so that when spring comes workmen can chop it down without being hindered by wet weather. Then, again, the majority of florists think little about this all-important feature of their business and neglect it until the actual time arrives when they must have it. They will pay out thousands for fuel but are stingy and penurious over paying for good soil, the very foundation that makes for success.

Perhaps, after all, I have not made myself very clear to a beginner, so will say, in conclusion, if you will pursue this crude formula you won't be far wrong: Use the frame that holds just a cubic yard; fill the frame with soil, add two wheelbarrow loads of manure and one peck of bone flour; mix it thoroughly and then put on the bench to the depth of five inches. It will be down to four inches long before winter is over.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

The florists of Bloomington met on May 10 and organized a club to be known as the Bloomington Florists' Club. They adopted a constitution and elected the following officers: President, A. R. Knowles; vice-president, John Gee; secretary and treasurer, J. W. Adams, of Normal. There were thirteen members present. The charter was left open until the next meeting, which will be held June 7. At that meeting F. A. Baller will give a talk on peonies. As he is a veteran peony grower it will be worth while hearing.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Sunday ushered in the summer and furnished the hottest May 13 on record, while the days that preceded it were unseasonably cold. Ice formed in many places. Much damage is reported among the early vegetables and the peach buds. But all this is not an unmixed evil, for the planting time has been unduly prolonged and seedsmen and nurserymen are still working night and day. The auctioneers wear cheerful countenances and their places are crowded with buyers, the fair sex predominating.

through blue spectacles. There is perfect quiet on the surface of the stream and it flows more slowly every day. It is the early summer stagnation. 'Twas ever thus. There will be ripples with the approach of Decoration day and the June weddings will stir things. But the good old summer time is here.

There is not an over-abundance of anything but lilac and yet prices are low and the cleaning-up process goes on daily. Roses of all kinds are down and many of them out. The carnation is the strongest item. Fine novelties hold at $6 per hundred. The ordinary kinds go from $2 down to zero. There now are plenty of lilies and valley every day in the year, thanks to cold storage facilities. Orchids are abundant again and prices greatly shaded. Gladioli are coming fast and America is in great demand. Violets have vanished after an eventful year.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting Monday evening, May 14, forty members were present. The exhibit was small but choice. Lager & Hurrell displayed a wonderful plant of Cattleya gigas superbissima, with five flowers of immense size on one stem. The plant was valued at over $100. Honorable mention was the verdict of the committee.

Paul Niehoff, of Lehigh, Pa., sent a vase of his new pink rose, Columbia, a seedling from Bon Silene and President Carnot, which he has cultivated since 1899 and for which he was given a vote of thanks with the request for another exhibit. The two plants of the Wittmani fern were much admired; it has already received the club's certificate.

The outing committee reported arrangements complete for July 2. E. V. Hallock read the resolutions on the death of August Rhotert. W. F. Ross, of Newark, and Arthur Withers, of Jersey City, were nominated for membership.

As to the contemplated spring show, in conjunction with the S. A. F., in 1907, the trustees requested further time. It developed that Madison Square Garden could not be secured. Mr. Wheeler said he thinks that if the S. A. F. will come with the guarantee fund a reality, a suitable place for a gigantic exhibition can be assured. Mr. Traendly said he thinks that without the Garden it would be useless to ask the society to New York.

P. O'Mara referred interestingly to his experience with the senators in the discussion of the seed question and said he thinks the end is in sight. Robert Schultz, of Madison, spoke of unjust express charges, which have been overcome temporarily by the overland express. He asked that a protest be sent to the U. S. Express Co. by the club and humorously described his interview with the officials and the dearth of satisfaction and courtesy he experienced. He said the majority have accepted the overland system. Mr. Stewart read some letters sent to the company by the secretary of the S. A. F. and the unsatisfactory answers received. Mr. Wheeler moved to refer the matter to the legislative committee. The committee has $100 of the club's funds placed to its credit for possible legal expenses.

C. B. Weathered moved the appointment of a committee to draw resolutions in behalf of the San Francisco sufferers and that a contribution of $100 be made in their behalf. The president suggested individual subscriptions. Mr. Hallock spoke in favor of club generosity and a committee on resolutions, Messrs. O'Mara, Traendly and Butterfield, were appointed.

On account of the death of the sister of J. B. and Wm. H. Nugent, W. J. Stewart, Chas. Schenck and Walter

Sheridan were appointed a committee on resolutions of condolence. H. E. Froment, John Young and J. Austin Shaw were appointed to frame resolutions on the death of Thos. De Voy, of Poughkeepsie.

The transportation committee for the Dayton convention is Frank H. Traendly, John B. Nugent and Walter Sheridan.

Mr. Hallock moved that President Kasting be invited to attend the next meeting, the second Monday in June, with a view to securing the fullest possible information as to the proposed national flower show.

Horticultural Society.

The Horticultural Society held its sixth annual meeting and exhibition on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Handicapped by cold and rain the first day, the attendance was not satisfactory. Dr. Britton addressed the listeners on Wednesday on "Horticulture in the West Indies," an interesting talk on personal experiences.

The principal exhibitors were F. R. Pierson Co., Siebrecht & Son and Lager & Hurrell. The Pierson Co. was first for collection of flowering shrubs, collection of tulips and collection of narcissi, also receiving a special award for carnations and a bronze medal for collection of greenhouse plants. Siebrechts were first for collection of ferns, for cut roses and received a special prize for new Rex begonias. Lager & Hurrell were first for orchids and had some splendid specimens. Frank Weinberg received the premium and a bronze medal for succulents, etc.

The summer exhibition will take place June 13 and 14. Roses, flowering shrubs, native ferns, peonies, irises and biennials, with vegetables and strawberries, will constitute the exhibit. George Skene will be in charge of the Botanical Garden.

At Cottage Gardens.

At Cottage Gardens it is hard to realize what has been accomplished during the past year. A new house 46x300 is just completed and the tile benches are now being installed. Here Alma Ward will reign supreme. The new style of bench, with its three walls and ventilation spaces, instead of the solid beds, seems much more desirable and apparently everlasting. This great white carnation will bloom until July. From one house the average cut now is 250 daily. The wholesale price is $6 per hundred in the New York market. Another large house completed in February, 22x140, is filled with young stock of Alma Ward, and the last of the large houses, 46x235, will be finished by June 1 and is to be planted to Robert Craig and Beacon. These are all built by the Lord & Burnham Co. About 3,000 carnations are shipped daily. The varieties are Alma Ward, Craig, Octoroon, Mrs. Patten, President, No. 468 and the new white, No. 2651. Ten thousand to 15,000 Elsa Struss will be benched and two houses of Craig, 10,000 altogether. Twenty-six greenhouses, large and small, now comprise the plant devoted to these wonderful productions. Over 2,000 seedlings are under cultivation. For nursery purposes 110 acres are used. The rise in real estate on Long Island has quadrupled the value of this property since its purchase by Mr. Ward. In the fifty acres of woodland are over 15,000 plants of the choicest varieties of rhododendrons. Many car loads of maximum kalmias will be planted; several acres of peonies, over 100,000; ten acres of evergreens, 200 varieties; four acres of herbaceous stock; Japan maples in all sizes; maples, pin oaks, elms, lindens, planes and a general assortment of ornamentals make up the balance of the planting. Fine stables and houses have been built and the new office, with its dining-room, chef and all modern conveniences, will be a revelation to those who enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Ward's hospitality a little over a year ago and have not since been there. I predict many a trip by members of the New York Florists' Club during the summer season. It's worth the journey.

H. H. Barrows, "the old man," as they lovingly call him at Whitman, Mass., was a visitor at the club Monday evening. He says the demand for Whitmani is enormous and from all parts of the country. Propagation averages 8,000 to 10,000 a week. The specimen plants at the club were much admired. A fine exhibit will be made at Dayton.

Meyer, of Fifty-seventh street and Madison avenue, has been doing some fine landscape work on the estate of Mrs. Kerch, at Tuxedo. He has the Kelly wedding at St. Leo's (Father Dully's) church this week. At Trevor's, on Fifty-second street, he has the summer decorations of boxwood, geraniums and ivy, using twenty-eight large window-boxes. He has built up a fine business very rapidly.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Over-production, modified somewhat by a cool wave, and, on Saturday, by the children's festival, foreshadowed in the REVIEW exclusively last week, tell briefly the market conditions. Carnations have sold perhaps as well as anything. Beauties have also been in demand. But both in carnations and in Beauties there are surpluses at times. There is considerable demand for white lilac, rather difficult to satisfy, but our hustling commission men have usually been able to unearth it. (I use this word advisedly.) The feature of the market is the arrival of peonies from the south, the Leo Niessen Co. reporting excellent flowers, white being especially fine.

enabled through the courtesy of the management to give the cut of one of the Edgely houses for a year. It will be noticed that these plants had remained undisturbed for a long time, and therefore the figures cover the entire period of twelve months without the loss of time required had the house been cleaned and replanted. While it is impossible to gauge actual money returns merely from the cut, the figures given below are so large that they will be of special interest to the majority of growers who have been working on diametrically opposite lines. That is, they have aimed to produce a maximum number of flowers during the winter months and to do this have expended money in cleaning and replanting, to say nothing of the cost of young stock, all of which expense has been saved under this system. Here are the details:

Paul F. Richter bade farewell to his business friends last Monday amidst general regret. He left, as previously stated in this column, for Martinsburg, W. Va. George Thomson, who was to have succeeded him as manager of the Henry F. Michell Company, also departed at about the same time, feeling, it was said, that the strain would be too great. Fred J. Michell promptly stepped into the breach, and, for the present at least, his cheerful personality will grace both the manager's and treasurer's positions. He will be aided in the former arduous place by several leading lights of the company.

Rice & Co. received a notice of a serious shortage in one of their ribbon shipments recently. The firm checked up the shipment and, finding it correct, wrote the customer asking that the box be again carefully examined. This was done and the employee who had unpacked the box, and, on second examination, still insisted the shipment short, brought out the missing pieces of ribbon from a corner of the case which had been deposited under a bench in the greenhouse. The amount involved was considerable.

The Leo Niessen Co. has been shipping lilacs to the south, indicating that the demand there has outlasted the supply.

E. J. Fancourt, in charge of S. S. Pennock's ribbons and supplies, will be installed in his new quarters on the first floor in a few days.

W. E. McKissick has instituted a new book-keeping system, with an expert in charge.

Wholesale commission houses, growers, retailers or seedsmen having baseball nines, are invited to communicate with John Wilson, care of the Leo Niessen Co., 1217 Arch street, Philadelphia, with the view to arrange a baseball game for the afternoon of Memorial day.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., reports many duplicate orders for their metallic designs for Memorial day, which are of finer grade this year than ever before.

Last week I gave an account of a new adjustable plant stand, under the heading "Mr. Berkowitz Helps Decorators." It seems that this paragraph caused a misapprehension in the minds of a number of readers, who thought that Mr. Berkowitz had invented the plant stand himself. Clever as Mr. Berkowitz is, he did not invent this plant stand, nor did I intend to say that he had done so. He is merely distributing it for his firm.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. represents a very clever sweet pea grower who has been producing good stock all season through.

One of our brightest business men says he can invariably tell whether a florist is making money, by chatting with him.

Rice & Co. are sending out the new adjustable plant stand which Mr. Eschner considers a great acquisition. With such support it should speedily become popular.

Sheridan were appointed a committee on resolutions of condolence. H. E. Froment, John Young and J. Austin Shaw were appointed to frame resolutions on the death of Thos. De Voy, of Poughkeepsie.

The transportation committee for the Dayton convention is Frank H. Trendly, John B. Nugent and Walter Sheridan.

Mr. Hallock moved that President Kasting be invited to attend the next meeting, the second Monday in June, with a view to securing the fullest possible information as to the proposed national flower show.

Horticultural Society.

The Horticultural Society held its sixth annual meeting and exhibition on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Handicapped by cold and rain the first day, the attendance was not satisfactory. Dr. Britton addressed the listeners on Wednesday on "Horticulture in the West Indies," an interesting talk on personal experiences.

The principal exhibitors were F. R. Pierson Co., Siebrecht & Son and Lager & Hurrell. The Pierson Co. was first for collection of flowering shrubs, collection of tulips and collection of narcissi, also receiving a special award for carnations and a bronze medal for collection of greenhouse plants. Siebrechts were first for collection of ferns, for cut roses and received a special prize for new Rex begonias. Lager & Hurrell were first for orchids and had some splendid specimens. Frank Weinberg received the premium and a bronze medal for succulents, etc.

The summer exhibition will take place June 13 and 14. Roses, flowering shrubs, native ferns, peonies, irises and biennials, with vegetables and strawberries, will constitute the exhibit. George Skene will be in charge of the Botanical Garden.

At Cottage Gardens.

At Cottage Gardens it is hard to realize what has been accomplished during the past year. A new house 46x300 is just completed and the tile benches are now being installed. Here Alma Ward will reign supreme. The new style of bench, with its three walls and ventilation spaces, instead of the solid beds, seems much more desirable and apparently everlasting. This great white carnation will bloom until July. From one house the average cut now is 250 daily. The wholesale price is $6 per hundred in the New York market. Another large house completed in February, 22x140, is filled with young stock of Alma Ward, and the last of the large houses, 46x235, will be finished by June 1 and is to be planted to Robert Craig and Beacon. These are all built by the Lord & Burnham Co. About 3,000 carnations are shipped daily. The varieties are Alma Ward, Craig, Octoroon, Mrs. Patten, President, No. 468 and the new white, No. 2651. Ten thousand to 15,000 Elsa Struss will be benched and two houses of Craig, 10,000 altogether. Twenty six greenhouses, large and small, now comprise the plant devoted to these wonderful productions. Over 2,000 seedlings are under cultivation. For nursery purposes 110 acres are used. The rise in real estate on Long Island has quadrupled the value of this property since its purchase by Mr. Ward. In the fifty acres of woodland are over 15,000 plants of the choicest varieties of rhododendrons. Many car loads of maximum kalmias will be planted; several acres of peonies, over 100,000; ten acres of evergreens, 200 varieties; four acres of herbaceous stock; Japan maples in all sizes; maples, pin oaks, elms, lindens, planes and a general assortment of ornamentals make up the balance of the planting. Fine stables and houses have been built and the new office, with its dining-room, chef and all modern conveniences, will be a revelation to those who enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Ward's hospitality a little over a year ago and have not since been there. I predict many a trip by members of the New York Florists' Club during the summer season. It's worth the journey.

Various Notes.

Thorburn is working night and day in removing to the new store on Barclay street, which reaches clear through to Park place and will be, when complete, one of the best seed stores in America for size and convenience.

Joe Manda has fully recovered from his long fight with typhoid fever and is now located at his orchid houses, West

C. H. Grant will open a retail store on June 1 at West End, Asbury Park, N. J. He did a fine church and house wedding decoration last week at Summit, N. J.

Van Praag has the Bijon-Fernandez wedding at Calvary church this week. Spring blossoms will be used profusely.

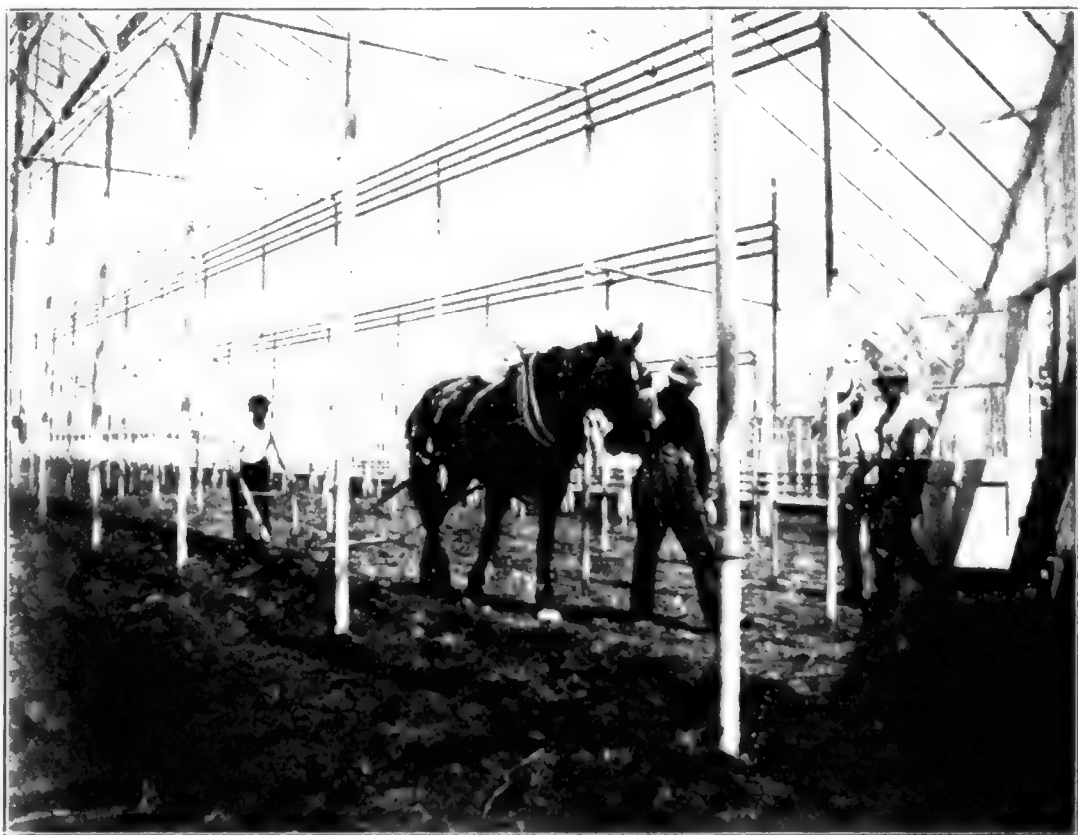

Sigmund Geller left on Tuesday for a business trip to Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm.

George Cotsonas & Co. report in store for summer demands a million and a half each of fancy and dagger ferns, an indication of the enormous business done by all the houses in this line of supply with their headquarters in New York. The quantity of galax in cold storage in this city would make a wreath large enough to encircle the world.

Robert Blume, one of the old-timers, known to all the florists of New York, died recently of consumption, at the age of 53.

H. H. Barrows, "the old man," as they lovingly call him at Whitman, Mass., was a visitor at the club Monday evening. He says the demand for Whitmani is enormous and from all parts of the country. Propagation averages 8,000 to 10,000 a week. The specimen plants at the club were much admired. A fine exhibit will be made at Dayton.

Meyer, of Fifty-seventh street and Madison avenue, has been doing some fine landscape work on the estate of Mrs. Kerch, at Tuxedo. He has the Kelly wedding at St. Leo's (Father Dully's) church this week. At Trevor's, on Fifty-second street, he has the summer decorations of boxwood, geraniums and ivy, using twenty-eight large window-boxes. He has built up a fine business very rapidly.

The Market.

Over-production, modified somewhat by a cool wave, and, on Saturday, by the children's festival, foreshadowed in the REVIEW exclusively last week, tell briefly the market conditions. Carnations have sold perhaps as well as anything. Beauties have also been in demand. But both in carnations and in Beauties there are surpluses at times. There is considerable demand for white lilac, rather difficult to satisfy, but our hustling commission men have usually been able to unearth it. (I use this word advisedly.) The feature of the market is the arrival of peonies from the south, the Leo Niessen Co. reporting excellent flowers, white being especially fine.

A Key to Success.

It will be noticed that these plants had remained undisturbed for a long time, and therefore the figures cover the entire period of twelve months without the loss of time required had the house been cleaned and replanted. While it is impossible to gauge actual money returns merely from the cut, the figures given below are so large that they will be of special interest to the majority of growers who have been working on diametrically opposite lines. That is, they have aimed to produce a maximum number of flowers during the winter months and to do this have expended money in cleaning and replanting, to say nothing of the cost of young stock, all of which expense has been saved under this system. Here are the details:

"A NEW BEGINNER" should sign his inquiry; we then would take pleasure in answering it.

ST. PETER, MINN.—William Nicol, who for fourteen years has been florist at the state hospital, has resigned and will go into business for himself at Watertown.

HERE is my renewal; don't skip any. I would not lose a single copy for the price of a whole year's subscription.—WM. W. MARUGG, Pomona Nurseries, North Pomona, Cal.

BUFFALO.

State of Trade.

A week ago most indoor flowers were going a-begging, but a week of cold, dull weather has entirely altered this state of affairs and both roses and carnations are in demand. It is quite noticeable that when these popular flowers are in over-supply the rose suffers most. Carnations are now of such superlative quality that they do not drop to any such price as the poor little limp-stemmed things of five years ago generally did in the month of May.

It sounds strange to read of cities as far north as we are being busy at flower gardening. We don't begin in earnest until the last few days of May, and most of it is done the first two weeks of June.

The market is our only relief for crowded houses just now. Some firms, like C. F. Christensen, Schwerdt & Berner and the Pine Ridge florists, depend largely on the market and what we call peddlers, and a very good business it is when an old Polish woman drives up to your greenhouse door and you load her up with 200 geraniums and she hands you $18. You have done business, and I think with more profit than putting them in a vase or veranda box and sending your bill three times by mail, and at the seventh call of a collector you get the amount. Yes, the peddlers are all right.

There never has been as much renovating and fixing up of lawns as there has been this spring. Many florists do considerable of this work. Louis H. Neubeck, S. A. Anderson and Wm. Scott Co. pick up half a dozen extra hands and do a little landscaping. A more suitable word would be landscraping. George McClure has done a lot of this work this spring. He does excellent work and charges a good price.

We have one firm in Buffalo that is well worth calling landscape architects; it is Fleming & Townsend. They are fast attaining a national reputation and have contracts in many widely scattered parts of the country. A dozen years more and our country will be as thickly studded with rural homes and finely embellished estates as is western Europe.

Various Notes.

There is not much local news and not many visitors of late. President Kastling is again blessed, this time with a sweet little cherub of seven pounds of the female sex. Dear little angel! I know that she will be a great joy to Billy and it will be good news to papa's many friends that mother and babe are progressing most favorably.

While on society events it is worth mentioning that the engagement of Miss Helen C. A. Scott to John McIntyre Grattan was announced last week. This young man for long was known to the Old Man as Number 13.

Mr. Reynolds, of the Scott Floral Co., Denver, gave us a visit last week, and very glad we were to see him. Being a very level-headed little gentleman, he gave us a true account of conditions and circumstances connected with floriculture in the Rockies. Mr. Reynolds is just the character I would pick out to put the brakes on the senior member of the firm. He spoke of the great success of Ben Boldt, our old Buffalo boy, the great carnations grown by Mr. Benson and the fine general stock grown by the Park Floral Co, at its big plant.

Mr. Lautenschlager was a caller in the interest of Kroeschell Bros. Co., of Chicago. Most things since historical times have migrated westward, but the Kroeschell boiler seems to be moving east as well as west.

THE BEAUTY OF ORDER.

A neat little story on the value of tidiness appeared in the last issue of the REVIEW. A few days before, I was inspired to write something on the same line, and began it, but it evaporated. We have some very wise maxims handed down to us by tradition, viz., that "Cleanliness is next to godliness," and further that "Order is Heaven's first law." The first is attributed to a king of Assyria, who lived on the banks of the Euphrates, where water was cheap. The order business was dictated by the glorious old King David, of Jerusalem, who had seventeen wives and saw the necessity of keeping order. Seventeen was not so many, but David issued this motto for the benefit of his boy, Solomon, who went his dad 983 better. Birthdays and Christmases must have been dreaded events in those days.

It is proverbial that those who keep orderly establishments, not only in our line, but in all where merchandise is handled, are the men who are most successful.

We notice young men who are wonderfully neat in their clothes. Their pants must be pressed at least every two weeks and they are as fastidious over their tailoring as an Astorbilt would be, yet these same young men will pass and repass dead plants and unsightly rubbish without notice.

Order in a greenhouse is an absolute necessity, but it is not so often violated as in the immediate surroundings. The smaller your place, the greater the need of order. There is a wise saying that there is no such thing as dirt. What is called dirt is matter out of place.

Every florist has more or less of a dump, where the bulb boxes are emptied, or where plants that have passed their usefulness are thrown. This is not useless dirt, for if kept separate it can always be used, but when it is mixed with broken glass and pots and other ingredients it is truly dirt.

The excuse of want of time is no excuse and is the resort of an untidy man, who is devoid of neatness and order. There is nothing unsightly connected with our business, and your backyard should always bear inspection. A heap of coal is very warming and comfortable and a well built up mound of sod or compost is actually beautiful to the eye of a good gardener.

Yes, Mr. Editor, this is a large subject and could be greatly elaborated, to the benefit of many of your readers, but neither time nor space is at my disposal. It is not want of time nor help, my boy, that makes your place slovenly and untidy. It is your own carelessness and indifference, and as you realize that you do not possess the phrenological bump of order, strive to cultivate the faculty of order, or, easier, suppress the vice of disorder.

The Great Central Market.

Toward the end of last week the market pursued its even course, with adequate supplies in all departments, but no over-stock in carnations. Cool weather had much to do with holding back the receipts, and when on Saturday the thermometer registered 83 in the shade the wholesalers prepared for large receipts on Monday, in which they were not disappointed.

This week opened with about as heavy a glut as has been recorded in recent years. Roses continue to be the greatest difficulty. There is much more stock than legitimate requirements can consume. A large part of the local demand is for funeral work and the shorts are making relatively better prices than the medium grades. The strictly fancy stock is selling fairly well, but stock which cannot be sold as fancy must a large part of it go at funeral flower prices.

It had been stated that there was nothing in sight in the carnation houses, but the sun evidently found something, for on Monday carnations were again over-abundant. However, it is not thought that the especially heavy cut will continue.

Sweet peas were good property up to Saturday, but this week there are quantities more than can be consumed by the stores, and first-class peas are finding their way into the baskets of cheap stock. There are also over-supplies of daisies which are hard to move. Quantities of outdoor tulips are offered, including some especially fine Parrots. Last week everyone wanted lilac; now there are literally wagon loads in almost every house and no one will even make an offer. Peonies are in heavy receipt and selling slowly. There will be an interval between the southern crop and the local cut, but another glut is in sight in this department.

Several growers are again ready to cut smilax and asparagus in quantity.

On Monday there was a good shipping demand, but Tuesday was about the duller day of the season and the accumulation was heavy. Local trade is exceptionally light. The Greeks are the principal buyers and they are not doing anything to speak of.

it now calls for an immense amount of stock. What the supply will be is not a matter on which there is unanimity of opinion; but it has little effect on prices. Buyers can use stock only at moderate figures on this day. Once more it is said that there will be a shortage of carnations, but the wise grower will keep his cut coming right along; to hold stock back will be to invite disaster. Rose crops likely will be lighter than in the first half of May. Lilies will be abundant, also sweet peas. The Missouri peonies are on this week and going into cold storage for Decoration day. The southern Illinois crop is beginning and much of it will be stored. The Texas jasmine growers report a dry spring, which they say has reduced the crop and impaired the quality, especially shortened the stems. But half last year's supply will suffice; thousands were lost last year and many sold for a song.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club May 10 it was voted to invite the Chrysanthemum Society of America to hold its annual meeting and exhibition in Chicago next November in connection with the local show, for which it is understood the Coliseum will again be available, although a considerably increased rental is demanded because of last year's success. The president also was instructed to appoint a committee of rose growers to consider the possibility of making a success of a spring show of roses if the Rose Society is invited here.

The collection of $273 for the San Francisco fund was reported and considerably more was said to be in sight, although many firms had, like the Albert Dickinson Co., which contributed $1,000 through the Board of Trade, and the REVIEW, which mailed a check for $50 at the first call of the Commercial Club, sent their subscriptions to the general fund weeks ago. The disposition of the florists' fund was not determined.

made necessary by the greatly increased production and by the further heavy increase in sight for next season, coming from the big new range now in course of erection. One side of the room is glass and the quarters will be among the lightest and airiest in town. Naturally, Joseph Foerster, the manager of Mr. Reinberg's selling department, is pleased at the change, but the move is not the only cause for the smile he wears these days. It's the first daughter.

P. J. Hauswirth and Mrs. Hauswirth plan to leave on Thursday morning for San Francisco, where Mr. Hauswirth is sent by the High Mogul, Big Chief Cherry, of the Red Men, to take charge of the distribution of the relief fund raised by the Red Men all over the nation for the members of the order. As the fund amounted to $8,000 at the date Mr. Hauswirth received his appointment and is expected to be $25,000 by the time he is on the ground, he has quite a task before him, especially as his only instructions are to make the best use of the money his judgment dictates.

It is estimated that local wholesalers and one or two Michigan parties have at this date not less than 3,000,000 ferns in the Western Cold Storage Warehouse. Some are coming out in perfect condition, but more require picking over, and some are being dumped as soon as the case is opened. The loss is heavier than usual this year. The quantity stored and the present quality preclude a clean-up.

Alfred Hildred has a very attractive store at 2928 Indiana avenue and always has a well-arranged show window. The location is only a couple of blocks from the stand occupied for many years by the E. Hobbs Co., now conducted by G. C. Wagner. It is a good neighborhood and each does a nice trade.

The George Wittbold Co. reports that the total of sales for April was again the greatest in the history of the firm.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is congratulating itself on the condition of its ferns in cold storage. On May 12 Mr. Winterson said they still had 600,000 remaining of what were stored last September, and he anticipates no trouble in selling out by Decoration day or thereabouts.

George Reinberg's vacating his present quarters in the Atlas block leaves a mascot room open for someone. Success has attended the efforts of every tenant. E. C. Amling occupied the space as long as it would serve his purpose.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is enjoying a remarkable cut of Chatenay. The buds are of exceptional size, stem four feet or more in length and well clothed with foliage.

P. J. Saunders, who has been out of business for some years and part of the time at his old home in Ireland, has opened a neat store at Forty-ninth and Cottage Grove, a block from the stand occupied for many years.

F. Stielow says that he, in common with other Niles Center growers, had carnations all in the field before the last frost, but he thinks little if any damage has been done.

L. Coatsworth is at New Castle this week, where the Benthley-Coatsworth Co. has nearly finished its new houses.

At E. H. Hunt's a good demand is reported for wheat sheaves, cypas and other Decoration day supplies. They sent out a special red, white and blue illustrated price list of these goods.

N. J. Wietor is employing his spare moments in compiling a catalogue for the trade in cuttings and plants, the first Wietor Bros. have ever sent out. It will be issued in early winter.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

After a period of dark, rainy and chilly weather we are having some warm sunshine and it looks pretty good. Business is picking itself out of the dust and has improved a great deal since last report. Not only has the supply diminished greatly, but the demand has increased. Consequently, prices are beginning to rise and everything has an encouraging aspect. Weddings are using up large quantities of flowers, and there is a good amount of funeral work. After about two weeks of very poor business it is certainly good to see stock moving out as it ought to. From present indications the market will not have a chance to become glutted, so several weeks of good business should be before us.

The supply of carnations seemed to fall off all at once. Between two days the glut vanished and there was almost a scarcity. At present the wholesale houses are entirely sold out of them after the morning rush is over. Still, a pretty large cut is being received every day.

Roses have held in better supply than carnations, but they are letting up. They are smaller, but there is not so much mildew as is usual at this time of year. The demand is heavier for white and these sell out quickly.

Large quantities of iris are coming in and a few peonies are to be seen. They are of the earlier varieties and are not very good. In a few days the finer varieties will be with us and if they sell as well this year as they did last we will have no kick coming. Sweet peas are being cut in good quantities and the quality is first-class.

New southern ferns have made their appearance, the old, eastern stock holding out in good shape.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society was held last Saturday evening. There was a larger attendance than usual. The main topic was the rapidly approaching convention at Dayton. It was decided to call a general meeting of all of the florists in this city, to be held in the club rooms, Saturday, June 9. At this meeting full arrangements will be made to organize a large delegation to attend the convention. Besides this it is the intention of the local craft to go prepared to boom the Queen City and show the florists of the country what hustlers we have in this city. So just keep your eye open for the Cincinnati delegation.

C. E. Critchell, who is chairman of our bowling committee, is hustling to get the bowlers together and Cincinnati will be on hand with a bowling team which will give a good account of itself. Cincinnati wants the S. A. F. to meet here in 1909, which will be its twenty-fifth anniversary. It is being talked over every time a party of florists gets together and plans are already maturing. We want everyone to keep this in mind, and when the time comes, as it will almost before you know it, we want every florist in the whole country to be on hand for the greatest convention ever held by the national society.

The planting-out season is now on in earnest, and from all reports it will be a record-breaker this year. The demand for all kinds of bedding plants has never been better.

George & Allan are sending in some very fine valley and they say that they will have a steady supply through the wedding season.

Visitors were C. H. Kunzman, of Louisville, Ky., and Miss White, of Lexington, Ky. C. J. OHMER.

The Market.

Business is still good, with roses to meet all demands, but a decided shortage of carnations. Outdoor stuff is beginning to show up in good quantities, and will relieve the situation. Prices all along the line are good and everyone seems to be happy. Most of the growers are busy with Decoration day orders and, judging by the present demand, there will be a decided shortage on all lines of bedding plants, and one of the best seasons ever enjoyed is now with us.

Various Notes.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. reports the sale of five car-loads of the everlasting tile bench last week, and a large number of enquiries about the Sabin plant stand.

Smith & Feters and the Gasser Co. sent out seven loads of flowers to the Todd funeral.

John Kirschner has put on a large force of men to help over the bedding season.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—At the May meeting of the New Haven Horticultural Society, F. C. Thompson, of West Haven, read a paper on pansies.

EASTON, PA.—A boy driving a delivery team of John Smith, of Bethlehem township, let the horses get beyond control, with the result that there was a bad mix-up on West Washington street May 9.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There continues to be a moderate call for flowers, and as the supply has perceptibly diminished, values have held up fairly well. Roses are coming in of good quality and the better grades are in fair request. The street fakers secure a good many of the smaller blooms. Some very fine Beauty, Killarney, Richmond, Liberty and Wellesley were noted the past week. Occasional lots of Carnot are also seen.

Carnations are deteriorating in quality. Enchantress is coming badly faded and Fair Maid is now preferred, as it holds its color better. Lawson also has a more washy look. Prices range from 75 cents to $3 per hundred. A few double violets were seen, about the last of the season. A fair supply of Yellow Trumpet daffodils, tulips and Poeticus narcissi are still arriving from the open. Gladiolus The Bride and its colored forms, Spanish iris, stocks, feverfew, antirrhinum, candytuft and an assortment of other seasonable flowers are seen. Prices are likely to hold up fairly well until Memorial day, for growers will hold back as much material as possible for that holiday, local retail trade calling for an immense amount of material over and above what goes to the wholesale markets.

Club Meeting.

An unusually good audience greeted E. O. Orpet, the speaker at the club meeting on May 15, the largest ever seen at a May meeting. Mr. Orpet spoke in a racy and very interesting way on the subject selected, "The Making of a Gardener," and one of the liveliest discussions on record followed. Some of the ideas brought out we will refer to in a later issue. President Wheeler read a financial report of the recent club banquet and reports from the recent rose and carnation banquet committees showed a balance on hand of $125. The coming meeting of the American Peony Society was discussed and a dinner to the visiting members favored.

Some preliminary discussion regarding the coming club picnic was indulged in. This will probably take place in August. Once more the membership roll was swelled by many names, including both ladies and gentlemen. There were, as usual, some fine exhibits. J. T. Butterworth showed a magnificent plant of a pure white Cattleya Mossiae in a 7-inch pot, carrying fifteen flowers, which attracted much favorable notice. Refreshments were served as usual, and the evening proved a most stimulating and interesting one.

Various Notes.

Peirce Bros. have 10,000 clumps of Spiraea Japonica which will be just right for Memorial day trade.

Dahlia specialists are experiencing a very heavy call at present. J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, one of the largest growers in this section, has found it necessary to work sixteen to twenty hours daily for some time to keep abreast of his orders. The cactus section continues to be in heaviest demand.

William Sim will have his usual grand lot of candytuft for Memorial day. He is growing tomatoes heavily under glass again this season.

From present indications a magnificent peony exhibition will be seen when the American Peony Society meets in Boston next month. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has sixteen classes allotted to them in addition to those provided by the national society.

Frosts and some damage to early crops occurred the past week. A shade temperature of 85° degrees on May 13 marked the highest point reached during the present year. W. N. CRAIG.

Charles P. Grimmer, one of the best known florists of Boston, died suddenly May 10, at Chatham, Mass. He had been in failing health for the last two years. He came to this country from Germany when a young man. After spending a few years in St. Louis and New York, he came to Boston and established a florist business in 1877 at the corner of Tremont and West streets, and has remained in that vicinity ever since. He carried on a large and successful business and was known to be a man of strict integrity in all his business transactions. Besides his widow Mr. Grimmer leaves five children.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Convention Preparations.

The Dayton Florists' Club is rapidly getting things into shape for the August convention of the S. A. F. Harmony prevails and everyone is working with a will. Dayton is exceptionally well located, being very central for our trade, and offers unexcelled railroad connections, all of which goes to insure possibly the largest attendance which has ever been recorded.

Horace M. Frank has been appointed superintendent of trade exhibits and has prepared plans showing the space at the disposal of exhibitors. The exhibition building is octagonal, 150 feet in diameter, with two floors, the lower floor being reached by four entrances, making all the locations equally choice. The dome is high and the second floor, reached by two stairways, is equally as desirable as the first. The rotunda opening is fifty-five feet across, insuring good light. Superintendent Frank will send prints showing the allotment of space to any intending exhibitor.

Class A is to occupy the space immediately below the rotunda opening. Classes C, D, F and G are also located on the first floor. Classes B, E and any overflow from class G will be on the second floor.

The outdoor display will be one of the special novelties of the convention and one of the most interesting features. There is abundant room for this department.

The officers of the Dayton Florists' Club are: President, J. B. Heiss; vice-president, Chas. Lutzenberger; secretary, Horace M. Frank; treasurer, H. H. Ritter. The committee chairmen are: Reception, F. W. Ritter; hotels, J. B. Heiss; entertainment, Chas. Lutzenberger; finance, H. H. Ritter. The entertainment of the ladies will be in charge of a committee headed by the Misses M. and L. Johnson. H. M. Altick, vice-president of the S. A. F., is in charge of the bowling.

The Market.

The past week found very little change in the cut flower business. A little spurt now and then, with funeral work or a small wedding, is about all that is going on among the retail men. On the other hand, the greenhouse men are very busy with bedding and the sale of plants. The past week the weather was quite cool, with a slight frost, enough to kill some of the tender plants.

The wholesalers are still over-stocked, although the prices are somewhat better. The market is short on really fancy stock. Carnation receipts continue heavy at all the commission houses, the bulk of the stock being of very good quality, with prices never so low as the past two weeks.

In roses the fancy grades are in demand, white first, and seconds too plentiful to sell at anything like a fair price. Sweet peas are in good supply and selling exceptionally well. Peonies are coming in quite heavily and are in good de-

Death of Wm. Schray.

William Schray, one of the oldest florists in St. Louis, died at 4 p. m. Tuesday afternoon, May 15. He was 72 years of age, and esteemed by all who knew him. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon, May 17.

Club Meeting.

The club held its May meeting last Thursday afternoon, in the club's rooms on Grand avenue. President Ammann was on hand early, but did not expect many members to attend, as nearly all are too busy with their spring planting; still, quite a few of the regulars came out.

W. C. Smith was proposed for membership. The trustees were instructed to prepare an entertainment for the members on the night of June 28, to celebrate the nineteenth anniversary of the club, and to report at the next meeting, June 17.

The secretary announced that at the next meeting Wm. Winter will lead a discussion on "Growing Sweet Peas Under Glass and Outside," and Henry Aue a discussion on "Growing Smilax in the Best and Most Profitable Way." After this the members adjourned across the way to a garden for lunch, when matters for the convention at Dayton were talked over. President Ammann is in hopes that a large delegation will attend the convention.

ALL reports from California point to a short onion seed crop in that locality.

CHICAGO:—It is reported that the Chicago Market Gardeners' and Truck Farmers' Association is about to form a trust.

ON the night of Thursday, May 10, frost cut down the tomato plants over a large part of the acreage for canners' use in Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. Replanting has made a heavy call for seeds.

KNUD GUNDESTRUP, Chicago, has bought property 80x196 in the onion-set district, with a sidetrack from the C. & N.-W. R. R. He will at once erect a warehouse equipped with all the latest devices for handling sets.

THEY are still planting onion seed in the marsh districts of Indiana and Ohio. The acreage is about equal to last year's and the stand better. The late planting last year brought good results; hence planting may continue for another week, as there is some of the ground not yet prepared.

REPORTS from the pea growing sections are that the stand from early seeding is good. A cold spring kept planting back, but favorable weather for the past two weeks has more than made up for it. There still are some pieces to be planted, but it is thought that by the end of the week all seeding will have been done. The outlook is good.

THE usual seasonable drop in trade is being experienced by most of the seed houses. Mail orders are not any easier to fill, but there are fewer of them. The jobbers are drawing breath and getting ready for the turnip seed season. Counter trade continues brisk but not up to the volume of a week ago. Everybody seems to be satisfied and expects to find good profitable margins when the season is summed up.

VEGETATION generally never looked better in the California seed-growing section. The March rains came at an opportune time. There may have been some small damage to some fields through cracks opening during the April quake, and mud being emitted, but nothing of any importance has been reported. In San Jose rebuilding of wrecked structures is being rapidly pushed and the people have adopted the slogan "Forget it! Get busy."

REPORTS generally from the onion set districts are that the stand is good, acreage about equal to last year. The growth in the fields at present is equal to what it was at June 1 last year, giving a two weeks' start in favor of this year. This will be an advantage, as the earlier a set crop can be matured, the better it is for the quality of the product. Rain is needed on the clay ground and the wire worm is working some damage on sandy land. The maggot is also getting in some work.

C. E. Kendel.

A BIT OF CLEVELAND HISTORY.

In 1839, John Stair, recently arrived from England, started a grocery store with a side line of seeds, locating in Superior street, Cleveland, O., near where the postoffice is temporarily situated. He took in his son, Benjamin H. Stair, and called the firm J. Stair & Son. In 1852 he moved into a new store at 115 Ontario street, where the business has been conducted uninterruptedly for fifty-four years.

In 1857 A. C. Kendel began work for John Stair as boy, to sweep and clean and incidentally learn the seed business. Upon the death of John Stair, his son, B. H., took Mr. Kendel into partnership, calling the firm B. H. Stair & Co. In 1875, Mr. Stair died and A. C. Kendel continued the business for himself and the widow of John Stair, changing the firm name to Stair & Kendel. Four years later, upon the death of Mrs. Stair, Mr. Kendel bought the Stair interests and called the firm A. C. Kendel.

In 1887 A. C. Kendel died and until his two sons, C. E. and W. F. A., who left school to enter the business, attained their majority, the business was conducted by Benjamin Wood, the book-keeper since 1866, who was appointed executor by the will of A. C. Kendel. The younger of the two sons became of age in 1893, when the business was turned over to them, a partnership being formed and the firm name, A. C. Kendel, continued.

Not long after the firm removed to Ontario street the grocery part of the business was dropped and the fruit commission business taken on, this branch following the spring seed business and continuing well into winter. The fruit commission business was continued until about five years ago and played an important part in the business life of Cleveland. The first California fruit ever shipped to Cleveland was handled by this firm, Bartlett pears at that time retailing at 25 cents each. Bananas were shipped by rail from Aspinwall and were sold at 15 cents each. Lemons brought $15 per box.

In 1885 a cold storage warehouse for the storage of apples, pears and grapes, with a capacity of 600 tons of ice, was added to the business and this still continues, enabling the firm to keep busy almost the year around.

Contrary to the usual custom with seed stores, this firm has felt that it could better serve the immediate neighborhood rather than extend its sphere and it has come now to be known as a headquarters for seeds, bulbs and bedding plants for Cleveland and nearby towns, and is considered by many to be the best located seed store for the retail business in the United States. It has a notable trade on lawn grass seed, selling by far the greater part of the seed that has made Cleveland's famous lawns. In 1897 it was fortunate in securing a new sweet corn from a retired gardener who had grown it for many years, which was named Kendel's Early Giant and has introduced the name of the firm wherever sweet corn is grown.

In 1903 C. E. Kendel was elected secretary of The American Seed Trade Association, is a member of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce and represents his firm in the Retail Merchants' Board of the Chamber. Mr. Kendel is now devoting his brief leisure to perfecting arrangements for the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Seed Trade Association at Toledo, June 26 to 28, which promises to be a most successful gathering.

THE Washington correspondents of the daily papers think there is a chance that the free seed distribution will be discontinued.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

Coming after exceptionally hot weather, 10 degrees of frost was registered in some parts during this week. Snow has fallen from Newcastle-on-Tyne to London in the south. I expect shortly to hear many reports of further and very considerable losses in seed crops, as the warm weather had caused growth to be exceptionally forward, and Essex, the principal seed-growing county of England, has suffered more than usual, there being quite eight inches of snow over the greater part yesterday.

The Dutch bulb fields have also suffered to some extent and reports to hand are that the crops are very moderate. This state of things will affect seedsmen's samples of bulbs probably more than forcing samples, as bulbs that have caught the frost are never so satisfactory to produce just the large, clean and even-shaped samples required for first-class bedding effects.

The Royal Horticultural Society has decided to hold a trial of cannas at Wisley this year, and the American growers are asked to contribute. Roots should be addressed to Superintendent R. H. S. Gardens, Wisley, Riply, Surrey.

SEEDSMEN BEFORE THE SENATE

On May 10, representatives of the leading seed firms assembled at the New Willard hotel, Washington, preliminary to a hearing before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, which was held on May 11. In behalf of the seedsmen, the following addressed the Senate Committee: Ex-Gov. Nathan J. Bachelder, of New Hampshire, Master of the National Grange; John Fottler, Jr., of Schlegel & Fottler Co., Boston; Burnett Landreth, Bristol, Pa., secretary, the Wholesale Seedsmen's League; William Henry Maule, of Philadelphia; W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia; Henry W. Wood, of Richmond, Va.; Patrick O'Mara, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, and H. B. Hathaway, a banker of Rochester, N. Y. Others who were present were Alex. Forbes, of Peter Henderson & Co.; C. M. Keeney, of Le Roy, N. Y.; Wm. P. Stokes, of Johnson & Stokes, Philadelphia; Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati; and F. W. Bolgiano, of Washington, D. C.

Senators Proctor, of Vermont; Perkins, of California; Dolliver, of Iowa; Money, of Mississippi; Frazier, of Tennessee; Hansbrough, of North Dakota; Burnham, of New Hampshire, and Simmons, of North Carolina, were present and questioned the seedsmen, showing considerable interest in the matter. They desired to know if the seedsmen objected to the distribution of really valuable seeds calculated to improve agriculture. In reply, the seedsmen said that they recognized the good work done by the Department of Agriculture in that direction but they did not think it right that the government should give away at random, peas, beans, lettuce and other common seeds which may be bought at any corner grocery.

W. Atlee Burpee read a letter from Secretary Wilson, in which the Secretary stated that he hoped Congress would do away with the free seed distribution and give him the money to use in securing and distributing really valuable seeds and plants which would be useful to the country.

It was shown to the committee that the agricultural and horticultural publications as well as the daily newspapers of the country, are, so far as known, unanimous in their opposition to free seeds. Many letters were submitted from editors, merchants and farmers, asking Congress to appropriate the money for some other and useful purpose.

Grange, adopted at Portland, Ore., denouncing the free distribution of seeds. He urged that the money which goes into the free seed distribution should be diverted to some purpose that will be for the advancement of agriculture. He stated that the National Grange has a membership of 800,000, with branch granges in thirty states. He said that as a body the farmers do not want the seeds—there may be scattering instances where farmers do want them, but a very great majority would prefer to have the money spent in other directions. Master of the Maryland Grange, explained that the reason the delegates to the National Grange were opposed to the free seed distribution was because they wanted the money expended in a more useful work.

John Fottler, Jr., took a whack at the recent adulteration "exposure" of the Department of Agriculture. He defended the seed trade against the charges of adulteration and submitted documents proving that nature is the greatest adulterator of all, producing in fields growing for seed, other inferior grasses, the seeds of which it is impossible for the farmer or seedsman to separate. He declared that no machinery ever has been invented that will separate these seeds so as to insure absolute purity. He related an instance of a seed dealer in Boston who was asked to supply a sample of four pounds of orchard grass seed, the only order for that kind of seed he received in the course of a year. He did not have it in stock and bought it from an outsider and filled the order. It developed later that the order was from an agent of the Department of Agriculture, and because the sample, the only one of the kind handled during the year, contained other seeds, he was branded as an adulterator of seeds by the Department of Agriculture.

William Henry Maule told of his purchase of a new variety of onion from a California grower. He spent thousands of dollars advertising this variety and putting it on the market. The Department of Agriculture purchased a lot of seed of ostensibly the same variety, and sent it out free. Later it developed that the Department had been deceived, its seed not being of the true variety. Two hundred and fifty thousand packages had been distributed and when the seeds came up developed the commonest kind of onions. As a result Mr. Maule's business in that variety of onion seed, for which he had purchased the exclusive right, was ruined. All he got from the Department of Agriculture was an apology.

Henry W. Wood told the committee that "some people will always ask for anything they can get for nothing." He related an instance of his firm, on the request of a New Orleans schoolgirl, sending a celluloid bookmark, worth 2 cents. As a result, they received from New Orleans alone 163 requests for that brand of bookmark. By this he illustrated the difference between requests for free seeds and a great demand for them.

Patrick O'Mara made the point that this government is the only one that gives away anything and the only thing this government gives away is seeds. He thinks the government has no more right to give away seeds than horses, cows or farming implements. He stated further that if the farmers are to be helped in their business, aid should be given to other trades and occupations. In Jersey City, where he resides, seeds are distributed through the political organizations. In his opinion the farmers do not want the seeds.

H. B. Hathaway told the senators how three firms of seedsmen in and about Rochester, N. Y., had been brought into financial difficulty by the competition of the government's free seed distribution. Holding the paper of these seedsmen, his bank had been compelled to go into the seed business. He told of a member of congress, also a banker, who dumped his quota of seeds on a table in the bank and invited all comers to help themselves. When the "distribution"

A CORNER IN PALM SEEDS.

At the annual meeting of the Nurserymen's Association of Victoria, the president announced that a singular development had taken place in connection with the kentia palm seed trade of Lord Howe Island. This island, although 600 miles distant from the mainland, had been gazetted as a reserve to the Sydney Botanical Gardens. The result was that a Mr. Farnell, a visiting magistrate, had leased the island for seven years, and had contracted with Messrs. Sanders & Sons for the export supply, and thus secured a corner in the kentia palm seed trade. All orders for this particular branch of trade would have to be executed through Mr. Farnell.

Lord Howe Island, although gazetted a reserve apart from its remote distance from the mainland, had been leased in sections by a number of persons for the cultivation of palm seeds. They did not make much headway until Mr. Farnell improved their position by securing for them double their former prices of the seed. Now Mr. Farnell had cancelled all these leases for some reason or other, not yet clear to his mind, and let a contract to Messrs. Sander & Sons for the whole of the seed raised on the island for export at £3 per bushel. Six years ago the price was six shillings per bushel.

The Australian International Nurseryman comments upon the subject as follows: Fresh matter has come to hand, and we learn that a contract has been arranged by Mr. Farnell, the visiting magistrate for Lord Howe Island, with Messrs. Sander & Sons, of Belgium, to the amount of £2,000 per annum as a minimum; this provides for a monopoly.

The New South Wales Nurserymen's Association is on the vim about this, but we believe the action comes too late. A deputation waited on Mr. Farnell, but we hear it was too late to make any effect. Mr. Farnell practically accepted the offer on behalf of the seed collectors, without consulting the Australian trade whatever. Lord Howe Island is a portion of Australia and the trade here should have been well informed on such a vital Australian matter.

It means now that all future palm seed for Australia must be purchased from Sander & Sons, Belgium, at more than double prices.

We would suggest that if the contract has only been made by the year that the matter be thrashed out at the next federal conference of nurserymen and seedsmen, to be held in Sydney in November, 1906, and that the ways and means be found to control this from Australia, and by the Australian trade. We would like all those affected to express their views to the whole trade through this medium; it is the only means of private trade publicity.

We put it down first that every true nurseryman and seedsman desires to assist his fellow tradesmen, and that truly at heart they do not desire to know state boundaries and trivial petty jealousies which have only been bred by imputation.

If trade action is now too late it can be remedied for the future. Lord Howe Island should be a real live asset to the Australian nursery and seed trade; it simply wanted a little capital and a large amount of vigorous Yankee publicity.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade the past week has been only fair. The forepart of the week it was very cold and it wound up by being extremely hot. These conditions no doubt had considerable to do with trade. Stock is plentiful. Roses are fine. Growers who, during the winter months, were cutting only small numbers, are now cutting about ten times as many. The market is glutted. Carnations are good and the price on them is maintained a great deal better than roses. Spring flowers are coming in large numbers. Peonies in red and pink retail well at $1 and $2 per dozen. We still have some indoor tulips and daffodils. Valley is in good demand.

Beeding plants are on the move. Pansies are just coming into bloom.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. had considerable work the past week for the funeral of J. A. Wheelock, the pioneer newspaper editor in the northwest. One of the most attractive pieces was an immense standing wreath made of Bridesmaids, lily of the valley and adiantum.

Orders for Decoration day have already started to come nicely and the prospects are for a good business.

E. F. Lemke says business has been very fair, the demand being mostly for funeral work. He is handling large quantities of potted plants and is improving his greenhouses, tearing down some old houses and putting up new ones.

Otto Hiersekorn is making quite a display of potted plants and says business is fair.

Minneapolis.

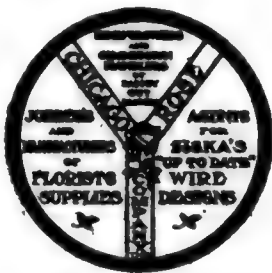

Carl Johansen, of the Powers Mercantile Co., says business has been very good, Saturday being an especially heavy day. He is selling a great many carnations at 50 cents and 60 cents a dozen, and is also handling a great many small potted plants. He reports a good seed trade and has been able to practically clean up his heavy stock of seeds and bulbs.

James Soudan, of the Donaldson Glass Block, says trade has been very good, and is somewhat surprised at the manner it has kept up.

Ralph Latham is doing a good business. Sam Atlee, formerly at the Donaldson Glass Block store, is now with him, and as they are both competent florists and control considerable patronage, they should do well.

Rice Bros. are handling considerable stock. Their shipping trade has grown to large proportions.

SOUTHERN FLORISTS—ATTENTION!

The New Orleans Horticultural Society has issued a call for a meeting May 22, at Chattanooga, Tenn., of all the florists of the south, for the purpose of organizing a society of southern florists. The railroads have granted reduced rates and the Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga has offered its hall under the Read hotel free for the use of the florists. The originators of the plan have received such a number of encouraging letters that they look forward to a very successful start. The object of the organization is to bring about a closer communication and personal acquaintance between the florists of the south, to hold annual conventions for this purpose, combined with trade exhibits and reading of papers on subjects of interest to the trade.

New Orleans will send a strong delegation, armed with a still stronger list of applications for membership. Invitation is hereby extended to all southern florists to attend the meeting at Chattanooga on May 22, and in case of inability to attend, send in your application to the undersigned, accompanied by $1. Let the charter roll be the signal for harmonious co-operation; let us get better acquainted with each other for the sake of mutual interests and horticulture in general.

C. W. EICHLING,
Acting Secretary.

3442 St. Charles avenue, New Orleans, La.

ERIE, PA.—The Schluraff Floral Co. has removed from 22 West Ninth street to 824 State street, where they have much improved facilities.

READING, PA.—Stephen Sousley has been in the business only one year, but has prospered, and this season will add to his glass.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—On May 9 Mrs. A. F. J. Baur underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Deaconess hospital. The operation was completely successful and Mrs. Baur is now convalescing.

PACIFIC COAST.

HARRISII IN CALIFORNIA.

The experiments in growing Lilium Harrisii in California have progressed far enough to show that the bulbs pass the winter safely in the open, and, even more important, that they hold their vitality during the dry summer without irrigation. It has also been demonstrated that bulbs can be produced economically from seed. The seed supplied to the experimenters by the Agricultural Department at Washington from the improved form resulting from Mr. Oliver's crossings germinated as freely and evenly as that of the commonest annual.

From what we have seen we believe it will not be many years before California will be in a position to supply all the bulbs of the "Easter lily" required by the American trade. And the fact that the growers are starting with seedlings from a selected strain and in virgin soil seems to preclude any possibility of disease getting into the stock.

The most disturbing factor in the situation is the California gopher. He is fond of the bulbs and has an insatiable appetite. But no doubt means will be found to keep him in check. Though fond of the lilies, the bulbs of the narcissus are not to his taste and he does not trouble them.

There seems to be absolutely no reason why all the bulbs of the narcissus family required by the American trade should not be produced in California. It is merely a question of growing the sorts most in demand in a sufficiently wholesale way. As the winter rains are generally over by May, and sometimes earlier, the bulbs ripen very early in the summer, which would make early delivery of well ripened bulbs possible.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Business Situation.

There is no change in the situation of the florists' business in San Francisco and vicinity, except that some of the wholesale dealers have been making extraordinary efforts to dispose of their wasting stock by shipping it to interior towns and in a few cases, by reducing the prices considerably, they have induced retail dealers in other cities to become regular customers. The retail dealers report everything at a standstill. Every one is waiting for something to be done—no one seems to have any ready cash. The savings banks are not yet ready for business and the insurance companies have paid no losses to date. This will probably be arranged in a few days and the public at least will have some spending money.

None of the dealers has put up any improvements in the burned district. Other lines of trade have erected temporary wooden buildings on the ashes of the destroyed ones and from appearances of the last few days, there will be a great quantity of frame structures dotted over the ruined area very shortly.

One difficulty that has kept the dealers from going ahead is the uncertainty of where the best retail district is to be situated. Fillmore street at the present time is the center of activity of the town, being just outside the burned district. Rents in this locality have advanced about 400 per cent and the flower sellers have not settled there as yet. Whether the trade will remain there for any length of time, or whether it will gradually edge down-town again, is not possible to say at this time. It is certain that if the large retail dealers in dry goods and other commodities rebuild even temporary quarters on their old sites, that business will follow them and the florists will get their share, but with the utter demoralization of everything in the retail business way, the public has absolutely no time to think of flowers, and nine-tenths of them will have no ready cash until the savings banks resume business, probably about the first of June.

A. L. FORTUNES 431 STATE STREET.
NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The relief work has been a stupendous undertaking and has been carried along in a wonderfully successful manner, but this does nothing to put money in circulation and only the commencement of payments by the insurance companies and the opening of the savings banks will put the public in the humor of buying flowers. The former will distribute probably over $100,000,000, and the banks have over five times that amount on deposit, so that there should be no shortage of funds in the near future.

San Francisco has lost probably 150,000 people. Many will come back to town as soon as there are accommodations, but on the other hand a majority of our wealthy residents have rented their houses for the summer and departed for the various country watering places.

Over in Oakland business has been at a standstill except for a fair amount of funeral work, all of which is very acceptable at this time. The town is overrun with peddlers selling carnations, roses and peas at ridiculous prices, but as a few cents is all that is necessary to purchase a big basket of stock, the sales, no matter at what price, are almost clear profit.

Both Oakland and San Francisco have always enjoyed a good Memorial day trade, both locally and for shipment, and I believe that there will be quantities of flowers handled again this season. This has been a very favorable spring for all kinds of outdoor stock and the prices will of course be very low.

I have heard within the last few days that some of the largest aster and chrysanthemum growers will abandon their fields until another season. This, together with a great many carnation and rose houses that already have been closed up, may lessen the output to such an extent that fair prices may prevail in the near future.

Various Notes.

F. C. Jaeger is not entirely out of business. He can be found at 19 Merritt avenue.

Rossi & Co. have had no cessation in their shipping business and are operating from 1940 Post street. They report that trade in the interior of the state is good at present.

Joseph Varsi has opened a floral establishment on Fifth street, in Portland.

Mrs. J. T. Murphy has opened a new floral depot in Goldfield, Nevada.

P. J. Meyer is rusticiating at Los Gatos.

PACIFIC COAST TOURS

A new booklet just issued under this title should be in the hands of every person who expects to make a trip west of the Rockies this year.

It outlines all the routes to the Coast, shows maps of each, contains a large map of the country from the Great Lakes to the Coast and has a great deal of valuable information about side trips, interesting sights, etc.

The booklet is finely printed and handsomely illustrated. Its use will save you the trouble of getting and combining the separate booklets of the many different roads reaching the Pacific.

Your request on a postal, mentioning the name of this paper, will bring a copy by return mail.

Thousands of pest eating bugs were destroyed in a room in the ferry building, where State Horticultural Commissioner Elwood Cooper kept a propagating plant for lady birds and other parasite destroyers. The walls of that portion of the building fell in, annihilating almost the entire sets of colonies. What the loss to the state may be cannot be estimated. Many of the bugs were of rare and valuable varieties. The state sends agents to various parts of the world in search of, and to collect insects that prey upon scale and other pests. It was this collection of bugs that was destroyed.

R. N. Critchlow, of Los Angeles, is in town.

An enterprising wholesale grower in the vicinity of San Francisco, who had formerly been in the dairy business, has purchased several cows with the intention of selling milk until there becomes a demand again for inside stock. He is keeping several houses in order for business that may come later in the season, and at the present time is feeding his entire crop of flowers to his cows. They are probably the best fed animals in America. He cuts about $25 worth of flowers every day and feeds these regularly to his four cows in addition to other fodder. How long the cows will enjoy these dainties is hard to say, but they seem to appreciate them highly. Can anyone beat this? G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

VISITED CHICAGO:—F. W. Mayer, of the Gulf Coast Nursery, Alvin, Tex.

WESTERN New York nurserymen report generally a better clean-up than in any recent season.

THE imports of trees and plants at the port of New York last week had an invoice value of $13,401.

J. M. HALL, employed in the McCart & Anderson Nursery, Fort Worth, Tex., dropped dead while at work May 10.

THE Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., has opened a down-town office, in the Mercantile block, corner Fox and Broadway.

THE growers of apple seedlings, though some of them complain of low prices, are nevertheless again increasing the production.

If you have a couple of cars of plum trees you didn't need for spring orders, you are no exception to the rule among wholesale nurserymen.

ST. XAVIER'S ACADEMY, Fiftieth street and Evans avenue, Chicago, has acquired the city block on which its buildings face and will create a park.

THE Boston Peony Exhibition will be held about June 15. The date is not definitely decided upon by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, but will be announced soon.

THE season's business with the nurserymen at Albert Lea, Minn., will foot up $40,000, and the editor of the local paper congratulates the town that most of the money stays in town, the principal expense being the payroll.

CONVENTIONS usually swing like a pendulum, from one side to the other. With this year's meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen in the south, there is already a strong movement on foot to take it to the Charlevoix district in Michigan next year.

POSSIBLY no state nursery law is more arbitrary, discriminating or interpreted in a way to exasperate outside nurserymen than is the law of Oklahoma territory, where trade is booming. A local judge at Guthrie has now declared the Oklahoma law unconstitutional and conditions are in a fair way to be remedied.

THE West Michigan Nurseries, Benton Harbor, Mich., say: "We advocate strongly the cutting back of nursery stock very severely at the time it is planted out in the orchards. Our directions to our customers are to cut the entire tip of tree out, so as to leave but about three or four branches, and that these branches that are left should be cut back to within one or two buds of the trunk of the tree. We do not advocate the severe root pruning any more than to cut out any bruised roots that may be found on the tree."

W. A. PETERSON, Chicago, reports his safe arrival at Plymouth, England, on the Amerika. He goes first to France to see the peonies in bloom, and will spend four months in Europe.

WILLIAM J. CLARK, of the Grand Rapids Nursery Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., says the orders from Oceana this season have exceeded in number those of any other county in the state. This is largely due to the number of Chicago people who are buying land and embarking in fruit growing as a means of livelihood to escape from the confinement of the city. Oceana county is peculiarly adapted to peaches and already the orchards of some of the best growers in the state are located there. The county is just in process of development and the orchards, all new, are free from disease. Ottawa county, along the lake shore, is just embarking in fruit growing and large deliveries of trees are made from Holland.

ALBERTSON'S ACTIVITIES.

E. Albertson, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, spent Saturday in Chicago, appearing before the Central Passenger Association in an endeavor to get a rate for next month's convention at Dallas, and stirring up interest to get a good local delegation.

Mr. Albertson is one of those rapid-fire presidents, like the one at Washington, whose activities are bewildering to less alert minds; he gets it done while the other fellow is thinking about it. A case in point was his successful prosecution of the work on freight classification. When he and the transportation committee had just begun to get busy they were told that the association was without funds to carry on the work. Mr. Albertson had been so intent on the result that he had overlooked the means; but he thought he knew where to get the wherewithal. He sent out a circular stating the urgency of the case and got all the money he needed. One of the estimable gentlemen of the think-it-over school wrote: "Of course you referred your circular to the executive committee for approval?" "No, I referred it to the trade and have $800 of O. K. on it," replied Mr. Albertson, and a few weeks later the transportation committee was able to announce changes in classification which will save the trade $50,000 a year in freight charges.

One of Mr. Albertson's recommendations to the association at Dallas will be that a salaried office be created, to be filled by an all-around, thoroughly posted nurseryman, whose duty it shall be to watch the trade's many interests with railroads, state legislatures, congress, etc., giving it time the committeemen cannot afford from their own business. The changes in freight classification, which cost the trade $150,000 during the three years they were in force, were six months pending before classification committees before they were adopted; nobody protested because nobody knew what was proposed.

If the Dallas meeting is the "best ever," Mr. Albertson will retire from office with content. Prospects are good. A rate of $20 round-trip from St. Louis has now been granted. A car from Rochester is assured. It will be a special train from some point of consolidation in Missouri.

The membership is growing. The president thinks it should be 1,000. Membership fees are about the only source of revenue. The badge book will be closed up about May 22. Mr. Albertson urges that names be sent Secretary Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, at once.

The picnic of the club will be held July 19. The place has not yet been decided upon, but it will probably be at the Watch Tower. Emil Boehm, Wm. Knees and Henry Gaethje are the committee in charge.

June 7, the association will meet at the home of William Knees, in Moline. A celebration will be held at the time and a ceremony of laying a corner stone for a new range of greenhouses, which Mr. Knees will build, will be gone through with.

A special meeting will be held in the latter part of June at the Davenport nursery on east Locust street. H. G. Bryant and Theodore Ewoldt will entertain the association at this meeting, which will be in the form of a strawberry social.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Outdoor stock is growing nicely, but the damp, disagreeable weather is producing a large crop of cut worms, which are doing their best to eat up all manner of plant life. Our carnations in the field are not being bothered as yet, which I attribute to not using any stable manure. My plan was to scatter equal parts of lime and wood ashes over my ground. Where manure was used the worms are eating everything, and where my lime and ashes were scattered the worms have not as yet made their appearance. Even the greenhouses are full of worms, keeping us up nights picking them off. Mums are not yet planted, but are looking fine and will be soon ready for the benches.

The inclement weather is keeping people indoors, or in storm caves, and planting out is postponed. Trade has dropped off considerably for that reason, and only a cessation of rain will revive it. Business, people tell me who have been here for years, has increased over forty per cent this year. Prices are as good as they have been since Easter, with the demand equal to the supply. Roses outdoors are in full bloom and are bringing good prices. Stocks are the standard flower for funeral work. Sweet peas are in bloom, also peonies, which will soon be gone. Landscape work is over, the hot weather forcing everything into growth.

NARCISSUS.

MUNCIE, IND.

Mrs. Miller will remodel the old Kendall place, also put up additional glass. The Muncie Floral Co. had the decoration at the Auditorium for Nordica.

The prizes offered by the Civic Art Association and the Muncie Floral Co. are creating a great demand for plants, principally for veranda boxes. The $60 for the best veranda boxes offered by the Floral company has been a good advertising scheme.

The cut flower trade is in a demoralized condition. The wholesalers are unloading carnations and roses to the department stores, which sell them at 25 cents a dozen.

S. H.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW of vast importance to the trade and a credit to its publishers.—J. W. HANFORD, Salisbury, N. C.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business picked up considerably toward the end of last week, and by Saturday stock was pretty well cleaned up. Bulbous stock is about all gone. Carnations are seemingly off crop, with all growers in this vicinity. Poor stock is bringing from $2 to $3, the retailer being glad to get them at any fair price. This state of affairs has tended to clean up roses, although they were quite plentiful. Brides and Maids are selling at from $4 to $7 for good stock. Valley, sweet peas, daisies, etc., are also good and moving readily. Green is not overplentiful.

Various Notes.

Taepkes' new range is rapidly nearing completion.

The medical college commencement exercises kept a number of the florists exceedingly busy Friday. H. S.

ELBERON, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held May 7, President W. D. Robertson in the chair. Two members were elected and four proposed. W. H. Waite tendered his resignation as secretary of the society, owing to his leaving the district. He was awarded a hearty vote of thanks for the manner in which he had carried out his duties. George Masson was then elected secretary.

Some choice exhibits were staged. It was decided to have a rose and strawberry display at the next meeting, in June, for which prizes have already been donated. A committee was appointed for the purpose of planting the flower beds in the grounds of the public school. G. M.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Hartford Florists' Club will join the Connecticut Horticultural Society in a body.

ASHTABULA, O.—The Griswold Greenhouse Co. has incorporated to do business here. The authorized capital stock is $50,000; the incorporators, Jos. H. Rice, Carlos M. Stone, Watson H. Butler, M. Sanford Rice and E. Sullivan.

RED DEER, ALBERTA.

E. Michener, B. Trimble and J. Slade, doing business as the Red Deer Nursery Co., have enlarged their establishment and gone into nursery work as well. They have ninety acres of fine land, lying high and dry, and, although fruits have never been grown here, they are putting in a range of fruits to test them and also as an experiment to find out what will grow in this district. They are setting out two acres of strawberries, two of raspberries and two of currants and gooseberries, and also apples and plums. A large trial ground for vegetables, seeds and perennials will be established.

MILWAUKEE.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club will give a grand May party Saturday evening, May 19, at Severance hall, 421 Milwaukee street. Messrs. Currie, Hunkel and Zimmerman, of the entertainment committee, promise a good time. Everybody is requested to bring all the Queens along, as the customary crown will be bestowed on the handsomest and most graceful lady in the hall. Able judges have been secured. INCOG.

CHESTER, PA.—On the night of May 6 thieves broke into C. P. Miller's greenhouses and took the cash from the drawer in the office.

MARTINSVILLE, IND.—Last season Nixon H. Gano had such good results with a couple of benches of carnations planted from pots that he is now busy filling his entire space for carnations with thrifty young stock from pots.

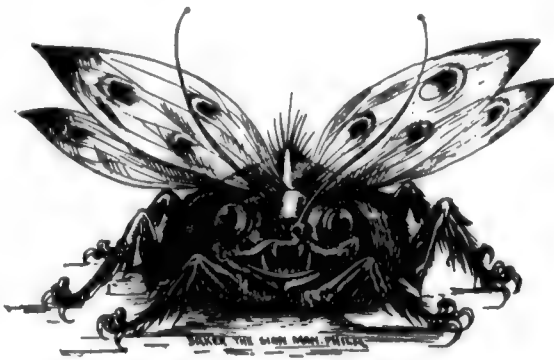

ALVIN, TEX.—C. W. Benson says he is confident that the crop of cape jasmine buds for Memorial day will be a quarter of a million short of the quantity available for the demand in 1905. Other shippers hold a contrary view.

FERTILIZERS.

A sample 100-lb. bag of Haslam's Oyster Shell Lime Fertilizer, rich in potash, ammonia and phosphoric acid, for $1.00. It is composed of oyster and clam shell, bone, meat, fish and wood. It contains qualities that the user receives just as good results from, and sometimes better, than a fertilizer that he pays $30.00 per ton for. It will put new life in your soil. It is fine, like flour, no waste, and odorless. Just the thing for the lawn, garden, plants and shrubbery, and, in fact, any soil you put it on will give you good results. For the land's sake, use Oyster Shell Lime Fertilizer. Don't starve your soil. Try it, and you will smile at the results. Special prices for five or more sacks.

INSECTICIDES.

Haslam's Insect Powder, an infallible insecticide. Destroys insects injurious to house and garden plants, shrubs, trees, vines, potatoes, melons, cabbage, currants and vegetables, and fruits of all kinds.

This preparation, though poisonous to insects, does not injure the foliage. It is used either by dusting or in water by spraying. Also destroys lice on fowls, cattle and dogs. Kills green fly on roses and other flowers, insects on quinces and pears. Insects that fly like flea beetles and rose bugs are more difficult to contend against than are caterpillars or slugs. Look often and dust or sprinkle when necessary.
Put up in 1-lb. boxes at 25c; 5 boxes for $1.00. Special prices in bulk.
Haslam Chemical Co., 118 Cliff St., Scranton, Pa.

Haslam's Lime Flour. For disinfecting, also for mixing with Paris green for dusting squab lofts and poultry houses. Sprinkle it freely about stables, kennels, cow sheds, pig sties, poultry houses, rabbit hutches, farm-yards, market places, factories, urinals, ash bins, etc. For disinfecting walls, ceilings, cattle trucks, and slaughter-houses, make the powder into a wash or milk by admixture with water and apply it in that form.

This is the purest and has the most strength of any lime made. Sure death to vermin and insects and superior to chloride of lime. No odor. Put up in bulk at 10c per lb.

The Market.

One week has changed conditions in the wholesale houses. Lilies, which were a glut, have almost disappeared; carnations are short of the demand; smilax is very scarce; however, roses more than make up the shortage in other stock, as they are coming in quantities that have been appalling. Business was only ordinary up to Saturday, when demand took a spurt and everyone was cleaned out by night. Some local lilac came in last week, but was not very good. Violets are finished for the season.

Retailers were jogging along in a leisurely way; no excitement of any kind, and report trade about the same as last year at this time, although they have good orders booked for weddings.

Various Notes.

Growers have been busy planting out carnations. Most of them have completed the task and are praying for rain, as the continued high wind and several hot days have made things look quite dry in the carnation fields. Planting was a little later than last season, but many of them were caught in the freeze last year and arranged to miss it this season.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Elliott, who have been at Los Angeles for more than a year, returned last Friday. Ben does not know whether it is for a visit or permanent. If he gets into something good he will remain here.

Henry Ludwig returned Monday from a trip to Canada, where he has been arranging for camping grounds for the club of which he is a member.

Hoo-Hoo.

William R. Watson, aged 38, formerly a florist in this city, died May 8 at El Paso, Tex., where he had been spending the winter. Death was due to pulmonary trouble, with which Mr. Watson had been afflicted for several years. Mr. Watson was born in the Squirrel Hill district of this city and several years ago was engaged in the florist business on Smithfield street. Owing to failing health he spent most of his time at different resorts and watering places. The body was brought home for burial.

MADISON, N. J.

An unusually large number of the Morris Co. Gardeners' and Florists' Society assembled in their meeting rooms in Madison on May 11 to listen to a paper on hardy shrubs, by Arthur Herrington, superintendent of Florham parks. Like all of Mr. Herrington's works, it was of high order, and was well received by the society. As is the custom, considerable time was given to after-discussion. Many questions regarding selection of sorts, hardiness of new kinds, etc., were asked by the members and cheerfully answered by the speaker. A very striking feature was the large number of Japanese species and hybrids to be seen, this being the occasion of the regular monthly show, which was hardy shrubs in flower this time. The room was literally filled. Mr. Herrington, alone, put up thirty-six species and varieties, which was a remarkable thing for this time of year. E. R.

OWATONNA, MINN.—The Clinton Falls Nursery Co. is pushing the erection of its new houses to have them ready for early planting.

DAVENPORT, IA.—On the afternoon of May 7 Otto Klingbiel left his home to go to the establishment of H. Meyer, at Rock Island, where he is employed. An hour or so later he was found wandering in a dazed condition and soon became unconscious. When he recovered at St. Luke's hospital he was unable to recall how he received a severe cut on the side of his face.

EL PASO, ILL.—The El Paso Carnation Co. has broken ground for a range of glass consisting of one house 20x100 and three houses each 30x100, to be heated by steam. The plant will be up to date in every particular and roses, carnations and lettuce will be grown. C. L. W. Snyder is manager. It is proposed to erect additional glass next season. This is the concern which first planned to locate at Eureka, Ill., where Mr. Snyder had one house 20x100, which is to be removed here.

U-BAR GREENHOUSES

ABOUT GREENHOUSES

and The Way Iron Rusts.

Put a piece of steel in the ground and it rusts faster than wrought iron. Put a wrought iron pipe as a support or post, and it eats itself away at the ground line. Now try a cast-iron foot piece and it simply scales over and there it stays—no more rust—good for a century. That's just the reason we use cast-iron foot pieces at a greater cost to us than wrought iron.

Gradually you'll see the high water marks of everything that goes into our houses. The hard headed sense, the experience upon which all our reasons are founded.
